Henderson Cites Gains In Defense Of Policies

Declares Fuel Oil Rationing System Is Most Equitable Under Circumstances

And Defense

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday took cognizance of congressional attacks and vigorously defended both his fuel oil rationing program and his general price control effort.

At a packed press conference, Henderson said that the present admittedly complicated method of calculating an individual householder's fuel oil ration was adopted reluctantly as the most equitable method available to prevent inadequate distribution of fuel supplies.

Henderson was in effect replying to a report of the Truman Committee of the Senate, which pointed out in a report that OPA had ignored the relatively simple procedure of cutting allowances on a percentage basis. Disclaiming any intention of attacking the Truman Committee, the Price Administrator stated that not even "rough justice" would have justified the flat percentage cut approach.

Survey Cited

Citing a survey of 1000 homes made by OPA prior to the institution of rationing, Henderson declared that only half of seven million fuel-oil consumers in 30 rationed States would have received their fair share of oil under the flat percentage cut, but that 20 per cent would receive more than their share, and 30 per cent would receive less.

The present fuel-oil formula which takes into account the area to be heated was designed to effect an over-all cut to 66.7 per cent of normal.

Henderson went on to explain that his operations are on a "wholesale" basis, touching people by the millions—27 million car owners, 30 million persons living in oil heated homes, etc.

"But on last December 7, the price level was at 94," Henderson said. "Today it stands at 100. Wholesale prices have only increased 2 points in the year. Part of the increase was due to congressional policy with respect to farm commodities."

"For my money, I would rather be remembered by that record than by the people who love me," he added.

Asked what would have hap-

His Brusk Attitude Peeves Congress, Henderson Says

"What do you do that makes Congress so mad at you?" Price Administrator Leon Henderson was asked bluntly at his press conference yesterday.

Henderson laughed with the reporters present, and then replied:

"Some part of it no doubt is my lack of politeness. They say that one never gets so busy that one can afford not to be polite. But Shakespeare divided people according to boiling points.

"As for me, I have a low boiling point and have had more than the usual share of flame applied."

WPB's Findings

Home Life Doesn't Lure Newlyweds

Most newlyweds don't expect to set up house for quite awhile, the War Production Board has discovered.

A survey of the wartime tastes of 120 couples—applicants for marriage licenses at the District Marriage License Bureau, showed that about 38 of them, or 32 per cent, definitely plan to rent unfurnished apartments or houses within the first year of marriage, with 28 planning to go into unfurnished quarters immediately, it was learned yesterday.

Only 27 of the homes will have to be newly equipped, however, because a number of couples indicated that they already possessed furnishings.

The unusual interviews were conducted by the War Production Board Office of Civilian Supply to obtain information incidental to regulating the production of household items during the coming year.

"If the 120 couples interviewed were a fair sample," the WPB report said, "the people who get married these days are very different from those who usually give matrimony a try. A little less than half of the men were already in the armed forces and another third indicated that they were

Bureaus Battle Over Rail Pay Jurisdiction

WLB Claims Right To Review Decisions Of Mediation Board

Pressing of demands by 1,250,000 railroad workers for substantial wage increases has precipitated a bitter fight between the Railroad Mediation Board and the War Labor Board, it was learned yesterday.

Since the dispute involves the operation of the President's anti-inflation program, officials believe that the matter may have to be referred to Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes or the President, himself, for a final answer. Meanwhile, the two groups have held joint discussions in an effort to arrive at a workable compromise.

WLB has contended that all wage determinations must be reviewable by it to provide for uniform treatment of all workers under the President's October 3 anti-inflation order. At the same time, some WLB officials believe, the Mediation Board "has not gone to war," and that it must speed up its machinery if it is to handle wartime disputes.

The Mediation Board, still smarting because WLB intervened in the dispute involving the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad early this year, has contended that it has

British Rail Men Get $1-a-Week Increase

London, Dec. 11 (F).—British railway men were awarded wage increases equaling $1 a week tonight under a national tribunal settlement affecting about 430,000 workers and retroactive to June 24.

Women were awarded the equivalent of 75 cents, youths 50 cents and girls 35 cents weekly.

The new increase brings British railway men's total weekly war raises to $3.10. The average weekly wage is $18.80 but, the unions pointed out during months of proceedings, more than 250,000 are getting only about $13 a week.

The unions asked $2 and the railways offered 80 cents in weekly increases.

Roosevelt Asks Federal Pay Increase

Present Inequitable Scales Hamper War Effort, He Says in Letter to Congress

By Robert W. Harvey
Post Staff Writer

An appeal from President Roosevelt for immediate congressional action to correct "grossly unfair" Federal pay practices yesterday stirred new hope for the passage this session of legislation to give wage increases or overtime pay to all U. S. workers.

Efforts to enact a pay-adjusting bill, which had been virtually abandoned by the Senate during the past week, are expected to come to a head on Monday when the Senate Civil Service Committee will try once more to agree on a measure to put all Federal employes on an equitable pay basis. With congressional leaders agreed on a plan to adjourn next week, this probably will be the committee's last chance to act.

A Move to Clarify the Record

The President's appeal was made in a letter to the Vice President and to the Speaker of the House, charging that inequitable pay rates now in effect are actually "impeding the successful prosecution of the war effort." He asked Congress to act within the next few days to correct the situation or else give him power to deal with the problem himself.

"It is my judgment," he added, "that any further temporary extension of this authorization to pay overtime to limited groups of employes is only perpetuating a bad situation and should be avoided."

Though the President told his press conference that the letter was not an attempt to push legislation through Congress this session, but merely a move to make the record clear on the Administration's efforts to adjust the Federal pay scales, his communication promptly stirred a sharp debate in the Senate.

Democratic Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky asserted that he thought it frankly impossible to pass S. 2668—the bill which would guarantee overtime or a 10 per cent increase to all United States workers—before Congress adjourns. He advocated instead that laws which give overtime compensation to some 60 per cent of the employes, mostly War and Navy field employes, be extended into the next congressional session.

Such a continuing resolution was introduced during the session by Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia and will be discussed at Monday's Civil Service Committee meeting.

In opposition to the policy urged by Byrd and Barkley, however,

77th Congress Is Reported Set To Adjourn Dec. 17

Democrattic and Republican leaders were reported authoritatively yesterday to have agreed informally to adjourn the Seventy-seventh Congress finally on December 17.

The decision, reached after extended conferences, was expected to preclude the passage in this session of any further controversial legislation, including an overtime pay bill for Government employes, a bill enlarging the RFC's borrowing power by five billion dollars and a measure boosting agricultural parity price levels to include farm labor costs.

Also likely to be killed was an administration measure, which has been subjected to a one-man filibuster by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, which would authorize the Treasury to sell unpledged silver in its vaults for industrial war uses.

Trusted Party Leaders Given Key Defense Posts in Shakeup

By Ernest Agnew
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 11.—Adolf Hitler carried the policy of Nazi party domination over Germany a stride forward today following the shakeup of the high command which has made Gestapo-trained Gen. Kurt Zietzler the chief of the general staff.

A decree broadcast from Berlin by D. N. B. said Gaulieters, heretofore simply district party leaders, henceforth would have the authority of district defense commissioners. As such they are responsible to no one except Hitler and Heinrich Himmler, chief of the Gestapo.

London sources drew these conclusions from the decree, the shakeup in the high command and related moves:

1. Hitler is giving more and more power to those he can trust as a possible preventive against an internal uprising and a repetition of the 1918 collapse.
2. The Fuehrer is committing himself more and more to a defensive policy.
3. He is throwing down another challenge to the German Junkers.

Another Command Shakeup

The Daily Mail also reported another change in the German high command coincident with the shakeup which made Zeitzler, a fervent Nazi but little known soldier, chief of the army general staff; Admiral Fricke, another man without an advance build-up, chief of Admiral Erich Raeder's navy general staff, and Col. Gen. Hans Jeschonnek, who had escaped the general notice of London observers, as chief of the air force general staff.

The Daily Mail said Maj Gen. Adolf Galland, 30, Germany's leading ace and youngest general, had been appointed inspector general of German fighter plane forces.

In connection with the Gauleiter decree, observers pointed out that Hitler's policy of "party first" was being injected into the heart of German militarism whose leaders remember that Hitler was only a corporal in the last war.

During the past three months all important executive posts in the Reich have been taken over by trusted men of the party inner ring, many of them close to Himmler, it was pointed out.

Million Yanks Now Overseas, President Says

Roosevelt Asserts Axis Powers Have Lost the Initiative

President Roosevelt informed Congress yesterday that by the end of this month American forces overseas will number more than one million men.

The President, in the seventh quarterly report on lend-lease operations, said in a letter of transmittal that the Axis powers "have, temporarily at least, lost the initiative," and added:

"We must do all we can to keep them from regaining it."

Lend-lease aid in the last three months up to December 11, totaled $2,367,000,000, he reported. This was more than a third higher than the figure for the previous quarter and four times the total for the three months immediately preceding United States entry into the war.

The President said that since the last report the war had entered a new phase with United Nations forces attacking from Egypt and North Africa and contesting with the Axis "for control of the Afri-

Marine Goes Into Hiding With 16 Japs

A United States Marine corporal from Brooklyn, N. Y., spent some terrible hours hiding under a house in the Solomons with 16 Japanese riflemen, the Navy reported yesterday, before he finally got away to direct an attack on the enemy party by Marine machine-gunners.

The corporal was Robert B. Pape. He became separated from his comrades when Japanese attacked his invading party on Tulagi Island last August 8.

He ducked under a house to hide. Then Marine machine-gunners opened up on the Japs and 16 of them crawled in with Pape. Fortunately it was before dawn and they did not recognize him as an American. He didn't move except when the Japs moved and when their wounded groaned he would groan, too.

As the dawn brightened, Pape began inching his way from under the house, hoping desperately for a chance of escape.

A Jap officer recognized him and shooting started. Pape was struck in the leg.

Reds Destroy 60 More Axis Troop Planes

Soviet Army Takes Strategic Heights Near Velikie Luki

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Saturday), Dec. 12.—The Russians have destroyed 60 more big Axis transport planes in the Stalingrad area, making a total of 133 in four days, and the Red Army has "occupied heights of considerable tactical importance" in the area of Velikie Luki on the frozen central front, the Soviets announced early today.

The midnight communique said the Russians destroyed 36 Nazi tanks and killed more than 1000 Germans during yesterday's operations, which were marked with repeated German counterattacks on both fronts and Russian consolidation of positions wrested from the enemy.

Aside from the "violent engagements" near Velikie Luki which resulted in the capture of important hilltops, the Russian bulletin did not mention any changes in the general situation.

War of Attrition

Fighting a steady war of attrition amid snowstorms after the early momentum of their twin offensives had slackened, the Russians appeared still to be trying to encircle the two German strongholds of Velikie Luki and Rzhev on the central front northwest of Moscow. Segments of the railroad highway between the two points were reported to have been recaptured by the Russians weeks ago.

But the Germans still were counterattacking in most sectors. The

Desperate Venture

By William Wade
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Dec. 11.—Glider-borne Nazi troops were rushed into action to combat Anglo-American parachutists along the southern sector of the Tunisian front today after Allied forces beat back a two-pronged enemy attack southwest of Tunis.

Patrols of American, British and French troops meantime carried out a successful series of thrusts and jabs which helped keep the enemy off balance pending launching of an imminently expected major Allied assault.

In the wake of these actions a number of Axis deserters crossed into the Allied lines and, to examining officers, declared that the enemy now is running short of food, a pinch which apparently was becoming more serious since the heavy blows dealt Axis supply ships in the Mediterranean last week.

A communique issued at Allied headquarters revealed that an infantry-supported assault launched by two columns of enemy tanks in the direction of Medjez-El-Bab yesterday afternoon was beaten back by counterattacking Allied troops. Fierce fighting raged through the area, some 30 miles southwest of Tunis, before the twin prongs of steel were thrown into reverse.

Enemy Tanks Blasted

One long enemy column bore down from the north along the west bank of the Medjerda River, the communique said, until it reached a point selected by the Allies for their counterattack. In the all-out battle which followed, "a number" of enemy tanks were destroyed.

In an attempt to execute a pincers movement, a second enemy column meanwhile approached from the east to within 2000 yards of Medjez-El-Bab but hurriedly withdrew when Allied artillery, supported by fighter planes, subjected the tanks and infantrymen to a withering barrage. "Several" enemy tanks were lost in this action, the Allied communique announced.

The official bulletin revealed that French forces, including infantry and artillery, also participated in this action.

"We lost a few tanks but the enemy losses were considerably higher," the announcement concluded.

Indications that Allied paratroopers, who earlier this week were reported seeking to slash enemy communications and strategic

Bear Slays Tiger Who Killed Keeper At Beatty Zoo

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Dec. 11 (U.P.).—A full-grown tiger sprang from its pen at the Clyde Beatty Zoo here today during the feeding period and clawed to death a 25-year-old attendant before it, in turn, was killed by a bear.

The victim was Wallace Ayers, assistant keeper at the zoo. Albert Fleet, keeper in charge, came to his rescue and beat the animal off with a hoe. The tiger then jumped into a nearby pen with a bear and was instantly killed.

Ayers, badly clawed around the head and shoulders, died at a hospital.

Christmas Gift Appeal Issued As War Fund Drives for Goal

The best Christmas gift you can provide for the man in uniform—or his family, his comrades in arms, or the host of civilian workers who are providing him with the implements of war—is a contribution to the Community War Fund, leaders of the drive declared yesterday.

Meeting to discuss ways and means of making up the 6 per cent deficit now existing in the District's quota of $4,056,384, campaign officials joined in an appeal to all who have not contributed, and others who may be able to increase their original donations, to put the Community War Fund on their Christmas gift lists.

"It is inconceivable," declared Floyd D. Akers, drive chairman, "that we should say to the boy in uniform that we are deducting 6 per cent from the great chain of cheer and recreation provided through the USO and other local war hospitality services for men in the armed forces everywhere."

Meantime, there were reports of renewed efforts by group volunteers to meet their quotas, of impending rechecks by the larger commercial donors to see if their gifts can be increased, of a determination of all volunteer workers associated with the drive to help in any way possible to make up the deficit.

Needed to reach the quota is $271,537—and campaign officials estimate there are at least 75,000 persons here able and willing to give who have not yet been contacted.

The current "Christmas gift" appeal is directed particularly to persons in this group. They may mail or bring their gifts directly to campaign headquarters at 1101 M Street Northwest, phone ME. 2284 and request that a pledge card be mailed to them, or fill out the coupon printed below and mail it to the M Street address.

3 Named to Fix Uniform Policy On U. S. Employe Deferment

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed a three-man committee headed by Paul Bellamy, Cleveland newspaper editor, to formulate a "uniform Nation-wide policy" to govern requests for occupational deferments for Federal employes.

Other members of the committee, which will serve only for about a month, are Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and Ordway Tead, member of the New York City Board of Higher Education.

The President said the purpose of the committee was to assure establishment of sound policies and adequate machinery for quickly applying such policies to individual cases.

Occupational deferments should be permitted only in bona fide cases of essential employment, he said, where effective replacement is impossible and where persons so deferred have been "impartially determined to be most needed in their civilian activity."

Such a policy, the President said, might serve as a guide for application to non-Government employes. The committee will be a supplemental body to the War Manpower Commission.

Selective Service headquarters said yesterday that 56 types of jobs in production of materials for packing and shipping products had been designated as essential.

Notice to that effect was sent draft boards for guidance in deciding occupational deferment questions.

At the same time, the boards were notified that this field of production, already listed as an essential activity, included textile bags, vegetable and fruit baskets, cooperage, wooden boxes, excelsior, pulp and paper, paper bags, paperboard containers and boxes, glass

Roosevelt Advances 75 Officers To Major General, Brigadier

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed 75 high-ranking Army officers, some of them holding prominent posts on the fighting fronts, to be major generals or brigadier generals. The nominations were quickly confirmed by the Senate.

Two members of Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's staff, commanding Allied forces in North Africa, were on the promotion list. They are Brig. Gen. Walter B. Smith, Eisenhower's chief of staff, named a major general, and Col. Thomas Jefferson Davis, adjutant general of Eisenhower's forces, promoted to brigadier general.

The President also nominated Captains Jack H. Duncan and Francis E. M. Whiting to be rear admirals in the Navy, and Col. James T. Moore, of the Marines, to be a brigadier general.

Duncan is the American naval attache to Russia, while Whiting holds a command at sea. Moore, a flier, is now on duty at Marine Corps Headquarters here.

Eight officers from the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia were named for advancement. Among them were Col. Elwood R. Quesada, former Tech High School quarterback, appointed a brigadier general of the Army Air Force.

Quesada, 38, becomes one of the youngest of the Army's generals. He was one of the "Question Mark" fliers, who conducted early experiments in the refueling of planes while in flight.

Another promoted was Brig. Gen. William R. Schmidt, former assistant commandant of the 81st Division at Camp Rucker, Ala., who has been assigned to command the 76th Division at Fort George G. Meade, Md., it was announced yesterday at the post.

Troglodytes Dwell Near Battlefront

Behind the guns and pill boxes of Tunisia's "Little Maginot Line" near the Lybian border, is the rolling and rock-strewn land of Matmata. Pock-marked and pitted with huge gopher-like holes, this area presents one of the strangest sights in war-struck Tunisia.

From the surface, the land appears as an almost uninhabited wasteland of hills and hollows. From above it looks like the craters of the moon or the great yawning holes made by misdirected bombs.

Actually, says the National Geographic Society, these holes are the front yards, or the patios, of the Troglodytes—the desert cave dwellers.

In early times when Arab raiders rode through the desert, the Troglodytes, seeking safety pockets for themselves and their few worldly possessions, burrowed deep into the earth. First, large wellways were dug; then deep-set rooms were gouged out of the sidewalls of these wellways. Such sunken dwellings were ample protection against the primitive weapons of the invaders. Later, when the danger of enemy attack had faded, the Troglodytes found these makeshift "holes" cool and comfortable retreats from the hot sun and winds of the desert and took them for their permanent homes.

At Mendenine, within the same area, but closer to Gabes and the coast, are the strange hump-backed "ghorfas," the homes of another group of Troglodytes. These are not below the ground, but well above. Some are low and stand like well-rounded loaves of bread baking in the sun. Others, piled one loaf upon another for six or more "loaves," are the skyscrapers of the desert. The gradual crumbling of the adobe-like structures has caused the tenants of the upper floors to descend via their crude steps that jut out from the walls and take up residence in the safer lower floors. The upper floors are sometimes used for storing grain.

Not wishing to build up or burrow under as his northern neighbor had done, the Troglodyte of Douirat (south of Mendenine) merely found a suitable cliff and chiseled in. Small holes riddled into the faces of almost every cliff lead to the inner rooms, and narrow rick-racking trails link these strange dwellings with the desert floor.

British at Teheran

Teheran, Iran, Dec. 10 (Delayed), (AP).—A battalion of British troops arrived here Wednesday night to protect oil pipe lines and British property.

Arrival of the troops and appointment of an Iranian military government contributed to rapid calming of the population following riots and looting Wednesday.

(Under a military agreement when Allied troops entered Iran in 1941, British and Russian forces camped outside Teheran, the capital. Observers in London expressed the belief Friday that entry of the British force into the city was a temporary measure.)

British Units Report Foe Grows Jumpy Along Agheila Line

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Dec. 11.—British "Swan Patrols," feeling out the strength of Marshal Erwin Rommel's powerful fortifications at El Agheila in Libya, have come back with the diagnosis that a "state of nervousness" exists among the Axis troops there.

This state of nerves was marked, they said, by shooting at nothing at night, sending up flares without much reason and various other jittery activities which indicate the enemy feels none too happy in his position.

Swan patrols, or swan columns, as the soldiers call them, are the British adaptation to a new type of country in which the fighting is now going on.

Include Tanks

These columns, rather large as patrols go, include tanks, armored cars, trucks filled with infantry and even some artillery especially equipped for crossing more solid stretches of the salt marshes which provide much of El Agheila's natural defensive strength.

The various elements of a patrol fan out like swans on a lake, but can come together quickly if the exigencies of operation require it. They have penetrated into various parts of the enemy's outer establishment lately and have fought several sharp engagements.

Enemy positions before El Agheila are harassed constantly by Allied fighters and bombers. Two American fighters—advanced types of the Curtis P-40 used by American fighter squadrons here—were listed as missing from yesterday's operations.

Bag Big Transport

Long-range R. A. F. fighters patrolling the Mediterranean again ran into a flight of German troop transports ferrying reinforcements to Libya and shot down one huge six-motored, 80-passenger flying boat and damaged two others. Long-range bombers operating from Libya continued to pound Axis airports and other objectives in Tunisia.

It has been definitely established that American fighter pilots destroyed seven enemy planes in heavy aerial engagements last Tuesday.

Capt. George D. Mobbs of Little Rock, Ark., who returned with 40 bullet holes in his fighter, shot down two Axis planes, as did also Lieut. Steven Merena of Ilion, N. Y., and Lieut. Arnold Jaqua of South Bend, Ind. Lieut. William Barnes of New York destroyed one.

installations, were meeting with marked success were seen in a front-line report that the Germans were speeding glider-borne units to the areas where the sky-fighters were operating.

Huge Junkers Transport planes and other large-type enemy planes were flying the enemy troops into action against the Anglo-American 'chutists, commanded by Col. Edson Raff of New York. This enemy aerial activity was especially marked in the southern sector of the Tunisian Front, where Nazi units were being flown inland from such east coast points as Sfax, Gabes and Sousse.

(C. B. S. in New York heard a British radio broadcast reporting that Allied parachutists have operated within some four miles southwest of Tunis, where they were dropped "in order to cut the Axis supply lines.")

Rains Hamper Supplies

Front-line dispatches reported that while both sides were experiencing supply difficulties as a result of heavy winter rains which made most of the primitive roads virtually impassable, it was known that the Nazis have received reinforcements to some extent. A Reuter's News Agency dispatch asserted that an enemy counter-blow last night showed the Axis had lost none of its punch in the Tunisian theater.

Fresh tank attacks were reported being launched by the Axis in the Tebourba area, where Allied lines were bombed ineffectually by the German air force. Enemy patrols, beginning to take more chances, thrust forward in the last few days against the exposed right flank of the British First Army in the neighborhood of Massicault, overlooking the Medjerda River and along the road to Medjez-El-Bab.

Nazi commanders also have dispatched snipers, followed by machine gunners to snake their way to the rear of the Allied positions in the Tebourba area, where they fire almost constantly on Anglo-American transport.

At The Most Advanced United States Air Base In Libya, Dec. 8 (Delayed).—Three United States fighter squadrons celebrated today their installation in this base behind the British front in the Libyan Desert by raising their collective total of enemy planes destroyed to 50.

Fighter pilots of the Black Scorpion, Fighting Cock and Penguin squadrons took the offensive in their first operational flight from this base and downed 7 Messerschmitt 109's.

This came shortly after operations officer Maj. Harry A. French of Earl, Ark., with a jeep and truck convoy, completed a 350-mile trek across the desert and began clearing runways for the planes, with front line British infantrymen aiding.

The planes came several hours after the jeeps and landed while men still were dynamiting rocks out of the runways.

Four pilots were credited with the first victories scored from the new base.

Lieut. Steven Merena of Ansonia, Conn., of the Black Scorpions, shot down two Messerschmitts, making his total victories three.

Lieut. George E. Mobbs of Little Rock, Ark., also a Black Scorpion, got two before returning safely to base with dozens of holes in his plane.

Lieut. William Barnes of New York City, a Black Scorpion, got one.

Lieut. Arnold D. Jaqua, South Bend, Ind., of the Fighting Cocks, downed two Messerschmitts in a dogfight over enemy territory.

Pilots flying fighter-bombers and fighters were rationed a quart of water a day, for drinking and washing, and they slept in their flying outfits because their camp equipment had not caught up with the speedy advance party.

Three trucks of this party drove through an enemy mine field and didn't know it until a British convoy behind lost three of its vehicles.

Units of famed British regiments helped make runways. American ground officers who made the long trek across the desert to establish the airdrome included Capt. Allie P. Ash, communications officer, of Wausau, Wis.; Capt. Roger W. Gratrick, intelligence officer, Buffalo, N. Y., and Lieut. John Yusievicz, transportation officer, of Branford, Conn.

The Americans got their first dose of life in foxholes and slit trenches when enemy planes flew over to investigate the new base.

Red Army Strength Impresses Hurley After Tour of Line

Moscow, Dec. 11 (AP).—United States Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley declared today, after a tour of the Stalingrad front, that he found excellent strength and morale in the Red Army's current offensive and already had reported his findings to President Roosevelt.

Hurley is United States Minister to New Zealand and former War Secretary under President Hoover.

He said he was permitted as full an inspection of battle maps and charts and as complete a reconnaissance of battle positions as would be allowed an officer of the Red Army itself.

At a press conference at the United States Embassy, the general said in a prepared statement that he was favorably impressed by the intelligence, courage, fighting ability and leadership of Russia's armies.

Crisis in Finland Reported in Zurich

London, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—The Exchange Telegraph Agency today quoted a Zurich Neue Zuericher Zeitung report from Helsinki that tension is so great in Finland that a government crisis is imminent.

ductions and armaments who apparently has taken over a huge slice of the former authority of Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering as economic dictator.

S. S. Leader Brand, who has been made health dictator and final authority on all medical matters.

Fritz Sauckel, high commissioner for employment of all labor, who is responsible for the mobilization of Europe's workers for German war factories.

Herbert Bache, who has been named food minister, replacing Walther Darre, who has taken a long leave of absence.

S. S. Leader Jacob Werlin, who has been made an inspector of the German motor industry and a transport chief.

S. S. Brigade Leader Wilhelm Stuckart, an interior ministry official who is in charge of certain affairs in the occupied countries.

Galland, new inspector general of German fighter plane forces, is a veteran of the Condor Legion in Spain's civil war and of the Polish campaign and the Battle of Britain. He was credited by the Germans with the destruction of 94 planes up to last January, and was decorated with the Knights Cross of the Iron Cross.

Fricke Replaces Carls

Admiral Fricke formerly was known in Britain as the deputy of Raeder's staff, a position to which he was appointed in 1941. Apparently he has replaced Admiral General Rolf Carls. Even his first name is not known abroad.

Although Jeschonnek is not well-known abroad, he is far from being a parvenu. In fact, he is reported to have been one of the early group that covertly laid the basis for revival of the German air force in the days of German disarmament.

He is reported to be the oldest staff officer in the Luftwaffe, and as long ago as 1916 was a lieutenant on the air staff. Mustered out in 1918, he reappeared about 1931 or 1932 as assistant chief of the transport pilots school, which furnished the manpower for the re-created air force.

When von der Leiph-Thomesen, chief of the World War air force, was recalled by Goering in 1933 to begin the secret rebuilding of the air force, Jesschonnek went with him.

In 1938 he became deputy to Maj. Gen. Karl Bodenschatz, whom he apparently succeeded in 1939, a development which the German radio is just now mentioning. Bodenschatz moved p as Goering's personal deputy in the high command.

Gen. Halder Reported Under House Arrest

London, Dec. 11 (INS).—Stockholm reports to the London Evening Standard today said that the German general, Franz Halder, is under house arrest in Berlin.

Halder was replaced as chief of the German general staff by Gen. Kurt Zeitzler, it was revealed yesterday.

Swedish circles expect, said the Standard, that there will be a complete change in German commands on the different sectors of the Russian front.

White House Gets Bill to Curtail Questionnaires

By the Associated Press

Here's good news for citizens weary of answering Government questionnaires:

The Senate completed action yesterday on legislation, which now goes to the White House, giving the budget director general control over the issuance of requests for information. He was instructed to eliminate duplication and see that no questionnaires are sent out unless there is a proven need for the information.

Under other provisions, Government agencies could exchange information obtained from citizens and business establishments, in some cases making one questionnaire do the service formerly requiring three or four.

War Sidelights

Axis Leaders Share Wishes For Victory

London, Dec. 11 (AP).—Axis leaders exchanged "victory wishes" today on the anniversary of the German and Italian declarations of war on the United States, according to Axis broadcasts.

Adolf Hitler messaged Emperor Hirohito of Japan that "our glorious deeds of arms guarantee our victory."

To Premier Mussolini of Italy he said: "Through history, victory always has gone to those nations which, fighting for a just ideal against an obsolete world order, have dared their all."

Mussolini in a message to Hitler renewed "expression of my unshakeable confidence in the success of our arms."

Danish Patriots Held

Stockholm, Dec. 11 (INS).—Reports from Copenhagen stated today the Nazi gauleiters of Denmark have suppressed a group of patriots accused of sabotaging the German occupation of the Scandinavian country.

Among those arrested and charged with holding clandestine meetings to plot against the Nazi regime were Axel Larsen, described as secretary of the Danish Communist Party, and a Prof. Ole Chiewiz whom the Nazis said was "not a Communist."

The organization was said to have the support of the newspaper Frit Danmark, published by free Danes.

Want 5 Japs for 1 Yank

Chungking, Dec. 11 (INS).—Japan will demand five Japanese nationals held by the United States for every single American interned in Japan in future exchange negotiations, the Chinese Central News Agency said today.

The agency disclosed that 400 Americans once employed in Shanghai have been detained in the former United States Marine barracks on Haipong Road, Shanghai, scene of the first clash between American Marines and Japanese plainclothesmen in 1938.

Nazi Center Taken

Algierds Dec. 10 (Delayed) (AP). The American Red Cross opened a recreation center for United States troops today in a large building formerly occupied by a pro-Nazi youth movement.

communique said several Nazi efforts were beaten down yesterday near Rzhev where the Germans lost 21 tanks and several hundred men. The enemy also lost heavily near Velikie Luki, it was said.

Two Nazi infantry companies also were reported wiped out and five tanks disabled on the eastern bank of the Don River northwest of Stalingrad. The Germans lost seven more tanks, all they employed, in another unsuccessful counterattack in the same area.

Southwest of Stalingrad there was only scattered fighting. But in one "violent engagement," the Russians said one of their units broke into the Germans' lines, killed 180 men, and captured guns and ammunition.

Soviet Barrage

Inside Stalingrad the Russians still were laying down artillery barrages on German blockhouses in the ruins of that city. One Russian unit in the southern outskirts "encircled six enemy blockhouses, annihilating a Hitlerite garrison that displayed resistance."

Five hundred more Germans were declared to have been killed in a three-day fight on the Leningrad front.

(The Germans said that the Russians were attacking vainly southwest of Kalinin and at Lake Ilmen south of Stalingrad; that their infantry and tank divisions had encircled a Russian shock group on the Central Front; that weak Soviet forces were annihilated north of Stalingrad, and that a dominating hill was taken in the Don bend. The communique claimed the destruction or capture of 1262 Russian tanks this month.)

Southwest of Stalingrad, the Germans had been forced into retreat to a large populated point where a large battle was in progress, the Russians said. (The town may be Kotelnikovski, on the north Caucasus railway.)

Northwest of the Volga city, the Russians said they occupied new German lines and drove the invaders from one of many heavily fortified positions between the Don and Volga.

On the southern outskirts of Stalingrad, the Russians occupied a line of trenches long held by the enemy. A dozen fortifications with their garrisons were reported destroyed in the northern factory district of the city.

The army newspaper Red Star summed up the fighting thus: "Our advancing troops have repulsed all counterattacks and continue to move forward."

Jap Counterblows Fail Near Buna

Chinese Hold

Japs Slash At Defenses Of Yunnan

By Spencer Moosa,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking, Dec. 11.—Veteran Japanese troops, with fresh reserves from Burma, are stabbing repeatedly at the far-flung Chinese lines defending the mountainous heart of Yunnan Province from invasion, the high command reported tonight.

About 6000 Japanese, striking in three columns, began offensive operations December 6 against Chinese forces in western Yunnan in the area north of Tengyueh and west of the Salween River's upper gorge, a communique said.

The report did not specify whether the fighting, heavy the first two days and still continuing, was the start of the large-scale enemy drive that an army spokesman here had forecast would be made with Kunming, Yunnan's capital, as its ultimate objective.

Resisting fiercely, lightly armed Chinese infantrymen were said to have held their lines in the face of repeated Japanese assaults. Rifle and machine-gun fire checked a series of night charges December 7.

The old Burma Road to Junming runs south of the Tengyueh area, where hostilities have resumed, but a Japanese advance across the Salween there would constitute an outflanking of Chinese forces along the road. Thus far the enemy apparently had not penetrated beyond the small slice of Yunnanese territory which was occupied after the fall of Burma last spring.

Since Burma's conquest, scores of American Army transports have been flying lease-lend supplies from India to China across Yunnan, with Kunming as a refueling point.

From Chekiang Province, the high command said, came news of a considerable Japanese reverse. Seven thousand troops of a puppet Chinese command joined Nationalist forces last week and attacked their erstwhile Japanese allies, inflicting casualties. The enemy, summoning reinforcements, counterattacked and fighting was still in progress.

In northern Hunan, Chinese reported attacking and entering Changan on December 3 after causing Japanese losses.

Chinese troops, meanwhile, claimed appreciable gains in an attack on enemy positions southwest of Chungshan, birthplace of the Chinese republic's founder, Dr. Sun Yat Sen, near Portuguese Macao.

In central Anhwei, Chinese reported capturing two enemy-held points southwest of Wuwei and inflicting casualties before returning to their original base.

3 Jap Planes Shot Down

New Delhi, Dec. 11 (INS).—Three Japanese planes were shot down when an enemy squadron of bombers and fighters attacked Chittagong, India, yesterday, an Allied communique announced today.

Chittagong is on the Bay of Bengal, just over the Burmese border.

Foe Loses Heavily In Attacks Between Gona and Buna

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Saturday) Dec. 12 (AP).—Repulse of Japanese counterattacks at Sanananda, between Gona and Buna on the northeast New Guinea coast, was announced by the high command today.

"South of Sanananda, the enemy repeatedly counterattacked but was bloodily repulsed," the noon communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported regarding the showdown battle for control of all northeastern New Guinea.

In the Buna area, antiaircraft and machine-gun positions of the trapped Japs were silenced by Allied artillery and mortar fire.

Artillery Hammers Jap Positions

By Dean Schedler
Associated Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in New Guinea, Dec. 11.—Field artillery hurled tons of shells into the shrinking Japanese hold around Buna today after American troops repulsed a second counterattack on their beachhead between the village and mission.

Other United States and Australian troops captured nearby Japanese pillboxes in fierce bayonet charges.

The company enemy base at Gona, 12 miles up the coast, was completely subdued, but the Japanese stubbornly held a 9-mile stretch of hot beach sands between Capes Killerton and Endaiadere. Generally the enemy positions are not over a mile wide although a few Nipponese are holding out on the trail to Soputa, 6 miles inland.

The latest Japanese assault on the American wedge to the sea between Buna village and Cape Endaiadere opened Wednesday night at 9 p. m. Enemy mortar fire from the mission and village swept the small United States forces, but they were well entrenched and held firmly.

When the yelling Japanese patrols charged from both sides, American tommyguns, machine-guns and small arms fire dealt with the force from the mission first and then cleaned up the patrol from the village. The retreating Japanese left seven corpses and two machine-guns on the field and pulled other dead and injured back with them.

The Japanese garrison was believed greatly reduced by the long siege, set after Allied troops blazed a trail across the Owen Stanley Mountains from Port Moresby on one of the most amazing offensives in the history of warfare.

Nine bombers escorted by 18 fighters dropped hundreds of bundles of supplies to the beleaguered Japanese yesterday, but Allied 25-pounders, mortars and 105-mm guns promptly laid down a devastating barrage where the bundles dropped. The capture of large supplies of food and munitions at Gona belied the belief that the Japanese were starving or desperately short of supplies.

Allied troops, under the personal direction of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, made a fresh advance on the Buna airfield, already under artillery fire.

The enemy employed mortars and 75-mm guns and had numerous machine gun nests built of logs and concrete. Bitter hand-to-hand fighting ensued as the green-clad Allied jungle fighters reduced the fire points one by one.

Air activity was reduced. Kittyhawks strafed the Soputa trail area and Japanese bombers and fighters—probably from Lae and Salamaua farther up the New Guinea coast—appeared over the battle area, but made no attacks.

The Australians who completed the conquest of Gona at 5 p. m. Wednesday and tersely reported "Gona gone," were moving east on Cape Killerton.

Fire points usually contained fewer than five Japanese and had to be cleaned out with grenades when the enemy refused to surrender.

Pilot Adrift 3 Days Finds Garden of Eden in Pacific Isle

By Eugene Burns
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the U. S. Fleet in the South Pacific, Dec. 3 (Delayed).— Bushy-haired native girls, clad only in knee-length skirts and smoking clay pipes, greeted plucky Ensign Jefferson H. (Tiny) Carroum, 21, of Smackover, Ark., when he reached their island after 73 hours adrift in a life jacket.

But, after what the bomber pilot had been through in the air and sea, his eyes were so swollen he scarcely could see to admire them.

Ensign Carroum's bomber fell into the sea after a bitter fight during which it started a Jap ship on its way to the bottom. The plane's rear gunner was believed lost.

For size, Tiny probably is one of the Navy's smallest pilots. He barely stretches the required 5 feet 4 inches, but for stamina and courage he has proven himself among the best.

After the long, watery struggle for life, Tiny finally found a South Sea Garden of Eden within the war zone to compensate himself somewhat for scoring a direct hit on a large Japanese transport in the November 13-15 Battle of Guadalcanal. (The transport subsequently sank).

Hit By Flak

He was forced to abandon his plane after it was hit by antiaircraft fire of an enemy cruiser, then was attacked by a Zero. It dropped into the ocean from 100 feet up when the engine quit. Tiny didn't have time to drop his landing flaps or slow up the plane.

"It was knocked out by the impact" with the water, Tiny explained. "The next thing I knew I was in the water up to my knees in the cockpit. I managed to crawl out on a wing. When the plane went under, our liferaft caught on the tail and went down with it."

During the fight with the Zero, Tiny and his gunner had seen the dim outline of an island about 30 miles away. He now headed for it. In the ensuing battle with contrary currents, Tiny went unconscious for several hours at a time.

Every fish seemed like a shark to him; he had nightmares; he'd wake up shouting for his fellow pilots; he almost reached land time and again only to be carried out.

But little, curly-haired Tiny never gave up.

On his first night in the life jacket, the only satisfying sight was that of flames from the burning transport, and glowing spots on the horizon marking the locations of five others.

"Finally, on the evening of the third day I half drifted and half swam into a bay. My face was swollen and one of my eyes was closed."

Stumbles on Rain Pool

Tiny's last 200 yards before reaching high ground was through glass-sharp coral which cut viciously into his softened hands and feet. When he stumbled and rolled ashore, bleeding and exhausted 73 hours after being shot down, he providentially fell near a rain pool.

"I just lay down and started drinking water and fell asleep," Tiny said.

The next morning his teeth were chattering and his eyes were swollen shut. He heard natives shouting in Oxford English. Native boys carried him to a village of about 85 inhabitants. There he bathed in warm water, had his wounds dressed, and was given rice and hot tea.

Tiny, who once studied at Arkansas State Teachers College, made a special point of observing native customs during his nine-day sojourn at the village.

Women and men dressed alike, bare to the waist, and with a short skirt to the knee. This they kept on during daily swims.

The men were about 5 feet 8, and women about 5 feet 1. Some wore earnings, and the high chief, "old Tom," had a dollar-sized hole in each earlobe.

The natives went en masse to the Church of England at dawn and at sunset for services by a native missionary. On Sundays, all work stopped and the day was given over to meditation and chewing of sugarcane stalks.

The principal food, morning, noon and night, was sweet potatoes with a little beef, fish, banana and pineapple, cooked in a large communal pot. Most ate standing up, cafeteria style.

"Everyone got along just fine in this Garden of Eden just a short distance from the fighting," said Tiny, adding "I didn't once hear anyone raise his voice, and everyone was happy and contented and kind."

San Francisco Home Under Own Power

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Dec. 11 (AP).—The cruiser San Francisco, gallant flagship of the United States Solomons Fleet that ripped a Jap armada, came home today, grimy and patched and proud.

On her decks stood a corps of heroes. On the same decks other heroes died in the blackness of that early morning battle of November 13, when the heavy cruiser raced between two formidable lines of Jap men-of-war, cvrippled a battleship and finished off a cruiser and a destroyer.

The Jap battleship, three times the San Francisco's size, was silenced by the San Francisco's deadly fire, and was sunk the next day by American guns and torpedoes.

"We'll take the big ones first!" That was the challenge of Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan as the battle joined.

The cruiser's big guns thundered in the night. Her shells flashed on the decks and against the sides of the enemy flotilla.

"We'll take the big ones first!" the officers and crew cheered the admiral's challenge. And three minutes later the admiral fell dead and with him the San Francisco's master, Capt. Cassin Young.

Heroes' Welcome

The story of that memorable battle of the Solomons in which our Navy turned back a desperate Jap thrust at reinforcement of enemy outposts in the islands, had been told before, but today the brave young men who fought the gallant ship came to their home port and a heroes' welcome.

Comdr. Bruce McCandless, only 31, a handsome, deadly fighting man, came here with his cruiser. It was he who assumed command after Admiral Callaghan and Capt. Young had died as a Jap shell carried away the bridge.

The young officer, a lieutenant commander then, was injured and knocked unconscious twice when shells poured into the San Francisco. He has been designated to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Commander McCandless declared that his gunnery officers "turned in one of the most astounding gunnery performances I ever heard of." He mentioned Lieut. Comdr. William Wilbourne of Marion, Ala., and Lieut. Comdr. James I. Cone of White Springs, Fla.

The Main Battery

Commander Wilbourne commented that "apparently all the Japanese in the vicinity were firing on the San Francisco. There was a Japanese battleship firing on our starboard bow, a Japanese cruiser on our starboard quarter, a destroyer close aboard on our port side. The San Francisco returned the fire until she was no longer being fired on by the Japanese."

In this engagement a Jap cruiser and a destroyer were sunk; a battleship of the Kongo class so savagely hit that it sunk the next day. It had, Wilbourne said, been "hit by several salvos at point-blank range."

And thus it was that Admiral Dan Callaghan fired his main battery.

A few days ago a memorial service was held here for the Oakland (Calif.) hero. In the sermon, his old friend, the Rev. George O'Meara, related, "Dan gave his life, but his ship still is afloat. He had his wish. He fired the main battery!"

Now the San Francisco will go into dry dock for repair to its battle injuries. And this city was prepared to extend every homage and every comfort to the fighting heroes of the proud vessel.

Flying Fort, Attacked by 15 Jap Zeros, Shoots Down Five

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

An Army Flying Fortress singlehandedly fought and won an air battle with 15 Japanese Zeros in the Solomons recently, shooting down five of the enemy fighters, the Navy announced yesterday.

At the same time, the Navy reported the loss of the auxiliary cargo vessel, U. S. S. Alchiba, a former Moore-McCormack Lines freighter taken over and converted to naval use last year. The 6198-ton vessel was sunk recently "as the result of enemy action" in the Solomons area, it was said.

Reports submitted to the Navy Department indicate that only three members of the crew were lost.

In telling of the fight between the big Army "Flying Fort" and the swarm of Zeros, the Navy said the American bomber was on a reconnaissance flight over New Georgia Island in the middle Solomons when attacked. No details were given, but it was stated that the United States plane returned to its base safely after shooting down five of the Nip fighters.

Only yesterday, another Boeing bomber fought something of a similar fight near New Britain Island. This Flying Fortress, a part of General MacArthur's command and flying from a base in New Guinea, shot down five Zeros and probably got two more when a bomber group was attacked by a large number of enemy fighters.

The Army bomber taking part in the fight in the Solomons was part of Admiral William F. Halsey's command and probably came from a base in the New Hebrides.

The five Zeros shot down boosted to 631 the number of Jap planes listed by the Navy as having been destroyed in the Solomons since early August. Reports from MacArthur of enemy planes shot down by his fliers raise the total to more than 1000.

Loss of the Alchiba raised to 27 the number of American ships sunk in the Solomons since our forces moved into the islands in August. The Japs have lost at least 52 ships in these waters during the same period.

The Alchiba, built in 1939, was formerly the S. S. Mormacdove. Comdr. James S. Freeman of Jasper, Fla., captain of the vessel, is reported to be safe.

Text of the Navy communique, No. 216, follows:

"1. An Army Flying Fortress on a reconnaissance flight over the island of New Georgia was attacked recently by 15 Zero fighters. The Fortress returned to its base after shooting down five of the enemy fighters.

"2. The U. S. S. Alchiba, an auxiliary cargo ship, was lost recently as the result of enemy action. Reports indicate that total casualties amounted to three missing."

Service Added For Yule Shoppers

To facilitate travel for war workers and Christmas shoppers, Capital Transit Co. operated a record total of 1686 vehicles in the afternoon rush hour Tuesday as compared to 1450 operated December 8, 1941, it was announced yesterday.

The increase over a month ago is 73 cars and buses. The company operated 711 streetcars and 975 buses on Tuesday.

Maritime D.S.M. Awarded to 4 Here for Valor in Ship Shelling

"After two hours of continuous shelling from deck guns, the sub finally sent a torpedo into our side. Its explosion was like pfffft after the other fire," declared Charles Richardson of Bryan, Tex., one of four merchant seamen awarded the Maritime Commission's Merchant Marine Distinguished Service Medal here yesterday for bravery during the shelling of their ship last March by an enemy sub.

Others decorated were Chief Engineer Thomas J. McTaggert of Medford, Mass; Fireman Arthur Lauman of New York, and First Mate Hawkins Fudske, also of New York, killed during the action, whose wife, Mrs. Dagny Fudske, received the posthumous award. All were Standard Oil Co. employes.

First Mate Fudske was badly wounded while aiding men to lower themselves into liferafts and the one lifeboat—and directing other activities. He was killed while climbing into the lifeboat.

Fireman Lauman remained in the engine room long after he had been ordered out by his superiors, trying desperately to keep the motors going for a run from the sub. Finally, two men practically wrenched him loose from his post.

Chief Engineer McTaggert guided his engine crew when they attempted to keep all engines going, and when the steering gear was blasted out of commission and the bridge signalled to stop the engines and prepare to abandon ship, he ordered his crew to the lifeboats.

Barracuda-infested were the waters. Richardson was doing a fine job, they said yesterday, until some of the barracuda attacked. One man was ripped away from Richardson as he jabbed out with a knife fighting the fish, getting in return some ripped flesh. He made the boat with the one man.

The ship did not sink. Appearance of an Allied escort vessel frightened the sub off. The men, upon receiving medical treatment at a shore station, returned to the scene and brought the ship back for repairs. It is now making the same trips.

Richardson is 27, and has been in the Merchant Marine for four years. Lauman has been in service for more than 25 years. He is 60 years old. McTaggert has been in the Merchant Marine since 1931. Active duty is now being seen by all.

Postwar Price Rise Bogey Raised

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 11—A report of the economic and financial committees of the League of Nations said today commodity price rises and a subsequent collapse might occur when the war ended, and added that in their opinion "the maintenance of various forms of economic control will be necessary."

The report, issued by the Columbia University Press, suggested concerted action by the United Nations would be required to prevent such wide fluctuations in prices.

"It is possible that for a time after the war the available supplies of many commodities may be inadequate to meet potential demands," the report said. "In such conditions, demand may need to be controlled, in order to prevent a further rise in prices beyond the level reached in the war.

"Such a rise, if not checked, could hardly fail to be followed by a collapse, as happened after the last war, intensifying any subsequent depression. This danger having been avoided, a point will be reached sooner or later when the conditions will be reversed; supplies may need to be regulated and demand stimulated. When this happens a state of great danger will have been reached unless adequate preparation has been made in advance."

It warned that measures to stimulate internal productive activity by restrictions on purchases aboard would spread depression farther and commented:

"If the proposed restoration of the channels of world trade is not to be a temporary affair followed by a speedy relapse into the worst conditions of the 30's, it is essential that plans should have been drawn in advance, particularly on the monetary side, capable of applying throughout the world some strong expansionary impulse on the approach of a depression."

The report said that while postwar controls thus would be necessary for a time, "the transition from a war to a peace economy must be effected by a gradual and internationally coordinate process of decontrol."

Martin Declares War on Unessential GovernmentExpenses

By Francis M. LeMay
Associated Press Staff Writer

Representative Martin of Massachusetts declared yesterday the Republicans would conduct a vigorous drive in the Congress convening next month to cut expenditures by Government agencies not performing war functions and to curb "the use of unreasonable power by bureaucrats."

"The tremendous sum needed for prosecution of the war," the minority leader said, "will demand that we cut other governmental expenditures wherever it is possible. Obviously, the people are demanding a reduction in the thousands of political straphangers.

"Another of our purposes will be to curb the unauthorized use of power by some of the autocratic bureaucrats. We want them to have what power is needed for prosecution of war, but we don't want this used for the persecution of the people."

Minority Strength Gains

Martin gave this preview in his first press interview since returning from St. Louis, where he bowed out as the Republican national chairman in order to devote more time to leadership of the election-invigorated minority party in the House.

The Massachusetts Representative is certain to be reelected floor leader of the minority when the House Republicans caucus early in January. In the new Congress, Republicans will hold 207 House sets, against 222 by Democrats.

In recent House speeches, both Republicans and Democrats have demanded economy curbs on "bureaucracy."

Martin said, "Of course the Republicans have not as yet completed a program, but there are some points that obviously will be our objective in the coming Congress."

"We are definitely committed to cooperate fully in the promotion of the war," he emphasized. "And we are going to exert our influence to make the prosecution more vigorous and efficient, so that we can hasten the end of the war and the bringing of the boys back home."

Discussing Government expenditures, he commented:

"Whenever a bureau has been established recently, the appointed chief first has enrolled thousands of employes, whether needed or not. As a result, we have padded payrolls which have shocked the Nation.

"It is to help us get at the real facts that I have advocated giving each subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee a trained accountant with power personally to look over the books of the various departments. If this were done, we would not have to depend on others for our information."

Pullman Names Reed Yard Superintendent

Harry B. Reed, general foreman of the Pullman Co.'s Washington yards from 1920 to 1923, has been appointed superintendent of yards for all Pullman Co. operations, the company announced yesterday. He suceeds Fred R. Callahan, who was named general manager.

Reed has been assistant superintendent of yards, with headquarters in Chicago, since 1924.

No Special Plan

Phillips Named U. S. India Envoy

WILLIAM PHILLIPS

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed William Phillips, one of this country's outstanding diplomats, to represent him in troubled India as his personal envoy with the unofficial title of ambassador.

The demands of Mohandas K. Gandhi and other Indians for independence from Great Britain have led some prominent Americans outside of official life to suggest that the United States mediate in the situation, but there was no indication what Phillips' instructions were on that question. Mr. Roosevelt said Phillips is taking to New Delhi no special plan or formula for the solution of the Indian problem.

The appointment of a personal representative was the closest the President could come to sending an ambassador to a country which has no sovereign status. In this capacity Phillips' appointment is not subject to confirmation by the Senate.

Phillips, a 64-year-old career diplomat who says that "there are jarring notes only when there are jarring personalities," will carry on the regular duties of a diplomatic representative, Mr. Roosevelt told his press conference. Phillips now is in London and will proceed to India soon.

Phillips' last diplomatic post was that of Ambassador to Italy, and before going to Rome in 1936 he was Undersecretary of State, preceding Sumner Welles. After extensive service abroad, he served an earlier term as Undersecretary before becoming Ambassador to Belgium in 1924, and he became the first United States Minister to Canada in 1927.

Both Mr. Roosevelt and Phillips were members of President Wilson's "Little Cabinet," as Assistant Secretaries of the Navy and State, respectively, and their friendship started at that time.

Ala. Governor Assails Policies Of New Deal

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 11.—Gov. Frank M. Dixon of Alabama charged the Democratic Party tonight with "dynamiting" the social structure of the South and declared that "confusion" caused by pressure groups in Washington "is likely to cause the defeat of the next Democratic candidate for President."

In an address prepared for delivery before the Southern Society of New York, Dixon asserted:

"Suggestions are rife as to the formation of a Southern Democratic Party, the election of unpledged representatives to the Electoral College. Ways and means are being discussed daily to break our chains. We will find some way, and find it regardless of the effect of national elections, if this senseless attack keeps up."

Declaring that efforts at reform by various bureaus and groups since Pearl Harbor had created "illimitable confusion and the diversion of the energies of many of us to efforts to retain our American democracy at a time of dire national peril," Dixon said:

"It was the national impatience with this type of confusion which, in my opinion, caused the overwhelming defeat of the Democratic candidates in the last election."

Dixon charged that the unsuccessful attempt to abolish the poll tax and the operation of the United States Employment Service and the Fair Employment Practice Committee were efforts to change the social structure of the South.

Referring to an executive order against discrimination by reason of race in any defense work, he said:

"The announced policy of the Employment Service and the actions of the committee indicate that, however fervently the claim may be made that the purpose was not to interfere with the social structure of the South, in practical effect the abolition of segregation was exactly the result sought to be achieved by the majority of the committee."

Midwestern Leaders Meet in Omaha Today

Omaha, Dec. 11 (AP).—Democratic Party leaders from nine Midwestern States will meet in Omaha tomorrow for a session called without consultation of national party heads to create—in the words of National Committeeman James C. Quigley of Nebraska—"a united front on party policies in agricultural States with common interests and domestic problems."

Iowa and Nebraska party leaders called the meeting, Quigley said, without consulting national party heads.

The proposed session "apparently assumed so much importance in the eyes of Washington that Eugene Casey, Special Assistant to the President, and Oscar R. Ewing, National Democratic Party vice chairman, are coming out," Quigley added.

Referring to Republican victories last month, Quigley said:

"The results indicate something is basically wrong. The voters were not supporting the policies of our party. The situation justifies a thorough diagnosis. We intend to do that and see if we can prescribe a remedy."

U.S. Agencies Hail Action On Deferrals

Appointment of a 3-man committee by President Roosevelt to formulate a uniform policy for the draft deferment of Federal employes will be good news to several Government agencies which indicated yesterday that the President's previous order on deferments had left them in a quandary.

The OPA, which has lost about ten men since the President ordered that deferments could be obtained only by direct application to the White House, reported yesterday that the employes it had lost to the armed services were "men for whom deferments might have been asked" but were not because "the policy was not clear enough."

The Board of Economic Warfare, reporting that it was standing by for "an overall classification," said it had asked no deferments for any of its 3000 employes—about 40 of whom are regarded as critically essential to their agency. Fortunately, none of the 40 has been drafted since the President's order.

FCC Asks Deferments

Federal Communications Commission said it had requested deferment of a few hundred scientific and technical employes engaged in work directly related to the war effort, and that since the President's order it had not lost any men who "would not have been drafted anyway."

Deferments for 30 men have been asked by OWI, which reported that one has been granted after authorization from the White House. The agency said it had lost one man to the draft immediately after the President's order, because the machinery to handle deferment requests was not in operation at the time.

OWI requests for deferment, it was added, are not sent to the White House until after they have cleared the agency's own review committee, which was said to cast an eagle eye over all applications.

Meanwhile, William H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to the President, who handles the deferment requests, said that hundreds of them had been received by his office and that the majority had been approved.

"Anyone who has been inducted into military service from a critically essential civilian employment because of failure to request authority to seek his deferment from such induction has no one to blame but himself," McReynolds added, "because the President's direction that requests be made directly to him certainly did not bar any justified request."

Sources at District Selective Service headquarters said none of the requested-and-approved deferments had yet come before that agency. "When these cases do reach local boards," it was stated, "they will be judged on the merits of the individual case and the authorization will be seriously considered as an advisory but not mandatory opinion."

In no instance, it was said, will the cases of men already deferred be reopened until the deferment expires. Then, if it appears that the White House has authorized deferment, that fact will be judged on its merits. If no such authorization is on file, Selective Service said, no further deferment will be considered.

Dr. Verdel to Head Roanoke Veterans' Unit

By the Associated Press

Dr. Louis F. Verdel, chief medical officer of the Veterans' Administration Facility at Roanoke, Va., was appointed manager of the institution yesterday.

The Veterans' Administration announced the appointment, stating that Dr. Verdel succeeds Col. Edwin W. Jordan, who had been recalled to military service.

Dates Revised For 'Teen-Age Registration

Although December 14 and 21 are the days set by the District Selective Service for the registration of boys becoming 18 during the last half of this year, local Draft Boards were busy yesterday with youths wishing to register in accordance with the President's proclamation setting the period from December 11 through December 31 as the time for their registration.

On these dates, boys in the District have been requested to register at one of 15 designated schools, but technically they were free to register at their local boards starting yesterday because of the President's proclamation.

Some local boards accepted registrations yesterday and others told the boys to report at the proper high school on the designated days.

Those born on or after July 1, 1924, but not after August 31, 1924, will be registered December 14.

Those born on or after September 1, 1924, but not after October 31, 1924, will be registered December 21.

Those who were born on or after November 1, 1924, but not after December 31, 1924, will be registered either day at the schools or at their local board, December 26 through December 31.

Lieut. J. W. Pitney Missing in Action In Pacific Area

Friends here learned last night that Lieut. (j. g.) John W. Pitney, one-time resident of Washington, was missing in action, having been actively engaged for the past three months in the Pacific.

Son of Mrs. Huston Rawls of Far Hills, N. J., Lieutenant Pitney lived here as a boy with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Pitney. He was born here and was graduated from Princeton University in 1939. He also attended Yale Law School.

His grandmother, Mrs. John R. Williams, resides at 1900 Q Street Northwest. He has a brother, Duncan, also of Far Hills.

and fiber containers, cordage and twine, metal barrels, kegs, drums and cans.

All the jobs listed were said to require at least six months of training. The boards, however, are to consider each case individually rather than to grant automatic deferment to the holder of any of these jobs.

Walker Suggested to Succeed Flynn as Democratic Chieftain

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Reports circulated on Capitol Hill yesterday that Postmaster General Frank C. Walker is the Roosevelt Administration's choice to succeed Edward J. Flynn of New York as national chairman of the Democratic Party.

Flynn has indicated he will step down from the party leadership early in January and behind-the-scenes attempts are being made to prevent a factional fight for the job which might rival the contest that culminated with the selection at St. Louis this week of Harrison Spangler of Iowa to head the Republican National Committee.

Those in a position to know said the election of Walker to the Democratic leadership would be acceptable to President Roosevelt and most of his advisers and might prevent a threatened cleavage in the party.

The 56-year-old Cabinet member, a long-time supporter of the President, has served as postmaster general since September 1940, when he succeeded James A. Farley. If he also becomes Democratic national chairman, he would be following the precedent established by Farley and other postmasters general before him.

Although Walker has been in the Roosevelt official family since he was named secretary of the President's Executive Council in 1933 and later executive director of the National Emergency Council, he has preserved his friendships with other party leaders, such as Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana. Walker is familiar with the work of the national committee, having served as its treasurer for a short time in 1932. Before his appointment to the Cabinet he practiced law in New York.

While it was indicated that the choice of Walker would be greeted with little enthusiasm on the part of members of Congress who have not always agreed with Mr. Roosevelt's poltical views, it was not believed likely that any open protest would be made.

Walker's name has been only one of several mentioned previously in general speculation about Flynn's successor. Among others were Leo Crowley, the alien property custodian and chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Oscar L. Chapman, Undersecretary of Interior, and Oscar Ewing, a member of the national committee.

Topeka, Kans., Dec. 11 (AP).—Formation of a new Commonwealth Party from dissident elements in the Democratic and Republican Parties was proposed today by Harry H. Woodring, former Secretary of War and Governor of Kansas in 1931-32.

He said he was willing to direct organization of the new group personally, if necessary, and expressed confidence a national ticket could be developed for the 1944 election, with State tickets in many places.

"The voters of America cried out for a change in the recent election," Woodring said, outlining his new party plan in a statement. "Republicans didn't win because they were Republicans or because their party offered one single hope or took issue with one New Deal philosophy. They won because they had the only candidates who were running against the New Deal Democrats. The New Deal Democrats were thrown out because the voters of America no longer can stomach their philosophies and no longer will submit to bureaucratic regulation and Washington paternalism. . . .

"Republicans throughout the country have failed to meet their obligations and responsibilities as members of a great minority party. The party, as such, has done nothing, said nothing and the course of the recent meeting of the Republican National Committee in St. Louis indicated that it doesn't intend to do anything."

Woodring said the next step would be determined by the response to his proposal.

Student-Streetcar Operators Put Through Rigid Tests

By Tom Moore McBride
Post Staff Writer

After physical examinations and tests for vision and adaptability, the men take a month-long training course that covers every phase of operations. It takes them at least that long to qualify.

Pilot training? No. These men are street car and bus operators preparing for adventure of guiding vehicles through traffic-frenzied streets of wartime Washington. And their training course and tests for physical fitness and mental aptitude are nearly as rigorous as though they were going in for flight training.

In some ways the training of neophyte conductors, motormen and bus drivers goes even further than that of pilots, for Capital Transit operators must deal with the public—often a public that is crotchety and exasperating. They must be courteous always—even in the face of flagrant discourtesy and arguments.

Despite all of the training necessary, the Capital Transit Co. processes new operators through its school at the Fourteenth and Decatur Streets car barn in a mass production manner—1100 in 1941 and 900 so far this year, yet the course hasn't been condensed nor shortened.

The first thing a trainee learns—whether he's to be a motorman or bus driver—is to be a conductor on the rear end of a two-man car. After six days of classroom work he's turned loose with an instructor and a change carrier during a rush hour, making possibly two complete trips each afternoon or morning.

One of the things that comes hardest during the first three or four days is learning to stand up on a street car as—both hands free—he makes change, punches transfers and pulls the dangling bellcord that tells the motorman when to start and stop.

Meanwhile, the trainee is still attending classes for the rest of the day, learning to operate a street car or bus. Finally he is taken out to the trial run point—usually on the Branchville line at mid-day, when the headway between cars is lengthy and switch-off points are frequent. He practices at a dummy control board and knows the theory of operation.

But theory is a long way from actually running a street car—at least as far as stopping one is concerned. The instructor will tell a trainee to stop at a certain telegraph pole. Then the instructor takes a firm hold and grits his teeth.

The car usually stops somewhere far past the point indicated and with such a jerk that the new operator is sure "something must be wrong with the brakes to make 'em lock that way."

A few more hours practice, however and the embryo motorman can bring the car to a halt within 10 feet of his goal with a lurch that would hardly have knocked down more than half of the standing passengers, if there had been standing passengers.

One or two days more and the motorman is ready to work in traffic on a "no passengers" car with an instructor for eight or nine days. Meanwhile, he's still making one or two trips a day as a conductor during rush hours, has learned to keep his balance and to make change for only one person at a time.

Finally the day comes when the operator is ready to go into passenger service as a student motorman on a two-man car. He still goes to class three days a week and still works his rush hour trips as a conductor. Ten days of this and he works out on a streamliner, which is as different in operation as a jeep is from a General Grant tank. The full training course usually runs about 30 days, seldom less, and often more. End of training brings qualification as an "extra" man.

Mushrooming Washington has brought a new sort of operator, a part-time employe, who works just one rush hour a day and whose training period is necessarily longer since he can't devote as much time to it daily. The part-timers get the same rate of hourly pay and usually have other jobs as their regular work.

Despite the sometimes unpleasant relations with a demanding public, street car operators usually like their work. Come across any group when they're off and you'll find them talking shop, cussing and discussing certain runs and telling each other about the old lady who tried to get on without paying a fare. Their affinity for the work is reflected in their collecting habits, for many collect tokens from others cities. Others collect weekly passes and have the whole set from the time passes were first issued.

Washington Marine Fought Japs 104 Days

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

A Rest They Earned—These four youthful United States Marine captains—a Washington officer among them—are back from Guadalcanal after fighting the Japs for 104 days. They are pictured in San Francisco, where they are getting a well-earned rest. Left to right—Capts. R. P. Neuffer, 23, of Hempstead, Long Island; F. C. Lahue, 25, of Corydon, Ind.; H. F. Gatley, 25, of Lynn, Mass., and Robert Thomas, 25, of Washington

A telephoned "hello" that comes without warning from a soldier-husband who's just landed in San Francisco after 104 days of stacking his wits against the Japanese on bloody Guadalcanal is almost like a visitation from the land of never-never.

Especially if you're a bride of nine months and haven't heard from your husband in over 60 days.

"When I picked up the phone Tuesday night and he just said 'hello,' just like that, well—" began Mrs. Mary Helen Thomas, 3003 Thirty-fourth Street Northwest, yesterday. She never got around to describing an indescribable feeling.

The husband is Capt. Robert H. Thomas of the fighting Marines, a native of Washington, whose unassuming "hello" to his wife was a devoid of heroics as his comments about Guadalcanal.

Interviewed in San Francisco by the Associated Press, the captain had little to say about the fighting on the embattled isle he had just left.

He remembered, rather, that food—which his wife reports he enjoys at any hour of the day or night—was the main topic of conversation on Guadalcanal. "Chocolate candy," he said, "and letters from home were the best morale builders on the island."

His wife and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Thomas, 7 West Leland Street, Chevy Chase, Md., were happy to know yesterday that they had made heavy contributions in this respect.

Capt. Thomas was graduated from Washington and Lee University in 1938, joined the Marines in 1939 and was stationed at Quantico and Cuba before being sent to the Solomons.

America's Hero Awards

SOLDIER'S MEDAL | SILVER STAR | PURPLE HEART | DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS | NAVY CROSS | DISTINGUISHED SERVICE MEDAL | DISTINGUISHED FLYING CROSS | MEDAL OF HONOR | DISTINGUISHED SERVICE MEDAL | MEDAL OF HONOR

Here are the 10 major awards with which America honors its soldiers and sailors for heroism or performance of exceptional character. The Army Medal of Honor is given for conspicuous gallantry in action beyond the call of duty; the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action. The Distinguished Service Medal is awarded for exceptionally meritorious service in a duty of great responsibility; the Silver Star for gallantry in action; the Purple Heart for meritorious service and for wounds received in battle; the Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy.

The Navy Medal of Honor and Distinguished Service Medal correspond to the same decorations in the Army, and the Navy Cross is for extraordinary heroism or distinguished service. Both the Army and Navy award the Distinguished Flying Cross for heroism or extraordinary achievement in an aerial flight.

Bureaucrats Toss the Buck on Oil

IF THERE EVER was a governmental case of the old lady who couldn't get her pig over the sty, it is the sad, inside story of the run-around given the building of barges to carry oil to the Atlantic seaboard.

DREW PEARSON

While New England States have been warned that people may freeze, the buck-passing game over oil barges has continued. Each Government department has a different excuse. The War Production Board says its job is merely to pass on critical materials for the barges. The Office of Defense Transportation says its job is only to certify the need for barges. Jesse Jones' RFC says its job is only to finance the barges. The Office of Petroleum Coordinator says its job is to determine the amounts of oil needed. And so on.

No one has supplied the stick to beat the dog, to bite the pig, and thus get the pig over the sty so the Atlantic seaboard will get oil this winter.

As early as last spring, Senators Pepper of Florida, Brewster of Maine plus other congressional leaders began to put the heat on these agencies. Pepper called a meeting of the Maritime Commission, Defense Plant Corp., WPB, ODT, Inland Barge Corp., and various others. The plan was to bring oil laden barges from Texas by canal to Florida, then across Florida by rail, then up the coastal waterway to Trenton, N. J.

For years Congress has been appropriating money to dig and keep up the inter-coastal waterways. Millions have been spent on them. They extend all the way from Corpus Christi to New Jersey. For years they were considered mere pork barrel ventures. But now Senators argue that finally the time has come when they can be put to vital use.

No Diesel Engines

THE FIRST SNAG, however, was lack of steel to build barges. Then it was proposed to build wooden barges, which can carry heavy oil without much leakage. So a plan for 500 wooden barges was worked out and submitted to WPB in July—but another obstacle developed.

This was Diesel engines. There were not enough for the Army's or Navy's landing boats, let alone for civilian use.

At this point Florida auto dealers proposed powering the barges with large outboard motors already manufactured. Chrysler said it had the motors available and Senator Pepper put it up to the ODT, the OPC and Inland Waterways, but they wouldn't even send representatives to Detroit for a test.

However, Col. Harry B. Vaughn, District Army Engineer in Philadelphia, had seen the motors tested and recommended them. But weeks dragged by and nothing happened. One excuse was that the outboard motors, when placed on barges, were not protected from the weather, and that the crew also lacked protection.

Finally, however, three motors are being placed on a wooden barge, with a small house built over them, and it is barely possible that with prayers and congressional push a few of these barges may begin carrying oil through the coastal waterways sometime this winter.

Let the Nazis Know

MANY AN ARMY OFFICIAL is over-cautious about speaking for publication these days, but not Lieut. Gen. "Hap" Arnold, commander of the Army Air Forces.

Disclosing that United States fliers are being turned out of preflight schools at the rate of 40,000 a year, Arnold was asked if the figures could be quoted.

"Why not?" he chuckled. "It won't do any harm. Might do a lot of good. It'll show the Germans how many we've got!"

Jefferson Memorial

THE NEW STATUE OF THOMAS JEFFERSON for the Jefferson Memorial in Washington is so big it will be put together, piece by piece. Then next spring the statue of the great Democrat—19 feet high—will be stretched out on a couple of big trucks and rolled into the new marble memorial among the cherry trees along the Tidal Basin.

"Jefferson" is being constructed in a Westport, Conn., studio by sculptor Rudulph Evans, who was awarded the contract for $32,000.

Though the statue will be bronze in final form, it is now clay—and much smaller than 19 feet. Sculptor Evans is engaged in the task of enlarging the clay figure from life-size to three times life-size.

A 19-foot bronze statue sounds heavy, but actually it will be hollow, with the bronze only three-sixteenths of an inch thick. The statue will be cast in a dozen pieces, set up for inspection, then taken apart for shipment to Washington.

Thus far, Sculptor Evans has not encountered priority troubles in securing materials for the statue—but it remains to be seen whether WPB will let him have the bronze.

British Plan Called U. S. Manpower Key

Terrorism Hit

Ban Asked On 'Sinister' Acts of Labor

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 11.—The conference of American Small Business organizations today criticized "public indulgence, complacent power and ignorance" on matters concerning labor in adopting a report condemning what is described as "sinister" practices of labor organizations.

The report called for the "immediate end of all terroristic practices" of labor and for the settlement of disputes between employers and employes by the "open democratic processes provided by law."

The small businessmen adopted a resolution directing their report to the Seventy-eighth Congress and asking for an investigation which would correct the alleged unfair practices of labor groups.

11 Resolutions Adopted

Conference reports adopted as resolutions today included the following:

Small businesses should be permitted to accumulate a reasonable amount of surpluses in good years in order to maintain continuation of business in lean years.

Enactment of a sales tax, to be passed on to consumers, and terminated one year after the end of the war.

That the present unemployment compensation program be left in the hands of the States as far as possible, and that any of these functions assumed by the Federal Government be restored to the States after the war.

That there be no further extensions of coverage and no increases under the Social Security Act, and that existing old-age pension programs be reexamined to eliminate waste.

That Government competition with small business be eliminated.

Other recommendations adopted included approval of the Ruml pay-as-you-go income tax plan; small business participation in postwar planning; support of the Byrd Committee on elimination of nondefense Federal spending; elimination of nonessential Federal reports and questioning.

First Lady Thinks English Scheme May Solve Problem Here

Boston, Dec. 11 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt recommended today a detailed study of the recruiting of women in England as a possible solution to the farm labor and manpower problems in this country, declaring the English had learned that "there is nothing a woman cannot do equally as well as a man, except a job requiring brute strength."

The First Lady said she did not believe it would be necessary to draft women in this country, because the manpower situation was not sufficiently acute. She said at a press conference, however, that Great Britain had gone far beyond the United States in making the best use of its women citizens.

Asked by a feminine reporter from a college newspaper what girls in college could do to help the war effort, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

Specific Training Urged

"I believe girls had better get out of college and go to work unless their college training is helping to fit them for some specific task. Few have the right now to train themselves for nothing in particular. I don't believe people can get by without working in the world of the future."

In an earlier speech in behalf of the Massachusetts Committee on Russian War Relief, Mrs. Roosevelt pleaded for "an increased feeling of cooperation and understanding." She said that, while many people in this country had had prejudices concerning Russia, it frequently was true upon examination that these prejudices were "against our own people, some of whom have not openly stated their positions and beliefs."

British Burdens Cited

She stated also that many American soldiers had gone to Great Britain "with a distinct prejudice against the English," but that she knew personally many had changed their minds after living with the British people.

"Britain has given ten times what we have given," she said, "because the people there know what it means to be without. There is much more equality of sacrifice in England than in this country."

Asked at her press conference whether she might make a trip to China or Russia as a sequel to her plane flight to Great Britain, Mrs. Roosevelt laughed and said: "Good heavens, I have just gotten home from England."

can coastline of the Mediterranean."

"The Soviet army, having held with stubborn bravery at Stalingrad, has now assumed the offensive," he added. "The Japanese have been recklessly expending ships and men in the Solomons, a battleground of our own choosing.

"The Axis powers have, temporarily, at least, lost the initiative. We must do all we can to keep them from regaining it."

The Chief Executive went on to say that "we must bring the full strength of all the United Nations to bear directly against the enemy," adding:

"We must bring together our joint productive capacity and our material resources, our finished munitions, and our fighting power; and we must do this in accordance with a single world strategy.

"That we are making good progress in this direction I think is shown by recent developments and by this report on the part played by lend-lease."

The President said that as the Allied striking power grows and new territories are liberated a new task develops — supplying medicines, food and clothing to the peoples who had been "plundered, despoiled and starved."

"The Nazis and Japanese," he said, "have butchered innocent men and women in a campaign of organized terror. They have stripped the lands they hold of food and other resources. They have used hunger as an instrument of the slavery they seek to impose."

Allied policy is the "direct opposite," he continued, adding: "United nations forces will bring food for the starving and medicine for the sick. Every aid possible will be given to restore each of the liberated countries to soundness and strength, so that each may make its full contribution to United Nations victory, and to the peace which follows:"

Total value of lend-lease goods transferred and services rendered since the beginning of the program on March 11, 1941, to November 30, 1942, was placed at $7,496,000,000 in the report. This compared with $5,129,000,000 reported in the sixth report three months ago.

For the 12 months ended November 20, the first year of American participation in the war, lend-lease aid totaled $6,526,000,000.

Ten Billion Annually

The report placed the current rate of assistance at approximately 10 billion dollars annually. This is about 15 per cent of the current rate of spending "on the over-all United States war program," the President said, and "thus we are now putting about one-seventh of our total effort into lend-lease aid to the other United Nations."

The report said that while lend-lease aid continued to new record levels in the last quarter, the United States at the same time had "equipped and supplied rapidly growing numbers of American forces overseas, who will number more than one million by the end of this month. And, in combination with the British, we launched the North African offensive which involved the greatest single overseas force in history."

While the rapidly rising output of American factories has gone both to equip American forces and to aid our Allies, the report said:

"But there is still not enough. Many more American ships, planes, tanks, and guns will be required before the United Nations can wage the great offensives that can bring victory.

Ratio Has Risen

"Meanwhile within the limits of available production, we have sought to carry out the strategic principle embodied in the lend-lease idea: This is one war; it can be won only by all the United Nations together, combining their resources in such a way as to meet the enemy with the maximum force at the chosen time and places."

The report listed goods transferred since the program began in March, 1941, as $5,854,000,000, or 78 per cent of total aid rendered.

In the past, transfers have generally been made before goods were loaded aboard ship. Consequently not all goods recorded as transferred have actually been exported. About 10 per cent has remained in this country waiting shipment.

Starting December 1, however, transfers are being recorded as the goods are loaded. Hence, the figures for goods transferred hereafter will approximate exports.

The ratio of military items to nonmilitary items in lend-lease exports has risen from 25 per cent in September, 1941, to 56 per cent in October, 1942, when total lend-lease exports were $537,000,000, the report said.

While total monthly reports increased over six times during that period, exports of military items increased 14 times.

In October, 1942, approximately 40 per cent of lend-lease exports went to the United Kingdom, 21 per cent to Russia, and 39 per cent to other areas.

October shipments to Russia were nine times those in January, when goods were first exported to Rusia under lend-lease, as distinct from direct purchase exports, the report said.

Part of the military equipment exported to the United Kingdom has been sent by the British to Russia, Egypt, India and other areas. In addition, it was said, Great Britain has sent "a major share of its own production of war supplies to these fronts."

The report said the United States and Great Britain had shipped (not delivered) to Russia, during the past year, over the northern route alone, more than 3000 planes, more than 4000 tanks, more than 30,000 trucks, jeeps and other vehicles, and hundreds of thousands of tons of food, industrial raw materials, medical supplies and other products.

"Not all of these supplies have arrived," the report stated. "Convoys over the North Atlantic route have been subjected to heavy punishment by Nazi air, surface and undersea raiders."

Air Route to Burma

Supplies aggregating nearly 2,500,000 tons have been shipped over all routes from the United States to Russia in the past year.

"Although transportation to the U. S. S. R. continues to present extraordinary difficulties," said the report, "we are succeeding in delivering the great majority of our shipments."

Shipments by the southern route to the Red Sea-Persian Gulf area, it continued, have had to travel ocean distances of 10,000 to 13,000 miles, with additional long overland distances to be covered before supplies reach the front lines in Russia.

It added that ports, unloading and assembly facilities, roads and railroads have been greatly improved in the Red Sea-Persian Gulf area.

"Since the loss of Burma," the report said, "air transport across the Himalayas from India has been the only direct means of bringing lend-lease supplies into China.

"United States Army and China National Airways cargo planes are plying this dangerous route regularly but the quantities they have been able to carry so far have been small. We shall find ways to send more."

Roosevelt Gets Ward's-WLB Dispute Today

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The War Labor Board will report to President Roosevelt today that Montgomery Ward & Co. has refused to sign a union contract prescribed in a WLB directive last Tuesday. Enforcement of the order will then be up to the White House.

Settling a dispute which has dragged on since last summer, the WLB unanimously ordered Ward's to agree to check-off and maintenance-of-membership clauses sought by the C. I. O. union, which represents many of the firm's 100,000 employes.

Ward's spokesmen at a WLB hearing on Tuesday challenged the authority of both the WLB and the President either to issue the order or to enforce it. This was made official last night, when the WLB received a letter from Sewell Avery, Ward's president.

Promises to Obey President

Avery said his company "rejected" the order, but would "respectfully comply" if directed to do so by the President "as Commander in Chief in time of war."

It was the second time Ward's president had given such a promise.

The WLB gave its decision in the Ward's case on November 5 and the firm refused to obey. Avery said, however, that if the President told him to sign he would sign.

The President then directed the company to comply with the WLB directive, but Ward's insisted upon being allowed to put in the contract a declaration that the whole thing was illegal and was being signed under duress.

WLB Reaffirmed Award

So the dispute went back to the WLB, which reaffirmed its award last Tuesday, in a directive which set out the exact words—and left out the company's statement about illegality and duress.

The maintenance-of-membership clause has been awarded to many unions. It provides that union members may resign within 15 days after the contract is signed, but that after that they must remain in good standing with their unions if they wish to keep their jobs. The checkoff is an arrangement under which employers collect dues for the unions through pay deductions.

Concise

Boston, Dec. 11, (INS).—From distant China, the Rev. Harold W. Robinson, Warren, Vt., native, has sent the following concise cable to relatives:

"Well."

Roosevelt Urges U. S. Pay Adjustment

Senator Langer (Republican) of North Dakota stated flatly that he would block passage of any such resolution unless it made provisions for the remaining 40 per cent in the Federal service who get no overtime remuneration.

Langer seconded a plea made by Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York, sponsor of the pay bill, for corrective action. Mead pointed out that a continuing resolution would take care of the 1,700,000 War and Navy field workers but would give no consideration to the employes of "old line agencies who work 48 hours and only get paid for 40." Other Senators, including McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada and Davis (Republican) of Pennsylvania, joined in indorsing an equitable pay scale for all of the employes.

The Civil Service Committee, which has been unable to agree so far on any satisfactory compromise, will try Monday to work out some such plan which will still meet Barkley's demand for "something simple and practical."

The President's letter which stirred the issue back to life declared:

"The Government of the United States, which is the largest single employer in the Nation, has permitted a condition to develop regarding rates of pay, hours of work, and overtime compensation for its civilian employes which is grossly unfair, is one of the major causes of needlessly high personnel turnover, and is impeding the successful prosecution of the war effort."

He then summarized the present situation as follows:

1. Pay scales for mechanics and laborers in Navy yards and arsenals are adjustable to prevailing industrial rates, and are in a "satisfactory condition."

2. Most salaried employes—such as clerical workers, postal workers, professional, technical and administrative personnel—have their wages fixed by statute. They get no overtime pay for working more than 40 hours a week and have not had pay adjustments since 1930. Only in a few departments can they work longer than 44 hours because of the Saturday half-holiday law.

3. Employes of four agencies—the War and Navy Departments, the Maritime Commission and the Advisory Committee on Aeronautics—are given overtime under special statutes. This the President termed "a complete violation of the principle of equal pay for equal work which has been the guiding policy in Federal pay matters since the enactment of the Classification Act in 1923."

"I realize that the enactment of an adequate solution to the problem presents difficulties," he concluded. "I am not wedded to any particular formula for its solution. But I feel the problem is so urgent that unless the Congress is able to arrive at a solution within the next few days, legislation should be enacted that would delegate to the Chief Executive authority to deal with problems of wage and salary rates, hours of work, and overtime compensation within the Federal service, during the war period or until such time as Congress may otherwise provide."

Newlyweds Won't Settle Down Soon

facing more or less imminent induction."

Of 108 couples who revealed their plans for the next few months, 28 will rent unfurnished apartments or houses, 29 will take furnished apartments or houses, 24 will live with parents, 8 will live with other relatives or friends, 14 will live in boarding houses or hotels, 3 will live in Army posts, and two indicated other plans not listed in the report.

"One third of the couples interviewed do not know whether they will maintain, throughout the next year, the living arrangements they make during the first few months of married life," the report said.

"Eighteen are definitely planning to move into different quarters after a few months, 11 of whom will take unfurnished apartments or houses, while another plans to give up an unfurnished apartment in order to move into one already furnished, probably in a different city."

Of thirty-eight who explained why they were not taking an unfurnished apartment, 18 blamed pending military transfer, 7 cited prospective induction into the armed services, 7 cited housing conditions in Washington, 2 blamed their financial situation, and 4 gave oher reasons.

"A large majority of newlyweds do not plan to purchase any of a sizable list of household items," the report said.

"Taking all 120 couples together, the items most frequently purchased will be kitchen knives and other cutlery, cooking utensils, flatware and garbage cans, in that order. All types of furniture and bedsprings will be purchased with equal frequency."

The following table gives in percentages the number of newlyweds who will purchase or receive gifts of various household items:

District Bills

The Senate did a good day's work on District legislation yesterday. In a burst of speed that is characteristic of the last days of a session, it passed one minor local bill and three major ones. We hope that this action will permit at least the major bills to become law. For their loss now that they are so close to the goal of enactment would involve an enormous waste of time and energy. Two of these bills must go back to the House, however, and since that body cannot muster a quorum they can be passed only by unanimous consent.

Senate approval of the tax-exemption bill sends it straight to the White House, since it had already passed the House in its present form. This measure is a disappointment to the local Commissioners because it eliminates from the tax rolls large areas of real estate which the Commissioners had declared to be taxable in an effort to expand District revenue. Nevertheless, the bill corrects inequities which the city fathers themselves had pointed out. It eliminates the fogginess of the present law on tax-exemption and continues the sound policy of inviting cultural, religious, educational, and research organizations to make the Capital their headquarters. Final legislative action on the bill will give the Commissioners an opportunity to press for legislation to relieve the District of the burden resulting from excessive exemptions from local taxes.

Both the fire-escape and day-nursery bills, which still require House approval of Senate amendments, should be on the "must" list of measures to be enacted. Each has been stripped of controversial items so as to remove any possible excuse for further delay. All Congressmen should be aware of the urgent necessity of bringing overcrowded Washington's obsolete fire-escape regulations up to date before we have a repetition of the Boston tragedy. And nothing more needs to be said to establish the case for day nurseries that will facilitate the flow of women into our vital war industries.

Action on the bill to raise the pay of police and firemen may be expected next week. This bill seems to be in line with the policy of the Federal Government. Indeed, Congress will be inexcusably negligent if it adjourns without equitably adjusting the wartime pay scales of all Federal and District employes.

War And Literature

Wartime climate is not, as has been noted before, very favorable to the production of literature. This may be well observed in a survey of the publishers' list of the year now ending. The number of genuinely imaginative works has sadly fallen off; anthologies and "treasuries" drawing on the resources of more tranquil times have sharply increased. The same phenomenon has been noted in most other large-scale wars, and was conspicuously noticeable in the whole period from 1914 to 1918. The reasons are not hard to seek. Many writers are called to the colors, many others become so involved emotionally and imaginatively in the moral issues of the war that their work takes what we call nowadays a propagandistic turn.

But the rule is not invariable. Mr. Henry Seidel Canby, discussing the question in the current number of the Saturday Review of Literature, points to the familiar and much-mentioned case of Jane Austen. There is nothing in any of Jane Austen's works to suggest that she was more than vaguely aware of the tremendous events that were going on at no great distance from her. Mr. Canby's point is that in her complete preoccupation with the manners and foibles of her county families, the good Jane was, without knowing it, the finest sort of propagandist. She is, he goes on, one of those who have contributed most to Anglo-American solidarity in the present war. This solidarity, Mr. Canby seems to argue, is largely based on our understanding of the British "character and temperament moulded . . . through the centuries," and to that understanding Jane Austen has contributed more than a whole army of B. B. C. broadcasters.

We certainly wouldn't quarrel with Mr. Canby about this, nor with his consoling reminder to writers whose talents have not been enlisted by Mr. Davis or Mr. Donovan that they also serve who only keep on writing about people as they observe them without bothering too much about a "message." He might, however, have given a few other illustrations. He might have pointed out, for example, that there was a big-league ideological war going on while Montaigne was writing his essays and Shakespeare his plays. There was a similar war going on when Aristophanes was writing his finest comedies. At least two of them, to be sure, were frankly propaganda, and pacifist propaganda at that, in a time when (considering things in scale) Athens was involved in a conflict almost as "total" as the one in which we are involved now. The same war was also responsible for one of the finest Greek tragedies, "The Trojan Women" of Euripides.

Another point Mr. Canby might have mentioned is that the cessation of a long period of war and revolution is often marked by some great revival in arts in general and letters in particular. We might take as examples the Classical Age in Athens, following the Persian Wars, the Golden Age of Latin literature following the triumph of Octavian and the closing of the gates of Janus' temple, the first renaissance following the Crusades, and the great Romantic outburst following the French Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars. The early 1920's were undeniably a time of great literary excitement, if not exactly of great accomplishment. We don't, of course, guarantee that it will happen again. But it's a consoling thought—almost as consoling in its way as the moral Mr. Canby has drawn from the case of Jane Austen.

Halfway Measure

To call the War Manpower Commission's plan of stabilizing employment in the Detroit area a "freezing order" is to distort its meaning. The order is designed to prevent wasteful shifting of employes, whether from "pirating" by employers or "job shopping" by employes. It will help to keep workers in the jobs they now hold unless there is good reason for a change. Instead of trying to prevent transfers, however, one object is to establish an orderly means of effecting transfers wherever they appear to be in the national interest.

Undoubtedly the Detroit plan will be a notable improvement over the lax planning for use of manpower in the past. Still it invokes some very crude methods of accomplishing a desirable end. Workers are put on notice that if they leave their jobs they cannot be rehired in the area without a certificate of release from their present employers. Such certificates must be granted when men are not hired at their highest skills, when they are working only part time, when they must travel excessive distances to work, when wages and working conditions are less favorable than the prevailing standard, and when there are compelling personal reasons for a change. Apparently employes are free to leave their jobs for work in other cities or for no work at all if they have other means of subsistence.

In short, the Detroit plan puts no direct obligation upon the worker to continue serving his country with all his energy and skill in war factories. Montague A. Clark, WMC district director, admits that the only means of enforcing the agreement is by coercing employers holding war contracts. Should an employer hire a mechanic with no certificate of release from his former employer, the employer could be punished by taking away his war contract or taking over his plant. To say the least, these are complicated and costly ways of putting the right man in the right place.

The dispatches from Detroit leave a question also as to who will determine whether a man's highest skills are being used and when a particular factory has a surplus of skilled labor. If those decisions are left entirely to employers and workers, there will remain much opportunity for prodigal use of manpower. More accurate checks upon the full utilization of labor will doubtless have to wait upon the creation of a WMC inspection staff for war plants.

As labor shortages become more acute, moreover, men may have to be shifted to plants where their services are most needed regardless of their personal desires. At present WMC Czar McNutt has only the power to deprive men of jobs if they refuse to work wherever they may be sent. And that power appears to be held by a very slender thread. The need for a national service act has not been removed. If only for the sake of clarifying the obligation which every man owes to his country in time of war and of substituting direct enforcement methods for the crude arrangements now in use, we think that enactment of a national service bill will be one of the first obligations of the new Congress.

Balanced Navy

It was perhaps fortuitous that the word balance, used the other day by Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal to describe the composition of the American fleet, applied so neatly to naval launchings over the "Pearl Harbor weekend." But it is nevertheless worth noting that among the ships sent down the ways were a battleship—the New Jersey—an aircraft carrier, a cruiser, several destroyers, a submarine, a transport and various auxiliary craft. This, of course, was a remarkably complete cross-section of fleet types. Following as it did many naval launchings in recent weeks, it was a pointed reminder that the two-ocean Navy is really taking shape.

Last summer Admiral King said that the Navy would hit its stride in about a year's time, that the two-ocean Navy was not yet in service, but that the smaller ships for it would be ready around Thanksgiving or Christmas. The Navy naturally has no intention of disclosing all of the new units that have joined the fleet. Yet to the host of light vessels recently launched or commissioned must be added many powerful heavy units. It was announced some time ago, for instance, that the new battleship North Carolina was in service. And at the launching of the New Jersey on Monday, Mr. Forrestal revealed that three other battleships of the North Carolina class—the Washington, South Dakota and Massachusetts—are also in service. Moreover, the remaining two ships of the same class—the Indiana and Alabama—are believed to be about ready. And, of the Iowa class, the Iowa and New Jersey should be commissioned perhaps by late spring.

Of course, dozens of aircraft carriers and cruisers now building must be launched before it can fairly be said that our heavy-unit requirements for a two-ocean Navy are in hand. But the progress of naval ship construction in all categories has been little short of remarkable, and it certainly will not help the enemy if we acknowledge it.

Beveridge Plan

American copyists of things British will not be comforted by Sir William Beveridge's observations on the application to America of his plan for expanded social security. Interviewed by a Canadian broadcaster last weekend, he was asked: Would you say your plan would meet America's needs? Sir William replied, "In one important way it would not. This country (Great Britain) is more homogeneous than America in the matter of wage levels. I mean there is greater variation from region to region there than there is here." The observation is somewhat elliptical. But the meaning is clear enough to those who have the background. What the British economist means is that a flat subsistence benefit such as his scheme provides for compact little Britain would be unfair to apply to a big and varied country where living standards are diverse.

The diversity in our living standards is reflected or recognized in the greatest wage differentials of any country in the world. Perhaps the widest ranges are to be found in the unskilled and farm worker groups. Rural wages vary all the way from a low of $1.25 a day in South Carolina to $6.10 a day in the State of Washington. The diversity in payment for common labor is not so extreme, still the contrast is striking. In North Carolina an average of 31½ cents an hour is reported, but the hourly rate is 73.8 cents in the State of Washington. Within manufacturing industry differences are less, yet big enough to bedevil any standard system for dispensing unemployment benefits. According to the latest figures, the average pay in the cotton mills of New England is 60.7 cents an hour, contrasted with 53.4 cents in South Carolina. Even in a single aircraft plant in this country there might be a range in the remuneration of workers of more than 100 per cent.

But over and above the economic reason against the application of British experience to our country is the political reason. We in this country live under a dual Federal system resting upon a maximum of local government vested in the constituent States. Fear of tyranny—or, as we now say, authoritarianism—was doubtless the major cause for our strict definition of the powers of our central government. But our system at the same time corresponds to the economic realities. That local government has been our great unifying strength is the testimony of such historians as De Tocqueville, who noted 80 years ago that the glory of America was the manner in which we practiced the art of government in a small sphere. Down the years, to be sure, the central government has grown at the expense of local government, but the American way in its political connotation still rests solidly on local antonomy.

It is because of both the economic differentials in our country and our political system that our social security machinery differs from the British. The British system is as centralized as British government. Moreover, in so far as concerns unemployment insurance, which the Beveridge report would expand in Britain, the benefits are aimed at insuring subsistence, or freedom from want. In this country the machinery is decentralized in conformity with our political institutions and the benefits are related to our divergent wage levels. Sir William Beveridge understands these differences, if his American followers don't. Any attempt to imitate British practice in this respect would mean the dislocation of our social security machinery and the undermining of our political system. Change, if it is to be constructive, should always be grafted onto the peculiarities of historical development and actual conditions.

ON SUBLIMATION

Be glad, O tree!
No more at moonrise will there rest
The lonely silver of the evening star upon your crest;
No more at sunset burn the sun
Caught in the net your branches spun.

Only the hungering saw has tasted your living heart;
Metal has split your veins and rent your vitals asunder.
No more shall your branches lift with the pride of your living heart
Defiant, against the thunder.

Stretch out your ugly arms bearing your Bleeding Fruit,
Fruit that can never fade!
Lift Him high, O tree!
Sing in your maimed heart,
Make melody!

All men come seeking your fruit;
The world is drawn to your shade.

Letters To The Editor

Unseen Leaders

Whether the demand for leaders be great or not, the response to it is great in number and spirit. And times like ours have truly shown that leaders can crop up whenever the need arises. But whether the need for leaders is great or not, the fact remains that there will always be leaders. They need not wear any special kind of robe or dress of office or position. Neither need they be addressed with any title that associates them with an office, but they're known to each and every one of us. We know them generally as friends or as neighbors. And we see in their good works that which makes them the good citizens of the community.

Actions that set good examples constitute good leadership. They lead others to do the right thing. Those who live the life of good example are truly leaders in an unseen way. They do not ask for any reward, in return. All they hope and live for is a world filled with "the four freedoms," freedom of thought, freedom of conscience, freedom from want, and freedom from fear.

There are many unseen leaders fighting for "the four freedoms." They are everywhere, the unseen leaders, in the Army, in the Navy in the Marines, in the production industries, in the schools and colleges, in the churches, and in all walks of life.

Their example is a great asset to the Nation and also a striking blow against the enemy that will help to win the war.

Teachers And Overtime Pay

Teachers are surely being disregarded in that matter of overtime pay for the duration. Of course this does not include those in the school system who wear the embroidered garments and sit in the high places at feasts, but it means the classroom teacher who comes into direct contact with the runny noses, the 49 snowsuits, the multiplication tables, and democracy. She will be passed by when the packages of overtime are taken off the Christmas tree and handed around.

The indelible concept of the teacher sitting at a desk all day with nothing to think about and only one thing to do, dies hard. I wonder who is responsible for that concept. Isn't it the product of the immature mind, the mind of the child who rationalized at his desk in the long ago, and silently and resentfully contemplated the very easy life of the teacher who merely sat while he slaved over the nine table?

The modern child just cannot sit within the confines of abstract arithmetic as the children of past generations did. He is a product of the time in which he is living. He is a small dynamo eager for the go-ahead signal. The teacher has 49 of them. She has them just at the period of the day when stored up energy must be freed. They are all ready now, to make change in the grocery store, the store that they built themselves right in the schoolroom. They are not waiting for the distant future. They buy, sell, make change, deliver, then sit around the council table and discuss most intelligently the steps by which the past has grown into our present social and economic system. They know how and why banks came to be, along with other social institutions. This is real to them now because they learn it by real experiences.

Now, how do these experiences come about? They do not just happen to spring into being just for the occasion. The teacher provides these situations in a series, as parts of a coordinated, whole. They are integrated parts of life problems. The teacher has been at work planning while the child slept, ate, and played. She knows that she is to act as a transformer to overcharged carriers of life and power. She has been gathering material both tangible and spiritual. It takes hours of research to find and prepare for presentation just the right picture, poem, historical incident, biographical sketch, or story. It may take varying amounts of real cash also—we might as well be frank—the purchase of a portable Victrola or typewriter for use in the schoolroom is not unusual, along with unmeasured quantities of colored paper, thumbtacks, red ink, cardboard, Scotch tape, and jars and jars of paste. It means traveling from library to library and stores, it means hours of printing by hand and then mimeographing far into the night hours.

You take your little daughter to an ear specialist when she has an earache, Mr. Congressman, and you willingly pay him from $5 to $15 a visit. That is because he is a specialist. He has spent years of his life in hard work and thousands of dollars to just get ready to give your child relief. He must have compensation adequate to his own well-being, so he can keep on giving good service. You agree to that. He must have good tools to work with, modern, clean and efficient. He must be a live, good appearing, genial member of society. You agree to that, also. The teacher is the one who makes the indelible impressions, the permanent records on your child's mind, that delicate, mysterious organ which the physician cannot replace. She is a specialist too. It also took years of college credit, thousands of dollars, and great expenditure of energy to make a teacher. She is also subject to physical laws and needs the same amount and quality of refueling as do specialists in other lines.

Coming back to overtime pay, well, can you measure the flow of the ocean tide? The value of a teacher's work cannot be measured in terms of work hours you see, because her work and her life are so closely integrated. It is also subject to the ebb and flow of public opinion. But whatever you think about that, please, please, obliterate here and now that childhood concept of the teacher with nothing to think about, only one thing to do, and with emotional reactions at zero.

A TEACHER.

4-F's

I have just read an article in the January American Magazine by Paul V. McNutt on the labor problem facing the Nation in 1943.

I am interested in this because I am unemployed. I am unemployed because I am in 4-F. What are they going to do with us. My case is typical. I know, I have talked to dozens in my search for employment.

In 1940 I left private work for construction work on defense plants. I was a material expediter on three plants in three different States. All during this time I handled an organization of approximately 100 men. I did not lose even an hour from work. I bought bonds regularly to be used for the education of a 7-year-old son. At the request of my employer, my local board granted me a deferment until the third plant was practically completed. When my deferment was up I reported for induction and was rejected.

When I apply at employment offices and personnel offices my Selective Service status strips the gears. I get the usual polite, "We'll take your application."

The trip to the induction center surely didn't take away my experience and ability.

We want to work, we want to buy bonds, we know that this is our war, we know that the least we can do now is pass the ammunition and let the 1-A's do the firing.

So, Mr. McNutt, in your program on manpower please give us all the consideration you possibly can.

War And Art

The articles in Sunday's Post regarding Corporal Davis' statement, "We blow up bridges by day and paint murals at night," brings to my mind the young Norwegian air force fellows in Toronto, Ontario. Many of these fellows fled from Norway under hazardous circumstances to allied ports and eventually found their way to the training center in Toronto known as "Little Norway." During the days they study and train with grim determination toward the time that they'll return to oust the enemy from their homeland. At nights they flock to the special art classes held open for them at the Ontario Art Gallery. It is significant that in spite of bitter past experiences and equally cruel days ahead these chaps cling to the finer things which help to create beauty in our civilization. We can well hope for a better world with Allies such as these when peace comes.

Constant Reminder

When dictating my correspondence this morning, it occurred to me that on every letter written on this date, as long as there is a December 7 in history, the writers should show the phrase, "Remember Pearl Harbor!"

It is only by means of such a constant reminder to be handed down from generation to generation that such a day as December 7, 1941, will be made to live in infamy throughout the ages.

The Pomander, The Iceman And Me

I don't suppose anybody will ever again make me feel as silly as the iceman did that Christmastime three years ago. The pomander craze was at its top peak, and if you, by any chance, don't know what a pomander is, it is an apple stuck full of cloves, head clove against head, until the whole thing makes a solid prickly ball, smelling to the heavens of spice and all trussed up with red ribbons.

It can be hung on a nail in the clothes closet or kept in a bureau drawer where it is supposed to impart to the contents a certain subtle something reminiscent of the perfumes of Araby. This perfume is delightfully appealing to the female nostril. To me it suggests grandmaw's mince pies—appealing, still, of course, but in a more mundane way!

Well, anyway, my wife decided that season that the recently unloosed vogue for pomanders was the answer to the maiden's prayer and that her Christmas gift problem was solved at one fell swoop. The things were selling at two bucks per in the swankiest shops but could be duplicated at home for a tenth of that, and all the girls would, she was dead sure, be crazy about 'em.

The only drawback to the swell idea was that it took hours and hours to jab the cloves in and with her housework, her office hours, and the general holiday rush, how could she get them done in time, especially as she was planning on practically a nation-wide distribution. Personally, I never felt I was cut out for fancywork, but you know how the well-known Christmas spirit gets into us all at such times, and what could I do, really, but offer to help the old girl out? I was working only a half shift a day and had several hours free, and so-o-o-o you know the rest. But don't blame me too much. After all, it wasn't the first time that a man's better nature had succumbed to a trap set by a woman and baited with the fruit of the tree Malus malus; family Pomaceae!

Spread out on the kitchen table were my heaps of cloves and my apples. Working diligently at punching the endless little sharp-pronged instruments of torture into the sticky, juice-oozing fruit, sat I, when along comes the iceman. He deposited his wares in the box nearby then shuffled over and paused beside my chair. I could feel what the novelists call a rose-tinted blush forming away down in my heel cords and gradually sneaking up my more than 6 feet of spinal column to burst into full bloom on the bald spot crowning my head.

I muttered "Hello" in my best manly bass, but there didn't seem to be anything else to say, though he continued to stand there for what seemed to be an awful long time. I went on punch-punching, feeling pretty much as I might have felt if my football coach had caught me crocheting on the sidelines. Then, without a word, the great burly ice vender turned away and lumbered down the stairs. As he went out the door I turned my eye around to the farthest limit of its orbit and peered after him. What seemed to be an amusedly sarcastic smile still disturbed the contour of his whiskery jowls.

The next day I took great care not to begin my pomander-making until he had come and gone, and I kept out of sight, too. The third day, however, I bumped full into him on the stairs coming up. His face lighted up as he recognized me. I was suspicious of that flicker and immediately summoned all the dignity I could muster, and with a curt nod started to pass him. He'd darned well better not make any flip cracks at me! But he halted, blocking my way. "Oh say, Mister," he broke forth in eager tones. "I've been wantin' to see you and ask you sompin. It's about them apple-things. Mebbe you c'n tell me what's wrong. I went home and tried it and when I got it almost done a great big chunk broke right outer one side—tell me, what'd I do that wasn't right?"

Mediterranean Tides

In the Letters to the Editor of the December 9 Post I note a letter from Maurice Burke of Ottawa, Ontario, in which he criticizes The Post for making a statement relative to Tunisia in the issue of November 25 to the effect that "its waters are so shallow that it is almost unapproachable for four hours at low tide."

Mr. Burke states that this is an error and that he had never noted a tide in the Mediterranean although he had resided on its shores for more than 20 years.

Let The Post stick to its guns and let Mr. Burke consult the excellent tide tables published by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey wherein he will discover that the tides at Gabes in Tunisia reach a daily range of up to 6 feet.

Christmas Giving

I must write to praise the woman's page column by Malvina Lindsay today on Christmas giving, card sending, etc., during this awful war period. Want to ask you to put it on your front page, because as many people as possible should realize that this is not a "Christmas as usual." I, too, was as happy with the simple gifts of the last generation's Christmases as those elaborate ones of recent years.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Lesson Of 1919

LIPPMANN

THIS WOULD seem to be a good time to reexamine the impression which is widely held here and abroad as to why the American people became so isolationist after President Wilson came back from Paris with the Treaty of Versailles. According to the legend an idealistic President led an unconvinced people to "intervene" in a European war and was then repudiated by a people who were unwilling to shoulder their responsibilities as a great power. That is, no doubt, the way it looked. But that is not, I believe, what happened.

The misunderstanding arose because it has long been the habit, perhaps not a very good one, of American statesmen to employ high-sounding generalities when they are declaring our national purposes. But if we look behind the words to the events, it can be shown, I think, that the United States emerged from its isolation not under the leadership of Wilson but in fact about 20 years earlier—under the pressure of events in the Caribbean and in the Pacific, under the leadership of Theodore Roosevelt and under the teachings that stem from Admiral Mahan. In the years before Wilson the United States had already assumed responsibilities as far away as the Philippines, and had started to become a two-ocean naval power by constructing the Panama Canal, had recognized its vital interest in the peace of Asia by participating in the settlement of the Russo-Japanese war, and in the peace of Europe by diplomatic action at the Algeciras Conference, and in other ways.

WILSON did not initiate the recognition by Americans that they had a vital interest in the affairs of the outer world. Indeed he had to be prodded by Theodore Roosevelt and Elihu Root and others. Nor is it true that the decision to intervene in 1917 was taken on the grounds which are generally associated with the legendary Wilson. The decision to intervene in 1917, like the decision to support Britain in 1940, was taken on the ground of the fundamental security of the United States—to prevent the aggressive imperialism of Germany from reaching the Atlantic Ocean by destroying the British power.

Only by bearing these controlling considerations in mind can we penetrate the mists of abstract words and understand what happened while Wilson was in Paris and after he came home. For that was when the reactionary postwar isolationist movement began.

WHAT SET it in motion, as distinguished from the stupidity and demoralization into which it later developed, was not the handful of irreconcilable Senators such as Lodge, Borah, and Johnson. It was the belief, which grew upon many if not most of President Wilson's supporters, that the Paris settlement was so unworkable that it almost certainly condemned Europe to further and greater wars and revolutions. Though it is widely believed that the United States withdrew from the settlement because of the League of Nations covenant, the fact is that the revulsion of American opinion started because so many leading men thought the settlement made the League dangerously unworkable.

Here, for example, is a sample, not at all unrepresentative, of what Wilson's friends began to think in May, 1919, when the terms of the treaty were disclosed: it will "shake the whole edifice of European society. Looked at from the purely American point of view, on a cold calculation of probabilities, we do not see how this treaty is anything but the prelude to quarrels in a deeply divided and hideously embittered Europe . . . It will abandon society to an irresistible conflict between the immoral and intransigent forces of Junkerism and revolutionary socialisms."

THE POINT of all this today is that it would be a grave error for our allies to think that the kind of settlement which is possible at the end of the war will be determined solely by American willingness or unwillingness to participate in it. For it is equally true, and for the moment it is important to emphasize this neglected aspect of the matter, that the kind of settlement which becomes feasible will profoundly affect the American participation in it. The more promising the settlement looks, the more the American people will be disposed to participate, and the more they participate, the more promising will be the settlement.

It is for this reason that so much hangs upon Mr. Sumner Welles' declaration last month that "we cannot afford to permit the basic issues . . . to be resolved without prior agreements" among the United Nations. For if we come to the peace congress with great unsettled frontier disputes among the allies, the controversies which follow will divide the United Nations among themselves and within most of them.

IT WOULD, for example, be difficult to imagine a peace congress which inspired the confidence of the peoples of the world if it had to pause in its constructive labors to arbitrate the boundaries of Poland and Russia. Questions of this sort have to be settled now, by friendly prior agreement, or the effort to settle them later may prevent us, by fomenting isolationism in all countries, from settling the infinitely more important questions that have to be dealt with if the world is to be a tolerable place to live in.

If questions of this type are not settled before the armistice, and the essentials of the settlement embodied in the armistice itself the necessary work of relief and rehabilitation, and the poignant task of bringing about a successful demobilization, will be made insuperably difficult. If there are to be boundary disputes among the United Nations, with all that they would bring with them in the way of local violence and the instability of the provisional postwar governments, it is hard to see how great constructive projects can be carried through.

In order to recover from this frightfully devastating war, the United Nations in continental Europe will have to cooperate as they have never in their previous history cooperated. For while the American nations of this hemisphere and the British nations and the empire can and must supply the initial means of recovery and rehabilitation, their best intentions will be frustrated if the continental nations do not quickly provide such things as pooled transportation, an integrated currency, all manner of administrative services, and the spirit of mutual aid which these things imply.

THUS it is not enough for Americans to convince themselves that they have a vital interest in the security and the restoration of Europe. It is no less necessary for Europeans to take heroic measures to make their own security and their own restoration a practical and a promising expectation.

Therefore, it would be impossible to insist too strongly that now, as a quarter of a century ago, what we do and what our European allies do are profoundly interrelated. For they, quite as much as we, will determine whether we succeed or fail in bringing an ordered peace to our world.

Swedish Neutrality

By Maurice Feldman

Policy With Teeth

A FEW WEEKS ago George Branting, the son of the founder of the Swedish Social Democratic Party, Hjalmar Branting, wrote an article in the afternoon paper, Aftontidningen, in which he asked if it is true that Sweden has been requested to grant facilities for German soldiers to cross that country in the event of an Allied attack on Norway. Branting said that "certain quarters" had made the request and added: "What justification is there for preventing an Allied attack on the Germans in Norway?"

A Swedish authority, who is now in this country and with whom this writer had a long conversation the other day, told me that the Germans would probably try to use the Swedish railways and other communications, in case of an Allied landing in northern Norway. The Swedes think that such a landing may be possible in the near future to secure the sea-communications to Russia without any disturbance by the Nazis. My informant says that every demand of the Nazis in this direction would be rejected by the Swedish government. In such a case the Swedes would fight against the Nazis and have the help of the United Nations landing forces.

Are Well Armed

The Swedes have at the moment about 600,000 well armed troops at their disposition. The Swedish air force has about 50 squadrons of fighter, bomber and reconnaissance planes, furthermore 487 operating aircraft with a tremendous reserve. The Swedish navy may become the decisive factor in the Baltic Sea. The navy has at present 8 battleships, 2 cruisers, 1 airplane carrier, 25 destroyers, 16 motor torpedo boats, 32 submarines, 1 mine layer, 18 fleet mine sweepers, 84 mine sweepers and submarine chasers, 12 depot and mother ships. There are furthermore about 125 naval auxiliary vessels. Under construction are two cruisers, Goesta Lejon and Tre Kronor, three large destroyers and motor torpedo boats, part of them may have been already finished. The air raid shelters are provided with air-conditioning equipment and are up to date as far as sanitary installations are concerned. There is a large air raid warden corps, home defense unit and 85,000 women serving as auxiliary forces.

In the last few days revision of the army regulations were finished. Its purpose is to oust all officers and soldiers, who might be not reliable enough in case of a war against Germany. According to the new regulations, which were worked out by Gen. Olof Thoernell, commander-in-chief of the Swedish armed forces, "professional soldiers will be prohibited from belonging to certain organizations that are inimical to the state." Furthermore, all defense personnel are forbidden to attend meetings of such organizations. The new regulations include: "Special arrangements for the military service of members of these organizations; the banning of distribution of publications of these groups within the military, and the checking of the public appearances of 'certain holders of military commands,' who are members of these organizations, to prevent the abuse of the freedom of speech."

German Sympathizers Ousted

"Some of the army personnel, particularly members of extremist parties, who are considered undependable because of their attitude toward potential enemy powers," General Thoernell continues in his report, "have already been placed where they can do no harm, and where their commanders can keep a close check on them. This applies also to noncommissioned officers, who have not been given staff posts or access to secret documents."

"Fears that Sweden's defense forces will not be reliable, in all situations, are totally unfounded, but experience, however, shows that isolated individuals need supervision."

The whole Swedish press hails the new regulations as a move to make any military fifth columnists innocuous. Sweden's situation is different than in the last war. Now all her neighbors are belligerents. Norway and Denmark are fighting on the side of the United Nations, both countries being occupied by the Germans. Finland is completely under German domination, her soldiers fighting shoulder to shoulder with the Nazis. Sweden is the only remaining neutral country in Scandinavia and preparing for a thorough resistance against anybody, who might violate her neutrality.

Cuba's Problem

By Virginia Prewett

How It Concerns Us

THE VISIT of President Fulgencio Batista of Cuba to Washington to confer with President Roosevelt is another of a long series of consultations through which representatives of the American republics, from chief executives on down, are continually working on the system of cooperation that has been developed in the Western Hemisphere in the past decade. For a long time the general public associated this system chiefly with diplomatic gestures and vague "good will." Proof that it is very practical and realistic is obvious today for two main reasons. First, in spite of the Axis' well-laid plans to cause many kinds of trouble here, there is complete peace and order within the Western Hemisphere, the only great division of the world where there are no battlefields. Secondly, the American nations are now organized to produce vast amounts of war supplies and to meet difficult internal problems that face each one of them.

PREWETT

In building the Inter-American system, no greater progress has been made than on relations between the United States and Cuba. That country is vitally important to us for many reasons. She is very near Florida and guards the Atlantic approach to the Panama Canal. We have a much larger dollar investment there than in any other Latin American country. Furthermore, in peace times Cuba is about our best Latin American customer.

After the Spanish-American War gave the island her independence from Spain, the United States obtained from the new republic the right to intervene there in both political and economic affairs. The Cubans were never reconciled to this. During and after the First World War American money poured in and expanded the island's sugar industry. In 1930 the Smoot-Hawley tariff cut Cuba's American sugar market by about 70 per cent. Politico - economic repercussions threw Cuba into internal chaos and brought Cuban-American relations to an all-time low.

Relations With Us Improved

After the United States changed its foreign policy for Latin America in 1933, we gave up our rights of intervention. The treaty under which we did so was signed in 1934 and ratified in 1936. A trade agreement in 1934 arrested the raid that the American economic nationalists were making on the American-owned Cuban sugar industry and the island's economy as a whole. Since then, Cuba has been working toward internal peace, and relations with this country have steadily improved. None of the Latin republics has been more wholehearted in building the hemisphere defense system since the Second World War started.

Cuba like every nation under direct or indirect attack by the Axis is today confronted by an approaching crisis. She is not threatened by invasion and none of her young men are being killed in battle, but she does face a dilemma on the economic front that her experts have been trying to work out with our own.

Sugar production makes up 70 to 80 per cent of her exports and is the economic activity on which all others are pyramided. In recent years the tourist trade has been a big source of income, tobacco and coffee growing have gained importance, light manufacturing has started and mining has been stimulated. In 1937 a government rent-control plan started a mild building boom that helped to relieve the chronic economic ills that Cuba suffers from as a one-crop country. Recently also Cuba has begun to produce quantities of fresh vegetables to supply our Atlantic seaboard in Florida's off-season.

All these activities have been cut into by war. The tourist trade is gone, there are no refrigerator ships to take out the fresh vegetables, and structural steel for building is scarce. Mining activity is up, but the number of people affected is relatively small. Manufacturers can sell as much as they can produce, but are threatened with severe shortages in raw materials there as they are all over the hemisphere.

There are various ways in which the effects of all this can be cushioned. Pick and shovel projects like road building can take up some slack in employment. The island will have to convert as much of its economic effort as possible to making itself self-sufficient in food and all other supplies until the war is won. Some kinds of business activity will necessarily have to come to a full stop and there will be plenty of economic casualties of war there as well as here. This is the same pattern that is forming in whole or in part in all the New World countries.

We Must Underwrite Crops

But the fact remains that sugar is Cuba's life and Cuba cannot live unless sugar production goes on. She had a good crop last year. She had lost European markets, but the crop was financed by United States loans and direct purchases. This gave Cuba a higher average price for sugar, but supplies from us cost more and a general inflation more than offset the effect of the better sugar price and better sugar wages.

The question about Cuba now is how much sugar she should produce from standing cane and how much she should plant and grind during 1943. War demands on our shipping make it certain that there will be no bottoms for bulk shipping in 1943 and the island's storage capacity is already 30 per cent full.

Cuba's economy cannot be allowed to collapse and we shall have to underwrite next year's crops one way or another as a matter of economic defense. In Cuban-American councils there is a school of thought that favors a full-production schedule for Cuba in 1943 as a means of stockpiling for the inevitable tremendous demand that will come with peace. Another favors a reduced production, a rate that will keep Cuba going even if she has to pull in her belt, but will not fill her storage capacity to overflowing with 1943's crop and leave an even worse situation to be met in 1944.

In the final analysis, the difference of opinion is a difference on how long the war will last. If it could be won by the end of 1943, the first plan would undoubtedly be desirable. If not, then the more gradual stockpiling would be much better for Cuba.

Judging by precedents in recent inter-American relations, it is safe to assume that the formula finally worked out will fit the realities of war above everything else. This must be so, since the chief interest of both the United States and Cuba today is the defeat of a common enemy in a war for survival.

The Once Over

Psychopathic Case

"Where ya going now?" the doctor asked as Elmer Twitchell put on his things and started for the door, talking to himself, and pretty sore that he got so few answers.

"Tire inspection," said Elmer, holding up a percolator.

"That isn't a tire," said the doctor, who had Elmer under observation.

"What of it?" snapped Elmer. "Maybe the inspectors will be just as mixed up as I am by all this stuff."

"You'd better lie down a while and rest," argued the doctor.

"I can't lie down."

"Why not?"

"No permit."

"You don't need a permit to lie down," insisted the physician.

"Oh yes I do," replied Elmer. "I exceeded my November lying-down quota."

* * * *

The doctor led Elmer gently away from the door to a chair.

"Very well, here's a few extra coupons entitling you to lie down a few more times," he said, trying to humor Mr. Twitchell.

"No good," snapped Elmer, looking at a couple of coat checks the doctor has handed him. "They ain't signed."

"You sign 'em," suggested the doctor.

"All right, but I gotta write my license number across the back, also my blood pressure, maiden name and the score of the last football game I saw. Got a pen?"

"Yes," said the doctor, handing him one.

"My, my! This should have been turned in at the American Express office," exclaimed Elmer.

"What should have been turned in?"

"The pen. It's all gone on one side. Needs recapping."

"I'll tell you what we'll do," suggested the doctor, consolingly, "let's play a game of pinochle."

"We played two games."

"Let's play the rubber," said the doctor.

Elmer leaped from his chair with a frightened look.

"Sh-h-h-h-h—!" he cautioned. "Do you want to get into trouble? The penalty's ten years and $10,000 fine for that sort of thing. There are other uses for rubber than in pinochle. I'm surprised at you. I'll bet you're the kind of man who don't even try to keep butter down to 36 miles an hour."

* * * *

Here there was the sound of an auto truck without and presently a loud rumbling noise.

"Another load," he said.

"Of what?"

"Coupon books. C'mon, I got to move into that larger house, the big place on the hill."

"What for?"

"Not enough room for coupon books here. Only eleven-room house. Other place much better. Got 22 rooms, including a master's coffee can, three guest inspectors and a kitchen with hot and cold oil problems. Also a porch just for filling in the spaces where it says 'Print Your Full Name.'"

* * * *

The doctor sneaked up behind Mr. Twitchell and again slugged him with a vase.

"Give color of eyes . . . State how many in family . . . Got any tires concealed in the butter plate of any relatives? . . . Subtract the steak you had last Thursday from number of tires carried on car," stammered Elmer.

The doctor saw it would be necessary to hit him again and did so.

Inside Germany

By Barnet Nover

The Army, The Party And The War

THE REMOVAL of Gen. Franz Halder as chief of the German General Staff, long rumored and now confirmed, and his replacement by Gen. Kurt Zeitzler, intimate friend of Heinrich Himmler, is an event of first-rate importance.

NOVER

Its significance is threefold: It is, in the first place, a manifestation of Hitler's anger over the German army's failure to take Stalingrad, which the Fuehrer had assured the German people would be taken. Secondly, it reflects the revolutionary change now taking place in German military strategy. And, above and beyond all, it marks a further stage in the Nazi regime's preparations for the forthcoming Battle of Germany.

DURING the past few months Hitler and other Nazi spokesmen have indicated to the German people that the Reich may, henceforth, have to go on the defensive for long periods and over large stretches of an ever-widening front.

This decision was forced upon Germany by her declining reserves in military manpower, the result of the great losses she has suffered on the Eastern Front; by the growing power of the Allies, particularly in the air; and by the circumstance that Germany is being left behind in the vital production race.

For all of the territorial gains made by the German army in Russia since last June, and they have been considerable, 1942 has been a black year for the Reich. The Russian army has not been destroyed. Stalingrad and the Caucasus have not been taken and in Egypt the German forces have suffered a major and possibly an irretrievable disaster. Now it begins to appear that the costly German campaign in Tunisia can only delay but cannot indefinitely prevent the establishment by the Allies of complete control of the entire North African coast.

So, far from being in a position to expand their conquests, the Nazis must now begin to concentrate on how best to hold on to what they have won. The hope of an early victory for Germany was long ago abandoned. The only hope that now remains is that by withdrawing behind the walls of the European continent and by transforming it into a fortress capable of withstanding an indefinite siege, Germany will be able to wear out the Allies and win at least a compromise peace.

BUT SUCH A SHIFT from offensive to defensive warfare involves not only a major regrouping of German military force but vast psychological readjustments as well.

It involves not only the final abandonment of that total victory which Hitler has again and again promised his people but also the rooting out of memories that have burned deep in the German consciousness, in particular the memories of what happened in 1918.

Then the German army gave up the ghost even before an inch of German soil had been invaded by the Allies, while Germany's manpower losses were still only a fraction of those which her enemies had suffered and while Germany was still astride much of Europe.

Because he realizes that Germans, civilians and soldiers alike, remember all that and are also aware that this year marks, as 1918 marked, the fourth year of war, Hitler has made a strenuous effort to persuade the people that what happened then cannot happen now.

SUCH ASSURANCES will not and cannot alone prevent an internal German collapse once the siege of Fortress Europe begins in earnest. So even while boasting that he is not the Kaiser and knows no such word as capitulation, Hitler has been feverishly building up the defenses of western and southern Europe and also, with Heinrich Himmler's assistance, strengthening his grip on the home front.

The problem of the home front has been troubling the Nazis for a long time. As far back as 1937, two years before the war, Heinrich Himmler warned the black-shirted SS that:

"In any future war we shall have not only a land front, a sea front and an air front, but a fourth front as well—Germany itself. This inside theater of war will be the decisive one."

WHATEVER OTHER meaning the changes that Hitler has brought about in the composition of the German general staff and other branches of the Wehrmacht may have, one of its most important aspects is that it represents an attempt to correlate the struggle against the Allies with the struggle against Hitler's present and potential enemies within the Reich.

If the Nazi regime is to wage defensive war successfully along the perimeters of Fortress Europe, it must, first of all, wage offensive war at home. This does not mean that the German people today are ready for revolt. Nor does it mean that the old-line German generals are no longer willing to take orders from Hitler. But these are possibilities which the Nazis cannot ignore.

The generals, no doubt, realize that while after the last war they kept their power and their prerogatives unimpaired, their group cannot survive another defeat. They know that, whether they like it or not, their fate as a class is bound up with the fate of the Nazi regime. Nonetheless, the existence of a Nazi Praetorian Guard side by side with the army and endowed with vast and growing powers has never pleased them.

As military technicians they hate to see so large a body of trained men kept at home at a time when they are desperately needed at the front. As individuals, they dislike to have to take orders from men they regard as upstarts and ignoramuses. But Hitler has seen to it that this discontent by the Junker aristocracy in the army will be kept in check. The old-line generals may feel that even in defeat they may salvage something for themselves out of the wreckage if they avoid a conflict with the nation. But Hitler is determined that, should it come to that, he will use the army against the people. The appointment of Gen. Kurt Zeitzler is an indication that the S. S., which once was the equal of the army, is now completely in the saddle.

The Gallup Poll

War Inspires Increased Reading of Bible; 10 in Every 100 Study Part of It Every Day

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 11.—What effect has one year of warfare had upon the religious thinking of the American people?

The answer to this question may be found in part by an examination of the Bible-reading habits of people throughout the country.

At the suggestion of the American Bible Society, which, with churches all over the country, will mark Universal Bible Sunday tomorrow, the Institute had field reporters sound the American people on the use they have been making of the Bible in their homes.

The survey, taken from coast-to-coast, reveals that whereas 10 in every 100 persons interviewed say they read the Bible every day, 41 out of every 100 frankly admit that they have not looked in the Bible within the last year.

Translated into terms of the adult population, this means that about 8½ million people say they read their Bibles daily, that about 35 million say they have not read it within a year.

More Reading Bible

Five in every 100, or a little more than four million persons say they are reading the Bible more often today than they did before the war.

On the other hand, a small percentage say they are not reading the Bible as much as they did before the war because of the pressure of extra work since Pearl Harbor.

Many of those who said they were not reading the Bible any more frequently than heretofore point out that they are reading it more seriously now, either because they have come to depend upon their religion more than before the war or because they hope to get better understanding of the war and the future of the world from their reading.

More than twice as many women as men read the Bible daily. More men than women have not looked into the Bible within the past year.

Moreover, farmers and residents of small communities are more given to daily reading of the Bible than are those who live in large cities.

And more than three times as many persons who are 50 years of age or over read the Bible daily as men and women who are between the ages of 21 and 29. More than half of the younger people have not looked at the Bible within the last year, while this is true of only 29 per cent of those 50 or over.

Interesting Parts

In answer to a question concerning which of the books or parts of the Bible people find most interesting, 10 out of every 100 said "all of it," while among those who had special preferences more persons mentioned the New Testament than the Old Testament.

In the New Testament, one or more of the Gospels came as first choice among those questioned and Revelation came second. Also frequently mentioned were Paul's Letters, Life of Christ, and Luke.

The Psalms were first choice of those who mentioned the Old Testament. Next came Genesis, then the Ten Commandments. Other books and parts of the Old Testament mentioned most frequently were the Proverbs, Ruth, Job, and the Prophets.

Nova Knocked Out by Mauriello in 6th Round

Garden Bout Draws More Than 15,000

California Heavy Takes Early Lead, But Falls Before Bronx 'Roughie'

By Bob Considine

New York, Dec. 11.—Tami Mauriello, out-weighed 20 pounds, came off the floor at the Garden tonight to knock out Lieut. Lou Nova in 2:43 of the sixth round with a savage two-fisted attack.

Mauriello was on the verge of being knocked out at the very start of the fight. Nova, in good physical condition after serving some months in the California State Guard, nailed the New York boy with a heavy right uppercut to the jaw in the middle of the first round. The blow snapped Mauriello's neck and dumped him heavily to the canvas.

Mauriello took a count of eight, got up as glassy-eyed and slow-footed as a deep sea diver and backed away. But Nova couldn't finish him. The big Californian, who weighed 203¾ to Mauriello's 183¾, chased him heavily around the ring, missing punches.

Before the round was over, Mauriello was in good shape and stopped Nova's ponderous advance with quick hooks to the head and lightning jabs.

Mauriello opened Nova's left eye in the second round with sharp punching and jabbing that made Nova look like a slow motion film. Lou kept thumping after him, trying to get in another heavy punch, but got slapped with a 15 to 1 ratio for his pains.

Swung Wildly

Inches shorter, Tami leaped up in the third to shake the water out of Nova's Greek God coiffure with swinging hooks and overhand rights. But Nova, as usual, could take it. He ploughed back to win the fourth by dint of his old solid left jab and a few side arm curves to Tami's stomach. Referee Lieut. Billy Cavanaugh of West Point, took the round from Mauriello for a low punch, but it wasn't Mauriello's to give up.

They were even in the fifth, both men giving out with heavy punches that brought yells from the crowd of 15,369, which had paid $39,138 with some misgiving whether it would see a good fight.

Thn came the end. Mauriello danced around Nova like an Indian dancer around an especially well-rooted totem pole. He struck Nova almost at will in the body and on the button. Nova kept coming, however, until he had

Krause Scores Thrilling TKO In Gloves Bout

In a fight that either Joe Turner or Goldie Ahearn would give their right arms to promote, Harry Krause of the Naval Air Base, scored a tecnical knockout last night over Johnny Buckler of the National Training School, as the tenth annual Golden Gloves tournament moved into its second night. Krause won in 25 seconds of the second round in the 160-pound novice class before an enthusiastic audience of 1800 at Turner's Arena.

First, Krause sent Johnny to the canvas. Then Johnny returned the compliment. Then Krause did it again. Neither of the two boys relied on science, but rather on unceasing confidence of their potent right hands. It looked as if Buckler was ready for the count near the end of the first round. But at the second round bell, he came back strong and started lacing the sailor. Then, just as suddenly the tide turned again, and Krause got in a honey of a right and Buckler found himself draped over the ropes.

Three Stars Repeat On AP All-America

Sinkwich, Schreiner and Wildung Renamed; Big Ten, Southeastern Dominate Selection

By Dillon Graham

Associated Press Features Sports Editor.

New York, Dec. 11.—Although wartime shortages in varsity manpower gave lower classmen unprecedented opportunities to shine this season, the eighteenth annual All-American football team chosen today by the Associated Press is the nearest approach to an all-senior club in years.

Only one junior—Robert Shaw, Ohio State end—found a post in this group of senior standouts which included three carryovers from last season's All-America: Frankie Sinkwich, great halfback of Georgia's Bulldogs, Southeastern Conference champions who play in the Rose Bowl; End Dave Schreiner of Wisconsin and Tackle Dick Wildung of Minnesota.

Wildung's partner at tackle is a giant from Kentucky, 6-foot-6 Clyde Johnson. The guards are Charles Taylor of Stanford and Garrard Ramsey of William and Mary, Southern Conference champions. Joe Domnanovich, captain of Alabama's Crimson Tide, is at center.

In the backfield along with Sinkwich are Paul Governali, Columbia University's fine passer; Mike Holovak, powerful Boston College ace, and Glenn Dobbs, quarterback of Tulsa's Missouri Valley champions who meet Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl.

Freshmen were used on varsity clubs for the first time in several

S. Conference Votes Frosh Eligibility

By the United Press

Richmond, Va., Dec. 11.—The Southern Conference voted, 14 to 2, at its annual meeting here today to permit freshmen to participate in varsity athletics for the duration of the war.

The vote climaxed an afternoon-long discussion of the question by faculty representatives of the 16 conference schools, during which several amendments to the original proposal were adopted.

Duke University and the University of North Carolina cast the dissenting ballots.

The proposal as adopted provides that first-year students at member institutions may compete in varsity sports effective December 12 and that once a freshman has partici-

A. U. Cagemen Stop Hopkins By 45-32 Count

Displaying superior marksmanship throughout, the American University cagers defeated Johns Hopkins, 45 to 32, on the home court last night. This was the first Mason-Dixon triumph for the A. U.'s out of two conference starts.

The Eagles were playing their fourth game of the week, and the strain was reflected in their loose play in the early phases of the game. However, they were consistently better at target work than the visitors, and this was margin by which they took the game.

Hopkins was working the ball in consistently for close shots, but at times, particularly in the final half, their aim wouldn't have put buckshot through hogsheads.

American's five "Iron Men," who survived the Georgetown avalanche Thursday night in its entirety, opened against Hopkins last night and played the first half without relief. Paced by Bart Fugler, who stole scoring honors from teammate George Zurich with an overall high of 16, they ran up an unimpressive lead of 24 to 16 at the halfway mark.

Redskins Are Ready —'With No Excuses'

Short Drill Finds Locals in Good Shape, Physically and Mentally

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

"We're as ready as we'll ever be, physically and mentally, and have no excuses for not winning that ball game Sunday," Coach Ray Flaherty said yesterday as the Redskins filed out of Griffith Stadium after a short morning drill and a 45-minute meeting which excused them for the day.

Turk Edwards To Get Chance If 'Skins Win

Turk Edwards, assistant coach of the Redskins for the past three years and an original member of the Redskin organization, will get his first chance at a head coaching role if the 'Skins beat the Chicago Bears tomorrow for the national pro championship.

Ray Flaherty, who has produced four Eastern Division champions in his seven years as head coach, will leave Washington Monday night for Hollywood, Fla., where he will report Tuesday morning as a lieutenant in the United States Navy.

Thus if the Redskins win the championship, Edwards will step into the head coach's role for the champions vs. Pro All-Star team

See FLAHERTY, Page 12, Col. 8.

Turk Edwards, Flaherty's assistant who bosses the Redskin line, and Doc Mauro, trainer, voiced the head coach's sentiments. "Sunday is our big chance," Edwards said. "This club is ready if I ever saw one," and Mauro practically had the day off. The boys have shaken their trick knees, colds and bum backs and Doc said "look at 'em would you—ready to go."

Flaherty further acquainted his charges with the league champions following the snappy drill by reading off the individual statistics of the Bears' offense for the season. The names of Gary Famiglietti, who gained 503 yards in 118 times with the ball; Ray McLean, the shifty, speedy back who totaled 571 yards with 19 passes; and Hugh Gallerneau, equally adept at line smashing and pass catching, were the most repeated.

Down to Business

The squad puts its heart in the workout, and Sammy Baugh was hanging passes on a half dozen receivers who seldom missed. No loafing or playing around yesterday; the boys were down to business.

The Bears will be here this morning and, after checking in at their Ambassador Hotel quarters, the team has a 1 o'clock date for the stadium, a final tune-up for their third straight championship playoff game appearance.

The full ground crew was working on the stadium turf yesterday and barring rain or snow before 2 o'clock tomorrow the field will be fast enough to suit both clubs. The underdog Redskins have been begging for a fast track and the Bears have also expressed wishes along those lines. A slight covering of mud made the going a trifle slippery yesterday but a Saturday sun was expected to clear away the last trace of moisture.

Halas Missing

Elmer Layden, commissioner of the National Football League, will arrive at league headquarters at the Willard Hotel this morning. George Strickler, director of public relations, has taken up quarters at the Willard, while the 30-odd visiting sports writers will take up quarters at various hotels.

Layden will meet with the officials and coaches tonight for a final rules interpretation. The officials, who will play an important part in this battle between clubs which have been penalized a total

Ticket-Seekers Warned Away From Play-Off

Maj. Edward J. Kelly, Washington police head, yesterday requested all persons not holding tickets to Sunday's Bear-Redskin football game to stay away from Griffith Stadium.

The game is a sellout, he said, and there will be no ducats on sale at the park.

Apparently, the 'Skins' policy this year of selling tickets only by mail has also killed off prospective scalpers. None had put in appearance last night.

WASHINGTON, DEC. 12, 1942

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

For the folks who might be thinking that, perhaps, the Redskins will slap down the Chicago Bears on Mr. Griffith's lot tomorrow afternoon there is precious little aid and comfort in a fresh batch of statistics served up by the National Football League yesterday.

POVICH

These are something extra special in the way of statistics, not the hackneyed figures that guarantee dull reading from week to week during the season. They are the super-duper statistics, a high-powered table on which has been conferred the caption of "Team Rankings," and they would seem to be extremely enlightening.

In fact, at first glance it would seem that the Bears will run the Redskins right out of the park, so tremendous is their edge in the "Team Rankings." The figures have been set down in two categories, defensive and offensive, and they seem to say that the Redskins have no business on the same field with the Bears, although Coach Ray Flaherty is prepared to go ahead with the game nevertheless.

The league's statisticians are now acclaiming the Bears as the greatest standout team in league history, on the figures. In the four offensive departments, the Bears are tops. In the four defensive phases of the game, the figures again label the Bears as tops. For the first time in league play one team, the 1942 Bears, have captured every honor awarded in team rankings.

Here's what the comparative figures on the Bears and Redskins show on the average yardage of play this season.

OFFENSE

	Bears	Redskins	League's average
Gain per rush	4.6	3.7	3.3
Gain per attempted pass	10.3	6.2	6.6
Gain per completed pass	21.6	11.7	13.8
Combined gain per play	5.8	4.7	4.3

DEFENSE

	Bears	Redskins	League's average
Opponents' gain per rush	1.8	2.3	3.2
Opponents' gain per attempted pass	4.2	5.1	6.6
Opponents' gain per completed pass	10.6	13.5	13.8
Opponents' combined gain per play	2.9	3.3	4.3

The cold type of those figures don't make it look any too hot for the Redskins. In no phase of play have they been up to the Bears this season. The really shocking story of the figures is the yardage the two teams have gained in pass completions. Whereas the Bears have averaged 21 yards with each completed pass and 10 yards on all pass plays, the Redskins who were supposed to be the hottest passing team in the league rank ninth in the league on yardage gained on completed passes, with an average of 11.7.

So, if the figures don't lie, the Bears can expect to average nearly twice as much yardage on a completed pass as the Redskins. And that figure which shows the Redskins yielding an average of 13.5 on every pass completed against them is not too encouraging, either. In pass defense, the Redskins rank fifth in the league.

And the Bears' line would seem to be going into the game with a pretty fair edge on the Redskins, offensively as well as defensively. Despite the general agreement that the Redskins' line will do all right tomorrow, the figures show that the clubs in the league have averaged a half yard more against the Washington line than against the Bear line.

But the hard-bitten football fan will find a strong temptation to take all the pregame figures presented and toss them out of the window. Boston College could have marshaled even a more impressive set of figures to show it should beat Holy Cross by a half dozen touchdowns, but Holy Cross refused to recognize 'em as official and went out and licked B. C. 55-12. It is from such memories that Redskin fans can take heart and refuse to be scared easily.

The figures they will pay off on, and the only ones which will be considered as official will be the numbers that are hanging up on the scoreboard at the east end of Griffith Stadium in tomorrow's twilight. That is the Redskins' answer to all the pregame evidence that may be interoduced in favor of the Bears. A football can take a funny bounce, and so can the pregame dope.

Of all the bets on the ball game we've heard this week, the best one we've noted was made by the fellow who refused to pick the winner until after the first touchdown. He laid even money that the team that made the first touchdown would win the ball game, and if that was a novel bet it seemed no less sensible.

"Give me the team that makes the first touchdown," he said. "That's the one I like. That's when the other team starts making mistakes in its franzy to tie the score. Football games are won by taking advantage of the other club's mistakes more often than by the winning club's power. After one team gets the first touchdown, more touchdowns are apt to come cheap. The trailing club never seems to get any of these cheap touchdowns. Look at the record."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 11.—WHAT INTERESTS YOU?

FOOTBALL?—Pro coaches have been moaning for years that their toughest job is keeping their boys "up" from week to week. The mauling mercenaries of the game tend to become jaded or self-protective as the years roll along and they take unto themselves wife and children. Rekindling the old competitive fires that burned brightly years before, when the men were in college, would be a tough job for any stoker.

CONSIDINE

But Ray Flaherty's stoking job this time should be simple. He could save his breath by passing out clippings of the last play-off game between his club, the Redskins, and Sunday's foe, the Bears. Any Redskin whose blood wouldn't boil for stark revenge, after reading the gory details of that immortal debacle, isn't worth the salt in his tear ducts. If ever a team had reason to play the game of its life, to wipe out a debasing memory, it is the Washington club. The men who were a part of that holocaust have been deeply branded with a big 73-0 ever since that day of ignomy. Not only that but they'll always wear it, unless they can come up with something special on Sunday.

The Bears are 3-to-1 favorites this time. They were only 9-to-5 before they won 73-0. We like Washington's chances this time.

Ten Bears who started in the 73-0 game, in 1940, will open against the Redskins. They aren't getting any younger. They've lost their coach to the Navy, and such men as George McAfee and Norm Standlee. They're much more surfeited with success than the Redskins, and they must lack what should be a violent flame of determination in every Redskins' chest.

Besides, winning shares amount to about 900 bucks, a tidy fortune for a pro footballer.

BASKETBALL?—The court game is lucky in that it probably never will have a transportation problem. A basketball team and all of its gear could be lost in the corner of a day coach. Even Brigham Young University, which opens Madison Square Garden's ninth basketball season tomorrow night, will use only five players at one time.

Ned Irish, the lad who has done much to make the Garden the Mecca of all good basketball players, will present 26 doubleheaders before the season ends next March. The clubs will come from nearly every section of the country, and draw upwards of 300,000 for the season. Irish's doubleheaders averaged 15,000 per night last season.

RACING?—Our recent piece about the rescue of the old plater Playmore from a fate worse than death brings a note from Jim Claren, New Rochelle horseman, along the same line.

"When Harry Sinclair retired from racing he gave his great Graylag to a friend with the admonition that the animal was to be used as a saddle horse only. Yet, a couple of years later, while playing the Canadian Circuit, I was at Blue Bonnets one afternoon and I noticed that Graylag was entered in a selling event. At post time he was quoted at 30-to-1. He got off fairly well, had speed for a quarter-mile or so and finished far back in the ruck—beaten, if you please, by the cheapest sort of selling platers.

"It was a distressing sight, for I had seen Graylag in his salad day lick the best on the New York tracks . . . seen him beat his stable companion, the mighty Zev.

"I didn't know Sinclair, but that night I wrote and told him about Graylag. I promptly received a letter of thanks. Needless to say, Sinclair arranged for the purchase of the horse and had him shipped immediately to Rancocas Farm in New Jersey, where, I believe, he still roams the meadows in peace and comfort."

Young Rebukes Ring Commission

Body Erred In Uline Row, Says Official

D. C. Commissioner Airs Case Following Fiasco at Arena Preceding Fights

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

A conviction the District Boxing Commission erred in attempting to rule on whether seats on the floorboards over the ice are injurious to the health of spectators, was expressed yesterday by District Commissioner John Russell Young as investigation into the local boxing muddle was begun at his office in the District Building before the Board of District Commissioners.

Young told the three-man boxing board, Chairman Claude W. Owen, Thomas P. Morgan, jr., and Police Lieut. John J. Agnew, that the Commission definitely "made a mistake in not seeking advice" before it first threatened to call off Promoter Goldie Ahearn's boxing card at Uline Arena last Tuesday night because seats had been installed on the ice.

It was as a result of the subsequent argument between Ahearn, Arena Owner Migiel J. Uline and Morgan and Agnew that finally saw the fights start only after an hour and half's delay and after hundreds of fans were turned away thinking the fights had been called off and an estimated $900 refunded, causing both Uline and Ahearn to announce they planned damage suits against the Commissioners as individuals and as a body, for loss of revenue among other contemplated charges.

Commissioner Young's complete statement after the hearing, at which Col. Charles W. Kutz, Engineer Commissioner, and Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech also were present, follows:

Confident of Solution

The Commissioners feel it will not be difficult to bring about a satisfactory solution to the present situation and it is my opinion the entire problem centered about the desirability of having seats on the ice, and that the opinion of the Health Officer (Dr. George C. Ruhland) will go a long way toward determining whether it is safe and in the interests of public health.

"The boxing commission made a mistake in not seeking advice regarding seats on the ice."

The rebuke, interpreted by sports writers present as ranging from "mild" to "stinging," overshadowed the boxing commission's second demand, later dropped, that Promoter Ahearn increase his ringside price from $1.80 to the customary $2.40 scale. Morgan told the Board of Commissioners he considered the lower scale "would hurt club fights here." What club fights promoted by whom Morgan did not say, but the only other fight club in Washington is conducted by Promoter Joe Turner.

Other Facts in Case

Other facts revealed, Commissioner Young said, are:

That friction exists between Joe Turner and Ahearn as rival promoters.

That an official boxing commission timekeeper had, before last Tuesday, complained of the ice underfoot, which he said, forced him to bed ill for three weeks, and

That Uline and Ahearn will not be summoned to appear at a future hearing to present their side of the story unless they (Uline and Ahearn) desire it. Should either Uline or Ahearn or both request a hearing, it will be arranged, Young said.

Fred Ball, legal representative of Uline in his proposed suit, indicated last night he would comply with Commissioner Young's suggestion and request a chance to present Uline's side of the story.

Ball said he believed he could get further with a hearing before Commissioner Young than through involved legal proceedings but added he would "reserve the right to enter suit against the Boxing Commission pending the outcome" of the proposed hearing.

Price Setting Main Issue

Ball said the Boxing Commission's powers to set prices was the major item of importance and that he considered the question of dates also of paramount importance. Ball said he thought the assignment of Monday night dates to one promoter unfair and he would request "every other Monday night" dates for Uline Arena, at which times, he believes, the ice could be removed without too much difficulty.

He added he would also ask Commissioner Young to define the rules and regulations of the District Boxing Commission's powers.

The busiest two players in yesterday's Bethesda-Roosevelt cage game go to the floor in pursuit of the ball. Bob Brewer (white shirt) got it for Bethesda this time as Pret Wannan furnishes competition. Final score was Bethesda, 39; Roosevelt, 31

Scoring Duel Marks Bethesda Cage Victory

After a brilliant individual scoring duel, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High cagers hung up their second triumph of the season yesterday, pulling away in the final two minutes to down Roosevelt on its own court, 39-31.

Bob Brewer, husky guard of the Barons, won out in his point-making duel with the hosts' Pret Wannan. He registered 19 points. Wannan almost kept up with him the first half, getting 11 to Brewer's 13, but was held to a single tally in the second half.

The two stars started their warfare early. Wannan scored the Riders' first nine points and Brewer the Barons' first five before other players got a hand in proceedings. After tying the count at 2-2, however, Wannan was never able to bring his team up even again.

One quarter left, the Barons in possession of a 14-6 lead, but at the half their edge had been whittled to 20-17 as Wannan enjoyed the support of Bunny Citrenbaum.

Ollie Kennedy, another Rider vet, cut Roosevelt's deficit to a single point as the third quarter began, but Haven Rettew sank a pair of foul shots to match a snowbird by Ralph Floyd. The game rocked along on even terms from there until only three minutes were left, when Bethesda hung up the last five points of the game.

It was the second straight year that the Riders have started their season with a loss of the perennially strong Bethesdans.

Gonzaga High Alumni Edges Varsity, 33-32

Alumni basketers of Gonzaga High, trailing by nine points at the half, put on a potent second-half rush yesterday to down the Purple varsity, 33-32, at the home floor.

Bernie Nolan, 1941-42 star, led the returning grads' winning rally. He scored only five points but led the floor game throughout. Scoring honors for the winners' went to Joe O'Lone and his six-point total.

With Bob Smith and Tony Tancredi leading the attack, Gongaza's varsity moved into a 19-10 lead at halftime. It didn't last long, however, as Nolan and eight other old grads contributed to the scoring.

Smith and Tancredi shared honors for the varsity, each with nine points, while Colliton was only one point behind.

Rickey Hopes His Oratory Will Resurrect Medwick

Dodgers' Boss Plans Session With Ducky To Revive Bat Power

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 11.—Trade prospects for the Brooklyn Dodgers have dwindled to the point where Branch Rickey says he has taken Joe Medwick off the block and now will attempt to resurrect his once potent batting power with oratory.

The president of the Dodgers plans to leave tomorrow for his home at St. Louis to spend an extended Christmas vacation and while there will talk to Medwick, who also lives in St. Louis.

"Medwick was a great ball player a few years ago and there is no reason why he couldn't still be if he sets his mind to it," asserted Rickey.

Blow on Head Brought Slump

"He is 31 years old and should be right in his prime. There is nothing wrong with him physically. I know he was hit on the head a couple of years ago and that that accounted for his slump for awhile. But he has recovered and could now be the Medwick of old—and boy, that Medwick was a great ball player.

"Medwick batted .300 last season and his average never has fallen off badly. The difference between now and a few years ago is in his extra base hits. He used to take a cut at a ball. He could hit anything and give at a ride, especially bad balls. Why, Bill Terry once told me the safetst way to pitch to Medwick was right through the middle.

"Last year, I am told by various managers, he would take a real cut at the ball on his first swing, but after that he was protecting himself. If he missed that first one he would shorten up, just try to punch the ball some place. That can be corrected and I want him to cut loose again on every swing.

Only Needs a Little Talk

"Another thing, I want him to run out his hits. And if he had a swagger toward his other players, I want him to lose it. I think when I talk to him I can convince him."

Rickey explained that while in Chicago for the baseball meetings last week he had talked to Billy Herman, veteran second baseman, about a number of things, including terms and the possibility that he might be asked to play first base if Dolph Camilli doesn't return.

"We had a dandy talk, commented Rickey, "and I found Herman to be an exceptionally smart and able fellow. I can understand now why he has played on championship teams. Our conversation was so successful that it was what caused me to make up my mind to talk to Medwick. I had wanted to trade Medwick, but I don't know. I think I can convert him, too."

Rickey said that while at home he also would see Catcher Mickey Owen, who lives on a farm in Missouri, and Pete Reiser, the young outfielder who has been reclassified to 1-A in the draft and probably will be inducted early in January.

Coolidge Five Wins, 41-21, Over Alumni

Coolidge High's basketball team had no trouble at all trouncing a hasty-collected Alumni five, 41 to 21, yesterday on the Colt court.

A well-divided attack saw six players share in the scoring. Jimmy Shea, letterman guard, led off with 10 points, and Bill Penn and Charley Greenbaum contributed 9 apiece.

The Colts were out front, 9 to 2, after the first quarter, and at the succeeding periods their margins were 22 to 12 and 30 to 19.

Colonials Face Fort Meade in Court Debut

George Washington University's basketball team will open its 1942-43 season tonight at Tech High gym against a quintet from nearby Fort Meade. Game time is 8:30 and admission to the contest will be 65 cents.

Coach Arthur Zahn, making his first appearance as head coach at George Washington, expects to use one senior and three juniors in his starting line-up. Capt. Joey Gallagher, the flashy guard from St. John's High School, is the only fourth-year man who will receive a starting post.

The four juniors are Ed Gustafson, 6-foot-3-inch Moline, Ill., center; Bob Groetzinger, from Peoria, Ill.; Jam Rausch, the Evansville lad who may succeed Bobby Gilham as the team's No. 1 defensive player, and Ted Reichwein, lanky Centralia, Pa., product.

This year's Buff and Blue court edition is not likely to develop a scorer of Matt Zunic's capacity, but it gives hope of being a better-rounded squad than last year's team. Zunic, now with the Navy as a chief petty officer, was G. W.'s most outstanding basketball player since the sport was started there in 1908. He broke the school's all-time scoring record in both his junior and senior years.

Coach Zahn believes much in the same type of basketball advocated by the former head coach, Bill Reinhart, now a lieutenant commander in the United States Navy. This style of play calls for fast-break offensive and a man-to-man defensive game.

Hoya Soccermen Bow to C.U., 2-1

Catholic University soccerites scored a 2-1 victory over Georgetown University's representatives yesterday at Brookland Stadium as Al Rodriguez and Joe Obregon wiped out a first-half 1-0 Georgetown lead by booting second-half goals. The Hoyas' only score came after an unidentified G. U. player watched in dismay as a boot slithered off his toe and bounded into the net for the lone Hoya score.

Lion-Cap Hockey Tilt To Set Crowd Record

A new attendance record for an ice hockey match locally is anticipated tonight when the Washington Lions attempt to extend their undefeated streak to four matches against the American League champion Indianapolis Capitals at Uline Arena, 8:30 o'clock.

More than 5000 persons are expected to be present. The Capitals have won two of their three matches to date.

Defenseman Tony Graboski, who has been favoring a lame ankle, and veteran center Ossie Asmundsen, who has been nursing a broken rib, both will be back on the job for the Lions. Neither was available against Pittsburgh last Wednesday night as the local pros snapped the Hornets' winning streak at five successive matches in overtime, 4 to 3.

The Green Shirts have tied Cleveland, 5 to 5, and defeated Providence and Pittsburgh by identical 4-3 scores their last three times out and are conceded an excellent chance of coming through against the Capitals tonight.

Coach George Mantha last night predicted a victory for Washington over Indianapolis tonight and against the Providence Reds in Providence, R. I., tomorrow night would send the Lions well among the eastern division leaders—Providence and Buffalo—in short order.

Frank Ceryance, capable goalie playing on loan from Hershey, will remain in the nets tonight and tomorrow night. Paul Gauthier, veteran Washington goalie, who has been inactive with an injured leg, consequently will postpone his comeback until Tuesday night's match with Cleveland here.

Freddy Weaver, recently acquired from Indianapolis by the Lions, will face his former mates for the first time tonight. Weaver, an 18-year-old platinum blond, will be joined on the ice by another 18-year-old winger in Billy (The Kid) Purcell, an American born boy from New Haven, who will be used regularly hereafter.

Service men in uniform and their escorts will be admitted to a special reserved section tonight upon payment of 55 cents for both admissions.

1000 to See Redskin-Bear Battle Gratis

Everybody who watches the Bears play the Redskins tomorrow will not lay down $2.20, $3.30 or $4.40.

Griffith Stadium will house more than 1000 persons who will "work the game" in some capacity.

That includes ushers, police, firemen, ground keepers, hot-dog stand attendants, the band, entertainers, ticket takers, sports writers, radio men, including technicians, the five men who handle the public address system, the clock and scoreboard operators, telephone men, telegraphers, press box attendants, etc.

Just about every auxiliary policeman in town is after the stadium assignment.

Wayne Millner was a Redskin dressing room visitor yesterday. Wayne is through at Notre Dame, where he served on the coaching staff, and he would like nothing better than a Redskin victory. He has lived that 73-0 debacle a thousand times.

Tuffy Leemans of the New York Giants, dropped in and said "it should be a close game and the 'Skins can win. Tuffy may enter Johns Hopkins for a further examination of his football injury.

Sammy Baugh turned up with his right hand taped yesterday but before anybody became overexcited Sam explained he had a slight rash and the gauze was merely covering the salve.

Flying West Loses Photo For Second

Crowd of 3000 Sees Day's Sport; Scocca Returns to Saddle After His Accident

By Palmer Heagerty

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 11. John Toppa's Pilot Boat, a speedy son of High Quest, one-time winner of the Preakness, got up steam for the second time at this meeting in the fourth race today and the result was a sixth-length triumph over Randle's Queen in the test of about four and one-half furlongs. Flying West was a head behind the second horse in a photo finish.

The crowd of 3,000 wagered with confidence on the speed merchant and he lost no time in assuring the customers of his supremacy over the field. Jockey Stanley Austin sent the speedster to the front before the field had taken five steps and from there on it was simply a case of widening his lead.

Flying West and Sweet Zaca proved the nearest opposition early but they gave chase for only a short while as Randle's Queen came up with a burst of speed which sent her bounding past Sweet Zaca and then nip Flying West right at the wire.

Pilot Boat, by virtue of running the distance in 0:53, accounted for his second consecutive purse at the meeting and his eighth of the year in 29 attempts. He paid $5.40 in the straight pool.

Danny Scocca's return to the saddle was marred somewhat when the best he could do with the favored City Bred in the day's opener was to finish second behind N. E. Bryce's Linden Girl. The choice had obtained an early advantage but could not stave off Linden Girl in the last quarter mile. Ralph Root brought the winner through on the inside until reaching the leader and then went out to circle City Bred and obtain a margin of one and one-half lengths. Star Strung was third in the seven-furlong affair. The winner, an $8.60 second choice, was clocked in 1:31 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LINDEN GIRL, $8.60, $3.80, $3.00; CITY BRED, $2.80, $2.80; STAR STRUNG, $8.60.

LINDEN GIRL not hurried when unable to keep up early, saved ground while becoming a factor, went to outside of leader and drew clear to win with something left. CITY BRED disposed of STAR STRUNG after five-eighths, was hard ridden when challenged by lop one, but was no match. STAR STRUNG tired after being unable to outrun CITY BRED. PIGEON could not better his position.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 1:47. Off at 1:47½. Winner, L. T. Davis' b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAVU, $3.40, $2.60, $2.20; GRAND STEP, $4.40, $3.20; SCHLEY AL, $3.40.

CAVU sprinted into early advantage, turned back challenge of GRAND STEP and SCHLEY AL and then held them safe while going easily at the end. GRAND STEP was unable to match strides with top one and was all out to save the place. SCHLEY AL made a game effort but tired badly nearing the end. LONG LEGS came with a rush after being outrun early.

Daily Double, LINDEN GIRL and CAVU Paid $10.80.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:16. Off at 2:21. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Talbert's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DURABLE, $5.20, $3.20, $2.60; MI-DUE, $5.20, $3.80; CLAY HILL, $3.60.

DURABLE raced in first flight from start, moved with and on the inside of MI-DUE, turned back latter's challenge when he came again and was drawing clear at the end. MI-DUE made several bids for lead, was carried wide by winner and tired nearing end. CLAY HILL off in front, was shuffled back at first turn and failed to rally thereafter. TANTRUM had a very rough trip.

FOURTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs (chute). Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 2:41. Off at 2:41½. Winner, John M. Toppa's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG JACK, $10.20, $5.60, $3.60; THE MALAHAT, $3.00, $2.80; MACIE MARGARET, $7.80.

BIG JACK, much the best in the going, moved up to displace THE MALAHAT when rider pleased, opened long lead and won well in hand. THE MALAHAT outran his field early and was no match for winner, but was next best. MACIE MARGARET saved ground while bettering her position but could not reach serious contention. CAMP MEETING tired after racing in near pursuit of pace early.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place easily. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:37. Winner, Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's b. g. (4) by Happy Time—Rocket Glare. Trained by J. B. Hatfield. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:27⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—McHENRY, $10.60, $5.00, $2.80; BILL'S RITA, $4.60, $3.20; STEADY ON, $3.00.

McHENRY outsprinted field to first turn, was just galloping along in front and won as rider pleased. BILL'S RITA moved nearest leader after opening quarter and was next best. STEADY ON was shut off at first turn and ran a game race from there. HIGH CLIQUE could not improve her position.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:07. Winner, J. H. Morrill jr.'s b. g. (4) by Granville—Bedora. Trained by Joseph Morris. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:58⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRANDEUR, $80.60, $59.40, $14.20; DANCE AROUND, $42.60, $16.40; INDIAN SEA, $2.80.

GRANDEUR was hard hustled to dispose of INDIAN SEA and was kept to punishment to end and held a safe margin. DANCE AROUND worked way into contention gradually but could not threaten winner. INDIAN SEA was unable to shake off opposition early and faltered. TWO ACES came from far back to close well under energetic handling.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:36. Winner, E. Peddy's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DREAMING TIME, $5.40, $4.40, $2.80; PITTSBURGH, $10.20, $7.20; FIVE O' FOUR, $4.40.

DREAMING TIME, nearest leaders from start, moved by top one to open daylight lead entering stretch and then was ridden out when PITTSBURGH came again. The latter opened commanding lead early and gave way to winner and was coming again at the end. FIVE O' FOUR, off last, lost ground throughout and hung nearing end. GROUCHY moved with a rush after a half but hung thereafter.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

With today's racing, Charles Town closes its second week of racing with a much brighter outlook than that which prevailed here a week ago. Improvements in weather and attendance brought a great upward swing in the mutuel handle and all faces were just a little bit more cheerful than during the opening week. Page C. Stephenson, who handles the large string which races for Mrs. E. D. Sowers, has altered his plans to race at New Orleans this winter and instead will lay up at the Laurel (Md.) track. Stephenson, who now has 12 head stabled at Laurel, will ship an additional 13 there at the conclusion of this meeting. The Sowers string is headed by Navy, a son of Annapolis and Chatter Anne, regarded by most patrons as the "handicap horse of the year" as far as this State is concerned. Jockey George Cardoza left for New York yesterday where he is scheduled to report to his Draft Board. Danny Scocca, despite being in the hospital on several occasions this year bounds right back into his winning ways. Three times Scocca has come from the hospital to win with the first mount he accepted and his accident early this week proved no different. Despite the fact that he was believed more seriously injured, Danny took only one day off and then came back in the first race yesterday to pilot Mrs. C. P. Miles' City Bred, his only mount of the afternoon. J. C. Mergler, former trainer for A. G. Vanderbilt, "Red" Kent, who conditioned Royal Business when that mare was winning for Capt. Ewart Johnson, Irving Anderson, former rider and Jimmy Feltner, the jockey member of the Feltner family, all are stationed at Front Royal, Va. All are members of the United States Remount Service at that point. Race Secretary Freddie Burton put on a coupie of different handicaps for today's card but all failed to fill. Could it be that they are afraid of Navy? I can't say that I blame them. Despite the lack of a handicap, we have a well-balanced card which should prove to be well worth anyone's time. Don't forget that post time is 1:15 today. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—TOP TRANSIT was fairly consistent around the New England sector and appears capable of handling the field gathered here. BUTTERMAN has always been partial to this track and should be close. BLUE COVERT may awaken.

Second race—EKWANOK stumbled and lost all chance last out. With better luck, this one may score and pay fair odds. SIR KID is usually close and must be placed near the top. JEWEL SONG may surprise if able to get postward.

Third race—LADY JAFFA has the speed of this lot and may carry it for the entire distance. FIELD OF GOLD was well backed last out and may be tough to handle here. SOMALI may improve.

Fourth race—BELMIKE has been idle since Bowie, but looks best off the Maryland races. DARTING STAR made a bold move the other day and then hung. May have needed that race. SEAWAY is a possibility if started.

Fifth race—HARD LOSER is first on the reserve list, but deserves top billing if able to get postward. DARK ACE may take a long lead from the rail position and appears the one to catch. NOT ALONE will like the going.

Sixth race—HARD TELLING was no match for NAVY last weekend, but seems to have found a little softer spot in this 6½-furlong affair. INDIAN GIFT was a winner last out and figures close. TERRY MAY has won two here.

Seventh race—HIGH STANDARD may have needed that last race and this appears to be a soft spot for the Chamblin-trained router. PATHFINDER will be running the last part and should get up for a share. ROSE ANITA won here.

Eighth race—WHITE HOT looks like "money in the bank" going 1¼ miles against the opposition gathered here. DONABOY and GUARDSMAN should chase the top one across the line.

Sub race—If this event is used I'll take MARADAN, GINNOCHIO and BLABLAH and let it go at that.

Whirly Tops Field in Rich La. Handicap

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Dec. 11.—Ten other horses are entered, but it's Whirlaway, the little horse with the big bank roll, which officials expect to fill the Fair Grounds with the largest crowd in its history tomorrow when the $15,000 Added Louisiana Handicap goes to the post.

Not since the early 20's, when Black Gold made racing history here and went North to write additional pages, has interest been so high in one horse. In taverns, on street corners and forbidden bookie shops, Whirlaway is the main topic of conversation.

Between 15,000 and 20,000 racing fans are expected to jam the centrally located Fair Grounds to watch Whirly, top weighted at 130 pounds, pound down the long stretch in the mile-and-an-eighth feature.

Jockey Wendell Eads will have the leg up on Whirly, which has cashed in $548,261 in purses for an all-time high in winnings. Victory tomorrow will add about $12,000 to that amount. The Calumet thunderbolt made the trip from Florida in good condition and Trainer Ben Jones said his charge was in tip-top shape for the race.

Expected to furnish chief competition for Whirlaway, is the Louisiana Farms' Riverland, carrying 124 ponnds, including Jockey S. Brooks.

Jockey Johnny Adams, who has 234 winners to his credit during 1942, will ride Heartman, Mrs. H. P. Bonner's entry, which with the Greentree Stable's Corydon has been assigned 120 pounds.

Probers Attack Rationing Red Tape

Truman Group Warns Gas, Fuel Agencies Against Losing Confidence of Public

By Cecil B. Dickson
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The Senate War Investigating Committee yesterday warned Government agencies handling fuel oil and gasoline rationing that "lack of confidence by the people in the intelligence, reasonableness, or integrity of their Government can mean disaster" for our war effort.

In a special report to the Senate, the committee demanded that the Office of Price Administration, Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes, and the Office of Defense Transportation simplify present "complex" formulas and application blanks for fuel oil and gasoline rationing.

It declared that "pleasure driving should pass out for the duration" to save rubber and that farmers should be given unlimited gasoline for tractors used in the production of food for the armed forces and civilian population.

Asserting that rationing of fuel oil and gasoline is necessary to supply rubber for military purposes, and to ease the Nation's transportation burden during the emergency, the committee, however, severely criticized the OPA and the ODT for their attitude of "mistrust" toward the American people.

Faith in Fair Play

"The committee believes," declared Chairman Harry S. Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, "that the American people, when informed of the facts as to shortages such as this, are willing to make the necessary sacrifices and that they can be trusted to play fair with each other for the mutual benefit of all.

"It is neither necessary nor desirable to approach the problem of rationing with the opinion that the American people are going to do everything possible to escape the burdens of rationing and that it is necessary to devise application blanks and formulas so complex that it is thought that they will take care of every possible attempt to avoid the effect of rationing."

The committee called on the OPA, ODT and Ickes, as well as other Government agencies to keep their "gaze on the peaks" and not lose their way "in a forest of detail" as the country moves into "the valley of regimentation in food and manpower."

"Simplification Essential"

It declared that "early modification and simplification" of rationing practices "is essential to avoid a crisis in our productive economy this coming year."

The committee, which made an exhaustive study of the petroleum situation when the Midwest was protesting gasoline rationing, said:

"Fuel oil rationing on our east coast is absolutely essential and must grow more and more stringent. Fuel oil rationing in the Midwest can be justified only on the ground that it will release essential transportation that will help the East."

It warned that the fuel oil and gasoline shortage in the East will be more acute next year and said compulsory conversion of heating furnaces to coal "may soon be essential."

"A more practical approach by local rationing boards in cutting red tape and making sure that minimum requirements for home heating are satisfied is imperative," the report said. "No Americans must freeze. War production must not be impeded by epidemics."

The committee recommended that the Government make available to home owners grates and other materials necessary to convert oil burners to coal as one means of relieving the fuel oil shortage in the North and East.

It criticized as "unpractical" the complicated method now used by OPA in determining the quantity of fuel oil to be rationed householders.

"In all except rare instances, home owners knew or were able to ascertain, how much fuel oil they used last year," the committee said. "Since it must be assumed that they did not desire to waste their own money by purchasing fuel oil they did not need, the OPA should have assumed that they purchased it because they needed it."

The committee said the OPA should have made a "flat percentage cut in each area with provision for application by individual home owners for more fuel oil" if they could prove necessity.

"Instead of doing that," the committee said, "the OPA, through its experts, has examined the temperature statistics for the last 43 years in each of the thousands of counties involved to ascertain an average temperature for each county; has then determined the number of square feet that its experts think should be allowed for each individual, which number differs with the number in the family, and then, has determined the number of gallons of fuel oil which its experts believe should be consumed in heating that many square feet."

The committee said temperature was only one factor; that "everyone knows that both humidity and wind velocity have a great deal to do with the amount of fuel used."

"The extent of exposure of homes to the wind differs with almost every home, the effect of the exposure is dependent upon the manner in which and the material with which the house is constructed," it said, adding another factor was the number of windows.

Local Boards Advocated

A straight line reduction in fuel could be adjusted by local boards to meet local conditions, the committee insisted. It asserted it would be better than the attempt to "handle the matter from Washington with a cut-and-dried formula" that required months to devise.

The committee assailed the 32-page book of instructions the OPA sent to farmers on how to fill out complicated applications for gasoline and fuel to operate their farm machinery and said it should never have been attempted to regulate truck gasoline from Detroit.

Not only have farmers had difficulty in getting blanks and books, it said, but information over the past three years was demanded of truck and tractor owners, that they could not have.

The committee specifically recommended:

More gasoline for westerners who have to do business in greater travel areas, particularly traveling salesmen, who would be allowed to pool their automobiles and use of gasoline tickets.

No rationing of gasoline or other fuel for tractors.

Placing of farmers and truck owners on local rationing boards.

Construction of more oil barges and pipe lines, as previously recommended by the committee.

Increase in coal production, especially in the Middle West.

Gasoline rationing should apply also to production areas.

Military and industrial users of oil should be forced to convert to coal where possible.

The committee criticized the Government for being late in its program to save rubber, as the committee recommended three months before William Jeffers was appointed rubber administrator.

Changes Urged

Oil Delivery Collapse Feared Here

Elimination of heating periods, which would allow fuel oil dealers to make full-scale deliveries to consumers against their entire season's quota, was urged last night by the local oil industry.

In this way, said Lester Scott, director of the oil heating division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, a material contribution could be made to efforts to forestall what he termed a rapid breakup of local distribution facilities.

Scott has wired Petroleum Administrator Ickes, Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Defense Transportation Director Joseph Eastman that distribution facilities were "rapidly breaking up," urged a first-hand survey of the local situation and blamed the Washington development on:

"Complexities and complications involved under the fuel oil rationing regulations, the failure of supply and distribution under Directive No. 59 of the Petroleum Coordinator's Office, and the requirements for reduction of truck mileage under Office of Defense Transportation's Order No. 21."

Handling Only 20% of Peak Load

The breakup, he said, is occurring in spite of the fact that dealers currently are handling only about 20 per cent of their peak load, which usually comes in late December and January. Scott said he had received no answer up to last night to his wire.

From Ickes' office, it was learned that the wire had been received, that there was no comment, and that it was "supposed" that an answer would be forthcoming today.

ODT had this to offer:

"It seems utterly impossible that delivery facilities should be 'breaking up' now, since the three-month mileage quotas under which the tank trucks operate, and which generally were reduced only 25 per cent, did not go into effect until December 1."

Further, said ODT, provision has been made for increased mileage where operations indicate that such increases are necessary to prevent such a "breakup" as that of which Scott complained.

Heating Periods Held Essential

Subcommittees to the State Petroleum Transport Advisory Committee currently are engaged, it was added, in surveys of ways and means by which mileage can be curtailed without eliminating essential deliveries.

OPA indicated that the suggested elimination of heating periods would be vigorously opposed. Official sources there took the position that establishment of the five heating periods was a primary factor in the entire fuel oil rationing program, and that the urgency of cutting consumption in the face of a severe shortage of oil was so great that action—regardless of what it might be—by the dealers to cope with the situation was imminently called for.

Scott said the local industry had studied delivery pooling schemes but it had been found impossible "to work out such a system at this stage of the game."

Should heating periods be eliminated, Scott said, it was possible that some consumers might exhaust their full quota of oil before the winter ends. Their only remedy, he said, would be to visit their rationing boards to see whether they had been allotted all the oil they were entitled to. If it developed they had received a full quota, he said, and had run out by violating regulations, "they'll just have to suffer, but there'll be less people hurt that way than under the current system."

75 Promoted To General

Emil R. Reinhardt, who has been transferred to an undisclosed assignment. The Associated Press, reporting this shift, said the change in command at Fort Meade will formally take place at a troop review and parade Monday afternoon.

Other Washington officers on the promotion list are Brig. Gen. St. Clair Street, 49, one of the Army's veteran fliers, who becomes a major general, and the following colonels advanced to brigadier general: Augustin M. Prentiss, chemical warfare service, and Raphael S. Chavin, ordnance. The Marylanders promoted from colonel to brigadier general were Ray L. Owens, air corps, Bethesda, Madison Pearson, adjutant general's department Chevy Chase, and Josef R. Sheetz, field artillery, Hagerstown.

Col. William C. Kabrich, Chemical Warfare Service of Blacksburg, Va., also was promoted to brigadier general.

Another new brigadier general is Archelaus L. Hamblen, Infantry, who was with Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark on the undercover mission to North Africa preceeding our occupation of that area.

Two National Guard brigadier generals who have been assigned to command Army divisions were advanced to major general, Charles C. Haffner, jr., of Illinois, commanding the 103d Division at Camp Claiborne, La., and Alexander E. Anderson of Jackson Heights, Long Island, N. Y., a hero of the "Fighting Sixty-ninth" in the last war, now commander of the Eighty-sixth Division at Camp Howze, Tex.

Two prominent colonels of the Medical Corps were advanced to brigadier general: Albert W. Kenner, who the War Department said "distinguished himself" in caring for the wounded in the African campaign, and Hugh Jackson Morgan, a prominent civilian physician, now senior consultant in internal medicine to the Army surgeon general here.

Others Named

Other colonels promoted were Joseph A. Michela, American military attache to Russia, Don C. Faith, commandant of the WAAC training center at Daytona Beach, Fla.; and Edward W. Smith, Field Artillery Reserve, who will become executive for Reserve and R. O. T. C. affairs at the War Department.

The other brigadier generals advanced to major generals were: Thompson Lawrence, Percy W. Clarkson, Lucius DuB. Clay, Harry C. Ingles and James A. Code, jr.

The other following colonels promoted to brigadier general were on the list.

Slocum, Field Artillery; Walter L. Weible, Coast Artillery Corps; Wayland B. Auger, Cavalry; Henry L. P. King, Signal Corps; Ernest H. Burt, Judge Advocate General's Dept.; Clinton W. Howard, Air Corps; Maxwell D. Taylor, Field Artillery; Blackshear M. Bryan, jr., Provost Marshal General's Dept.; Frank C. Meade, Signal Corps. Frederick W. Evans, Air Corps; Eugene A. Regnier, Mechanized Cavalry; Robert C. Oliver, Air Corps; Bonner F. Fellers, Coast Artillery Corps.

Church to Hold Flag Ritual

The members of Luther Place Memorial Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. will present and dedicate a service flag in honor of all those who have gone from this church into the armed forces. At present there are 62 men and 2 women in the services. The presentation on behalf of the congregation and as a representative of all those in the service will be made by Col. Julia O. Flikka. Dr. Paul O. Hoh, the guest preacher, will receive and dedicate the flag.

Dr. Hoh will preach, "On Second Thought." He is a professor of practical theology in the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia. He was the guest preacher last Sunday.

During the week we will have the Men's Brotherhood Supper Meeting, Wednesday, December 16 at 6:30 p. m. A color movie on railroading will be shown. Friday December 18 at 8 p. m. The Y. P. F.'s Christmas party will be held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Gould Wickey, 7516 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Rice to Speak At Radio Rally

G. R. Rice of the British Supply of London, former British army colonel and at present representative for lend-lease for his government, will be the speaker tonight in the fifth Christian Youth and Service Men's radio rally at Almas Temple, 1315 K Street Northwest.

Rice has served as financial adviser for his government in Shanghai, Cairo, and Jerusalem, and he is deputy director for the Sudan Interior Mission which has 400 missionaries in Africa.

Glenn Wagner, director of the Saturday night radio rallies at the Temple, announces that free suppers will be served to men of our armed forces at 6:30 p. m. About 100 service men were served last Saturday night.

Rev. Mr. Holcomb Heads Bible Council

The Rev. Luther J. Holcomb, pastor of Temple Baptist Church, was elected chairman of the Advisory Council of the American Bible Society at its recent annual meeting in New York. The council is composed of 45 denominational representatives.

Mr. Holcomb presided at the meeting. Plans were approved for an increased distribution of Bibles in the armed forces.

Temple Baptist Plans 'Ladies' Night' Pageant

The Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N Streets Northwest, will observe "Ladies Night" tomorrow at 8 p. m. Mrs. Gaye L. McGlothlen will deliver an address in connection with the annual Lottie Moon observance. Lottie Moon was a Baptist missionary to China. Young ladies will serve as ushers and there will be a pageant presented entitled, "Christmas Gifts—Hers and Ours."

Two Worlds Church

"Darkness Now Seems Absolute" will be the subject of the address by the Rev. H. Gordon Burroughs, minister of the Church of Two Worlds, tomorrow evening at the Hotel Continental. Max Kobre, violinist, will be the soloist. On Wednesday evening there will be a lecture by the minister, followed by a message service.

Bethesda Presbyterian to Lay New Sanctuary Cornerstone

Rev. Mr. Albertson To Lead Formal Worship Service

The congregation of Bethesda Presbyterian Church will realize a long-anticipated wish tomorrow, when the cornerstone is laid for the new $50,000 church sanctuary.

The stone will be laid in an opening of the almost completed building at 10:15 a. m., after which the congregation, led by the Rev. James S. Albertson, pastor, will proceed into the church for the formal worship service.

Chaplain William H. Rafferty, U. S. N., will place the stone at the base of the new tower and will speak.

The Rev. Alfred F. McGarrah, D. D., of Pittsburgh, will speak on "Your Church and Its Future." He is a nationally known church counsellor and author.

Heralding the stone-laying rite, housewarming fellowship dinners were held last night and Wednesday night, with Dr. McGarrah speaking.

The committee for the new building project includes Albert C. Rose, chairman; Walter E. Perry, vice chairman; John F. Barkley, E. C. Bosworth, R. E. Bondy, J. R. Durnell, G. Wade Imirie, C. M. Eisele, A. H. Flournoy, J. R. Reeves, H. W. Curran, F. A. Bennett, J. H. Bowen, S. H. Womack and the Rev. Mr. Albertson.

REV. MR. ALBERTSON
Will lead Bethesda Presbyterian cornerstone laying rites

Boothby to Give Bible Lecture in Constitution Hall

"The Day When No Man Can Buy or Sell Except He Has a Mark—When Is That Day Coming?" is the theme of Evangelist Robert L. Boothby tomorrow night. This lecture will be one of the series of Bible lectures given every Sunday night in Constitution Hall, free to the public.

At 7:45 tomorrow night, Leslie Mansell will conduct a hymn sing and special music which will be broadcast direct from the stage of Constitution Hall over station WWDC. A 30-voice male chorus will sing during this program, and other special music will be broadcast in the 30-minute program preceding the lecture. The Bible lecture will not be broadcast.

Tuesday night, Evangelist Boothby will speak at the Bible Auditorium, Fifth and F Streets Northwest, on the topic: "The Only Woman God Said to Remember!" Wednesday, "In What Way Is the New Covenant New? Does the New Covenant Free Us From Obeying the Law?" Friday "Will There Be Another 'Dark Ages,' or Time of Religious Persecution?" This lecture will be illustrated with pictures.

Presentation of Flag Arranged at Church

A Scout flag will be presented tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the Washington Heights Baptist Church. There will also be a child dedication. The Rev. Glenn B. Faucett will use as his sermon theme, "A Comforting Assurance."

The Rev. Harlan Stenger, associate pastor of the First Baptist Church, will speak at 7:40 p. m. on "By Another Way."

Nine Clergymen To Participate in Radio Bible Quiz

Nine clergymen will participate in the eighty-ninth session of radio's Bible Quiz which will be heard today at 8:30 p. m. over WWDC.

The session will be marked by a unique three-cornered contest between groups of clergymen from Maryland, Virginia and the District.

Participating will be the Revs. Bernard N. Schneider, First Brethren Church; Robert L. McGougan, Christian Missionary Alliance Church, and Ernest E. Grosse, First Nazarene Church, all of the District. Representing Virginia will be the Revs. Frank L. Snyder, Clarendon Baptist Church, Arlington; Walter M. Lockett, Community Methodist Church, Arlington, and Francis J. Lukens, Colonial Village Church, and, representing Maryland, will be the Revs. Edward O. Clark, Chevy Chase Baptist Church; James S. Albertson, Bethesda Presbyterian Church, and Edgar Wells Beckett, First Methodist Church, Hyattsville.

Evangelist Dale Crowley will be master of ceremonies.

Flag Service Set Tomorrow

A service flag will be dedicated at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Chevy Chase Methodist Church. The flag will have 21 stars in it, one of which honors a young woman. The members of the church who are represented by stars are G. Leslie Callaway, Herbert H. Rice, Earl W. Mills, Charles E. Kenney, Edward E. Detmer, James David Leonard, Richard T. Culp, Carson W. Culp, Robert Burdick, Sayre Shafer, William Crewe, James Robert Troth, Karl F. Plitt, William Pennington, Robert J. Stevens, Edward C. Palmer, Charles J. Moon, Karl J. Moser, Eugene H. Guthrie, Rubin Stevens and Frances W. Smith.

Miss Smith is stationed at the radio school of the Canadian Air Corps, Montreal, Quebec.

Churches Sponsor Evangelistic Rites

A number of churches have organized committees to sponsor a series of evangelistic meetings at Almas Temple, beginning December 27, with the Rev. Bronwen Davies Clifford as speaker. He will be heard daily at 7:45 p. m. Saturdays excepted, for several weeks. There will be broadcasts over WWDC at 8:45 a. m. and 12:15 p. m. daily.

Service groups and church youth organizations have offered to provide special musical programs.

Dr. Vurpillot Leads Service in French

The Rev. Dr. Florian Vurpillot, honorary pastor of the French congregation, will conduct the French service at St. John's Episcopal Church tomorrow at 4 p. m. The subject of his sermon will be "La Femme de Lot."

The French congregation will hold its Christmas entertainment Thursday night in the parish hall. There will be a Christmas tree, the singing of French Noels, and a recital of the Christmas story by pupils of the Maret School.

Henderson Cites Gains in Defending Policies

pened had no price control been applied, he called for a collection of charts and launched out on a self-styled "lesson in economics" for the benefit of present reporters.

Henderson's figures showed that the index of cost of living items—covering fewer items than the general price level—revealed a 2½ per cent increase in 1942 compared to a 6 per cent increase in 1941. Food went up 9 per cent in 1941 compared to 6½ per cent this year. Clothing prices increased 9½ per cent in 1941, but dropped ¼ of 1 per cent this year, he pointed out. Housefurnishings increased 11 per cent last year, but increased only 1 per cent this year.

Points to Lack of Funds

A chart comparing prices during this year with World War I "shows present prices well below the rise in the last war with the whole trend in a different direction," Henderson said.

"I cannot see how they can say to take the lid off when the things that are not controlled go up and the things that are don't," he added.

Asked why he did not ration more scarce commodities, he pointed out that Congress had granted him considerably less funds than he requested, and that local rationing boards are already overworked.

Meat Rationing

Henderson indicated that meat rationing might not begin as previously scheduled about February 1. He said he wanted "all of the foreseeable difficulties pinned down around the edges before we do it."

In response to questions, he left an impression that nothing would be done to alleviate acute meat shortages in some cities—such as Detroit—which have resulted largely from packers using up slaughtering quotas, under a War Production Board order, ahead of time.

Oil rationing has been the subject of criticism because the complicated nature of the formula has thrown added work on local rationing boards, making it difficult for them to process applications promptly.

Although planned well in advance, fuel rationing had to be put in effect rapidly because the War Production Board only gave OPA a "go ahead" signal in mid-September, Henderson said.

"It was a job that could not be put off until all machinery was ready," he said. "It was dictated by King Winter."

He pointed out that rationing boards were already loaded with work in connection with gasoline and coffee rationing, and added that he was "proud" of the job done, and that with one exception, he would do it the same way again, if he had it to do over.

More Workers

The one exception would be securing larger numbers of volunteer workers. A total of 220,000 to 235,000 volunteers were used, while 500,000 would have been better, he said.

"We did not choose the complicated plan without great amounts of doubts on our own part that it could be handled," Henderson said. "We chose it because of the depth of the cut, because we were getting to the place where a large number of the applicants faced risk of hardship and threats to health."

Adjusting the ration books of the seven million applicants—"tailoring the books," Henderson called it—involved a tremendous administrative job, bigger than the job of issuing gasoline ration books, sugar books, or any other OPA job, he said.

"I knew what the dangers were, but I don't believe anybody with the responsibility for the health of that many civilians would have done otherwise," he said.

"The best thing for us is a simple system," he added.

Venturing into the field of prophecy, Henderson predicted that the oil rationing system would probably work as well as Nationwide gasoline rationing.

Pointing out that "dire predictions" of the consequence of Nationwide gasoline rationing were made in many quarters, particularly in Los Angeles and Detroit, he stated that in no case had vital war production been interfered with as a result of curtailed gas rations, and that the country seemed to be accepting the new imposition calmly.

President Discounts Report of Pope's Plea

President Roosevelt, told today of a report that Pope Pius XII had appealed to the United States and Britain to spare Rome from aerial bombardment, said yesterday the report should be taken with a grain of salt.

He prescribed the same course in replying to a press conference questioner who told him reports were current abroad that thousands of anti-Vichy persons still were languishing in jail in North Africa, despite orders by American authorities for the release of political prisoners.

Bureaus Battle Over Rail Pay Case

jurisdiction over all railroad labor disputes by an act of Congress passed in 1934.

In the background of the dispute is the question of applying WLB's "Little Steel" formula to railroading. Application of the formula would cut considerably the rail unions demands.

Rail operating unions representing 350,000 workers filed demands for a 30 per cent increase, amounting to $3 a day, this week. Previously, the non-operating unions, representing 900,000 workers, requested a 15 per cent boost, or 20 cents an hour.

Representatives of the carriers, on the other hand, have contended that railroading should receive the same treatment as heavy industries, such as steel. The carriers would like WLB to hold jurisdiction.

WLB officials are willing to allow the Mediation Board to handle wage questions subject to review by WLB if the board would take steps to speed up its machinery, particularly in disputes where strikes are threatened. WLB objected recently when the board showed no disposition to act on a dispute involving the Grand Trunk Railroad, although a strike threat was made by union officials. As a result of WLB intervention, the Mediation Board moved the case up on its docket for quicker action.

Coming Week's Church-Sponsored Events Herald the Approach of Yule

Special Events In Churches To Herald Yule

Special musical programs, social events and other church-sponsored activities tomorrow and in the coming week will herald the approach of Christmas.

The annual Christmas choral vespers sung by the choirs of the First Baptist Church, Harwood Hall, minister of music, will be given at 5 p. m. Two a cappella choirs numbering 125 voices will sing selections by Bach, Praetorius, Boughton, Christiansen, Dickinson, Luvaas, Wilhousky and Willoughby, as well as tunes from Sweden, Moravia and the Ukraine.

Ruth Reumann Hall will sing Petro Yon's "Gesu Bambino." Also featured will be antiphonal singing by the two choirs. Earl Lowder is organist.

The Renois Class of Reformation Lutheran Church will hold a meeting and Christmas party Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Elmer Whittington, 120 E Street Southeast. Assisting hostesses are Mrs. William Taylor and Mrs. Henry Stopsack.

The missionary unit of the Woman's Society of Christian Service, Eldbrooke Methodist Church, will meet Wednesday at 8 p. m. at the home of Mrs. J. B. Harry, with a Christmas theme dominating the function. A children's choir will sing Christmas carols.

The Young Adult Fellowship of Hamline Methodist Church will have a "Christmas in Music" program tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. William O. Tufts, jr., Hamline organist, will give carol interpretations.

A program of Christmas music and poetry will be given by the Pilgrim Fellowship tomorrow at 5:30 p. m. at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, 1410 Columbia Road Northwest. Members will bring gifts for the Congregational Spanish churches in New Mexico.

The popular Christmas pageant, "The New Born King," will be presented for the tenth consecutive year on December 20, afternoon and evening, at Fifteenth Street Christian Church, Fifteenth Street and Kentucky Avenue Southeast. Mrs. Harold Snyder again will direct.

A Christmas carol "sing" will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Ryland Methodist Church under the leadership of Harlan Page. The Rev. Karl G. Newell will speak on "Stories of the Christmas Carols."

Fifteen Government workers will be guests of Cleveland Park Congregational Church's "Family Night" dinner Wednesday at 6:30 p. m. Speakers will be Lester L. Evans, chairman of the new neighborhood committee of the church and the Rev. Paul W. Yinger, pastor.

The Ann Judson Circle of Calvary Baptist Church will hold a Christmas meeting Wednesday morning there. Mrs. John A Patterson, jr., will review "It Began in Burma."

A Christmas musical will be given by the glee club of Chevy Chase Junior College tomorrow at 4 p. m. at Chevy Chase Methodist Church. Mrs. R. W. Kelly will direct. The fellowship class of the church school will hold a Yule party Wednesday at 8 p. m. at the church.

The young people's glee club of the National City Christian Church, directed by Miss Jeanette Bittner, will join with the Fort Belvoir Glee Club, Corpl. Monroe Harris, director, in presenting Christmas excerpts from "The Messiah," by Handel, tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the church sanctuary. Pvt. Frank Widdis will be the conductor and Pvt. Joseph Hofrichter the organist.

There will be a church dinner at the Vermont Avenue Church building, 1308 Vermont Avenue, Thursday, at 6:15 p. m. Following the dinner, Dr. J. Warren Hastings will give Dickens' "Christmas Carol," as a dramatic reading. The price of the dinner is 50 cents and reservations must be in the church office, National 6230, by Wednesday, December 16. The public is invited to the dinner and the program.

Dr. Howard Stone Anderson will read a Fannie Hurst's "White Christmas" tomorrow at 8 p. m. at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest. The story background is Washington. The A Cappella Choir will sing three yule numbers.

The adult choir of Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, directed by Miss Jessie Masters, will present Hawley's cantata, "The Christ Child" tomorrow at 7:45 p. m.

2-Year Sojourn

Rector Quits To Return to Philadelphia

The Rev. George E. Condit has resigned as rector of the Esther Memorial Church of the Holy Communion in Congress Heights to become rector of the Church of the Redemption, Philadelphia, Pa., effective January 1, 1943.

Mr. Condit came here two years ago from St. Mark's Church in Philadelphia.

Commenting on his rectorship here, Washington diocesan officials said:

"Mr. Condit has done a good piece of work at Congress Heights during his short stay with us and we will be sorry to have him leave."

American U. Head Talks Tomorrow At N.C.Ave. Church

Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, will be guest speaker tomorrow at 11 a. m. at North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church, discussing "The Christmas Star Still Shines."

DR. DOUGLASS

Since coming to the university from Vermont two years ago, Dr. Douglass—one of the youngest university heads in America — has gained great popularity through his wise leadership of the Methodist institution, his forceful and dynamic pulpit and platform delivery, and his warm understanding of the problems of young people.

Dr. Douglas will be introduced by the Rev. E. A. Wilcher, pastor of the North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church.

Services to Honor Harding Masonic Lodge

Members of the Warren G. Harding Masonic Lodge will be guests of honor at services tomorrow at 8 p. m. at First Methodist Church, 512 Fourth Street Southeast. The Rev. A. F. T. Raum will speak on "Eternal Lights." At 11 a. m. an offering will be taken for the children's homes of the Baltimore Methodist Conference.

D. C. Bishop To Confirm 18 Candidates

St. John's Episcopal Church of Mount Rainier, Md., will have a red-letter day tomorrow when the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop, of Washington, confirms 18 candidates and ordains the Rev. Richard H. Wilner, jr., vicar of the church, to the priesthood.

The candidates will be Mary Jane Aiken, Dorothy Bolton, Evelyn Clark, Charles Gibson, Alfred Haley, Pauline Haley, Charles Herbert, Richard Hunter, Lucille Keller, Hiram Lyon, Ruth Ann Taliaferro, Malcolm Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rosenberger, Carl Russ, Mrs. Rose Ryan, Melvin Cooke and Mrs. Thomas P. Duvall.

The Rev. Mr. Wilmer, native Washingtonian, who has been deacon in charge of St. John's for six months, will be presented by the Rev. C. Randolph Mengers, former vicar of St. John's, and now rector of St. Columba's Church in Washington, D. C. The Rev. Cuthbert Aiken Simpson, D. D., of the General Theological Seminary faculty, New York City, will preach.

A native Washingtonian, Mr. Wilmer studied at St. Alban's School here, and at Taft School in Watertown, Conn. He was graduated from Yale University in 1939, from the General Theological Seminary in May, 1942, and on May 31—Trinity Sunday—was ordained a deacon by Bishop Freeman at the Washington Cathedral.

Dr. Rufus Jones Talks Tomorrow At Cathedral

Dr. Rufus Jones, noted Quaker, will address the second of the United Services tomorrow at 4 p. m. at the Washington Cathedral. The series is being sponsored jointly by the cathedral and the Washington Federation of Churches "on behalf of a united people in a time of national emergency," and presents each month a noted speaker, either a clergyman or layman, as the guest speaker.

Dr. Jones, eminent author, lecturer and teacher, is a leader of the devotional side of Christianity and at present professor of philosophy at Haverford College, Haverford, Pa.

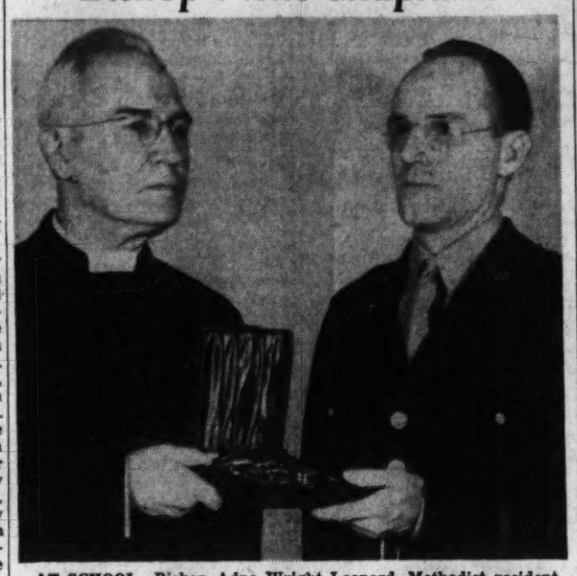
The Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, canon missioner of the Washington Cathedral, will preach at the 11 o'clock service of morning prayer, continuing in his series of sermons on "How God Comes Into the Life of Man." The sermon will be devoted to "God Comes in Church."

Special Rites End Tomorrow

The Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church will conclude a week of anniversary services tomorrow. During this week they have celebrated the 110th anniversary of the church organization and the 40th anniversary of their present location. At 11 a. m. tomorrow, Dr. R. Y. Nicholson, pastor from 1926 to 1934 and now District Superintendent of Baltimore South District of the Baltimore Conference, will speak on the subject, "For One Hundred Ten Years." At 8 o'clock Dr. Raymond W. White, pastor from 1935 to 1939 and now pastor of Star Methodist Church, Baltimore, will speak on the subject, "The Undying Flame."

The special music for the occasion will be rendered by the chorus choir of 25 voices.

Bishop Visits Chaplains



AT SCHOOL—Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, Methodist resident prelate and chairman of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, visited the Army Chaplains' School at Harvard University and is shown demonstrating a small communion service for emergency sacraments to Chaplain Harold R. McClay. A set like the one shown and a large field service are provided each Methodist chaplain by his denomination. Chaplain McClay, amongs graduates of the chaplains' school, served pulpits at Solomons and Hereford, Md., was educated at American University and Union Theological Seminary

Chaplains' Service Organized For Work During Air Raids

Organization of a chaplains' Service intergrated with the civilian defense organization of the metropolitan area, to meet the spiritual needs of people during air raids, has been announced here.

The plans have been worked out by the Clergy Advisory Committee and will be a part of the air-raid warden service, subject to the direction of Chief Air Raid Warden William J. Mileham.

Provides for 7 Centers

The plan applies specifically to the District. Other sections of the metropolitan area are organized along similar lines with the exception that the Catholic organization includes the entire metropolitan area.

As worked out by the three committee members, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, Dr. F. Reissig and Father William Sweeney, the organization calls for seven chaplain call centers corresponding to the seven control center areas. When casualties occur in an area, the chaplain call center for that area is notified by the area control center.

From the chaplain call center call will be made to a Catholic priest, a Jewish rabbi and a Protestant minister who, in turn, will call other clergymen in the affected area.

Centers Located

The seven chaplain centers will be St. Mary's Church, 1845 Fifth Street Northwest; Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A., at 1816 Twelfth Street Northwest; Rabbi Gerstenfeld's home, at 5620 Oregon Avenue Northwest; Nativity Church, at 6000 Georgia Avenue Northwest; the Rev. Paul Schilling, at 1346 Lawrence Street Northeast; Dr. J. H. Mumper, at Keller Memorial Church, 901 Maryland Avenue Northeast, and St. Teresa's Church, at 1244 V Street Southeast.

China Missionary Talks Tomorrow On War Perils

Dr. Frank A. Brown, missionary who returned from China on the Gripsholm after undergoing bombardment and other war perils, will describe his experiences tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. at the Presbyterian Church of the Pilgrims, Twenty-second and P Streets Northwest.

"Home From the Front" will be the theme of Dr. Brown, who spent 35 years in China.

The White Gifts Service of the Sunday school is set for December 18 at 7 p. m. in the assembly hall. The regular midweek service of the congregation will be omitted that night.

Woman's Day To Be Observed By Disciples

Prominent women of the Disciples of Christ body will occupy pulpits as guest speakers tomorrow, when Woman's Day is observed by Washington area Disciples' Churches.

Mrs. J. Warren Hastings will occupy the pulpit of the National City Christian Church at 10:50. As part of the Woman's Day emphasis, Mrs. Hastings will deliver the morning sermon on the subject, "The Unquenchable Light." Other women who will take part in the service are Mrs. C. G. Randell, who will give the morning prayer, Mrs. D. R. Knight who will lead the responsive reading, and Mrs. T. T. Williford who will read the Scriptutre.

Mrs. Hastings is a widely known and gifted speaker. She holds her master's degree from the Yale University graduate school and has been outstandingly successful as a speaker to and worker with university-age groups. The local congregation is looking forward to her address this Sunday. Dr. J. Warren Hastings, minister of the church, will preside over the service. The public is cordially invited.

The Woman's Council of the Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D Street, Northeast, will have charge of the services there and present the annual Woman's Day program. The Rev. Carroll C. Roberts will deliver the address at 11 a. m. and his theme will be "The Magnificent Obsession."

The president of the council, Mrs. Carroll C. Roberts, will preside. Mrs. Helen Moudy will deliver the invocation, Mrs. George Tolson will give the offertory prayer and Miss Nellie Dalrymple will lead in the reading of the responsive scripture lesson. The young ladies of the Junior Council will assist with the ushering and will receive the morning offering.

The service is designed primarily to honor the women of the church who during the years have supported the work of Christian missions and the enterprises of Christian benevolences.

Mrs. Worser to Speak

Mrs. T. D. Worser, former missionary to Japan, will speak tomorrow at 10 a. m. at Lewis Memorial Methodist Church, Third and Hamilton Streets Northwest.

10,000 New Members Hoped For in Church Campaign

Committee Urges Newcomers to Join On January 3

Start the new year of 1943 as a regular church attendant and as an active church member! This is the slogan of the evangelism committee of the Federation of Churches headed by Dr. Robin Gould of Francis Asbury Methodist Church.

The committee has named Sunday, January 3 as the day when the thousands of newcomers to this Capital area ought to unite or designate their desire to unite with some local church. Many will want to write to their home churches at once in order to get that letter of transfer.

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the federation says: "Here is the greatest field in America for the churches. I hope at least 10,000 new people will come into our local churches on the first Sunday of the new year. The Nation's Capital ought to be the healthiest center, religiously speaking, in America. I wonder if it is?"

The evangelism committee, made up of 24 members, will meet again on December 15 in the Federation of Churches dining room to lay further plans.

The committee includes Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Luthern Church of the Reformation, and federation president, and Dr. Reissig, ex officio members; Dr. Robin Gould, pastor of Francis Asbury Methodist Church, general chairman, and the following: Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, Episcopal; the Rev. A. O. Hjelm, Lutheran; the Rev. Edward H. Pruden, Baptist; the Rev. M. C. Stith, Baptist; the Rev. Esther M. Boyer, Church of God, the Rev. Paul Yinger, Congregational; the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, Congregational, the Rev. Carroll C. Roberts, Christian; the Rev. G. E. Schnable, Evangelical; the Rev. Lee A. Peeler, Evangelical Reformed; the Rev. F. Nelson Schlegel, Evangelical Reformed.

Rev. J. A. Pfeiffer, Lutheran Church; the Rev. T. K. Bowers, United Lutheran; the Rev. H. F. Chandler, Baptist; Dr. Peter Marshall, Presbyterian; the Rev. A. F. Elmes, Congregational; the Rev. E. L. Harrison, Baptist; the Rev. J. F. Monroe, the Rev. Edward Gabler and the Rev. Albert Rasmussen.

The committee representing the Washington Ministerial Union in the drive is headed by the Rev. Dr. J. Harold Mumper, pastor of Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, and includes the Rev. E. G. Latch, the Rev. R. P. Schearrer, the Rev. J. Elliott and the Rev. Harry Bell.

Come and behold Him, born the King of angels.
O come, let us adore Him.
Christ, the Lord.
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Though of doubtful authorship, the writing of this familiar processional is usually attributed to St. Bonaventura, a Franciscan friar, who became a Cardinal. Roman Catholic in origin, whoever its author, it is a hymn qualified to be sung by the Universal Church.

Dumbarton Church Waits 170th Birthday

Dumbarton Avenue Methodist Church, Georgetown, oldest church of its denomination in Washington, tomorrow will mark its 170th birthday, with Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, speaking at 11 a. m. The Rev. Lloyd C. Davis, pastor, will speak on "The Church Triumphant" at 8 p. m.

The church was used as a hospital during the Civil War and was reopened for services shortly afterward.

History records that President Lincoln was a visitor at the first service after the reopening, and Bishop Matthew Simpson preached.

A brief history of the congregation will be read at tomorrow's services, and the choir will render a special program.

Army Man to Give Organ Recital

Sergt. Hans Vigeland of the Fort Myer Army Music School will give an organ recital at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church tomorrow at 5 p. m., continuing the series of vesper musicals.

Dr. Harold E. Nicely, of the Brick Presbyterian Church, Rochester, N. Y., will be in the pulpit at the morning service.

The Westminster Fellowship will meet at 5 o'clock with Howard Rees as speaker. Mr. Rees is secretary of the Baptist Student Union and works in conjunction with students of George Washington, American and Maryland Universities.

The Presbytery of Washington City will convene in the Covenant Church on Monday at 10 a. m.

'Share-Home-at-Christmas' Plan Starts in Churches

"Share Your Home at Christmas"

I will gladly share my home with those away from home on Christmas Day.

I will entertain ..... Government war workers.
(How many)

I shall expect my guests to arrive at .....
(Time)

Name .....

Address .....

Telephone (home) ..... (office) .....

Church (or reference) .....

Please mail this notice to the Defense Commission, Federation of Churches, 1751 N Street Northwest, Decatur 3132. War workers wishing to be Christmas Day guests should contact the personnel office of their departments.

The "share-your-home-at-Christmas" project being sponsored by the Federation of Churches' Defense Commission with the Government's cooperation will begin officially in churches tomorrow, when thousands of share-your-home cards will be distributed at religious services throughout the city.

People wishing to be Christmas Day hosts to war workers, thereby brightening an otherwise drab day for some lonely person, will fill out the cards and send them to the Federation's Defense Commission, clearing house for the hosts' names, addresses, etc. Government personnel departments are serving as clearing houses for the employes' names, etc.

Grover L. Hartman is director of the defense commission.

Dr. Long Addresses Meeting

Dr. Ralph H. Long of New York, executive director of the National Lutheran Council, will be the guest speaker at a meeting of the Lutheran Men of Churches of Washington and vicinity at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol Street Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. The meeting is being scheduled under the auspices of the Lutheran Ministerial Association.

Dr. Long has given effective leadership to the National Lutheran Council which represents 3,500,000 Lutherans in the United States. It is also the American section of the Lutheran World Convention which is the international federation of world Lutherism.

At present a large portion of the work is concerned with the direction of Lutheran world action which cares for the work among servicemen, maintenance of relief and rehabilitation services in Europe and support of orphaned missions throughout the world. Over $600,000 has been expended in 1942 for this work including $350,000 for work among servicemen.

Service Roll Dedication Set For Tomorrow

A service honor roll bearing the names of 108 members of the church in the service of their country will be dedicated at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. Chaplain R. W. Faulk, U. S. N., and Chaplain R. J. Honeywell, U. S. A., will participate in the service. Jeffrey Gould, a soldier soloist, will sing "The Twenty-third Psalm" by Malotte, and a Navy bugler will give the call to worship. Dr. Hollister, the pastor, has chosen "They and We," as the subject of his sermon.

"The Messiah" by Handel will be presented by the Chancel Choir tomorrow at 5 p. m. Soloists will be Elizabeth D. Evans, Evelyn A. Koenig, Ruth L. Russell, Gordon W. McBride, and Charles E. Stebbins, jr., director. Kenneth W. Frisbie will be at the organ.

The Evening Guild Section, led by Mrs. R. L. Sanford, will have a Christmas party Friday evening, in the Church House.

Missionary to Preach At St. Stephen Church

The Rev. Charles H. Sergel, missionary to Brazil for 39 years, will be the special preacher at the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, Sixteenth and Newton Streets Northwest, at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow morning. Under the leadership of Mr. Sergel, three primitive Brazilian missions became self-supporting parishes. At present he is in charge of the church work at Sao Paulo, Brazil. Mr. and Mrs. Sergel have two preacher sons, one a parish clergyman in England, the other a missionary in Uganda, East Africa.

Universal Bible Sunday Rites On Schedule for Tomorrow

President Roosevelt Indorses Annual Church Observance

DR. FRANCIS STIFLER

Universal Bible Sunday will be observed throughout the Christian world tomorrow, again sponsored by the American Bible Society.

Locally, most Protestant churches have arranged special sermons on the Bible Sunday celebration, as well as programs in Bible classes and other events.

Dr. W. L. Darby, president of the Washington City Bible Society and former executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Potomac Heights Community Church on "The Bible In a Warring World" and at 6:30 p. m. before the young people of Kellar Memorial Lutheran Church.

Dr. Francis C. Stifler, editorial secretary of the American Bible Society, will speak Monday at 8 p. m. at the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association rally at Epworth Methodist Church, Thirteenth Street and North Carolina Avenue Northeast. "America Must Do It" will be his theme.

War Savings Stamps awards will be made to the persons exhibiting the three oldest Bibles, and Dr. Page McK. Etchison will formally accept a check for almost $500 for the purchase of New Testaments for service men. The check represents contributions of many local classes and individuals in the project.

Carol Service Planned

A Christmas carol service will be held tomorrow at 8 p.m. at Woodside Methodist Church, 8814 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring, with the church school orchestra and three choirs singing.

Guadalcanal Battle Pictured By Ferrymen

Indianapolis, Dec. 11, (AP).—Six navigators of the First Troop Carrier Command, just returned from two months of ferrying supplies to American troops on Guadalcanal, related today that at one stage of the campaign the Japanese held 100 yards of ground between the Marine-controlled bomber and fighter runaways on Henderson Field.

One night, according to the story told by Lieut. Charles J. Thomas, 22, of Austin, Tex., the commander of our fighter forces on the island telephoned the commander of the bomber squadron and asked, "What I'd like to know is who is in control of this field? I look out and see about 100 Japs to every five Marines."

"But the Marines are so well established now," added Thomas, "that I don't know what it would take to get them out."

Battle Viewed from Air

The navigators, who had training in England before going to the southwest Pacific, told their story at Stout Field here, their home base, in an interview approved by headquarters of the First Troop Carrier Command.

In the group, besides Thomas, were Lieut. James H. Miller, 24, Hyattesville, Md.; Lieut. Forrest W. Tippen, 23, Abilene, Tex.; Lieut. Fred J. Lorenz, 23, Chicago; Lieut. Frank W. Nicoletti, 23, New Castle, Pa., and Lieut. James D'Orazio, 25, New York City.

They watched from the air as our Marines and Navy blasted Japanese landing barges attempting to reach shore in the Solomons.

"We could see the barges burning," Lieutenant Thomas said, "and our planes going in and out of the field (Henderson) like flies. They'd come in, get loaded with torpedoes and bombs, and take off again. I never saw so many planes in my life."

Lieutenant Tippen said that the ferry planes had no trouble in flying over Japanese lines to reach Henderson Field because the Japs had no big guns. Jap bombings have done little damage to the field, he said.

Tippen found nine other Alibene boys on duty at one landing spot in the South Pacific and they got together for their own party one night.

Lieutenant Miller Son Of D.C. Insurance Man

Lieutenant Miller is the son of Chester H. Miller, Washington representative of the Equitable Life Insurance Co., with offices in the Evans Building, and Mrs. Miller, who reside at 4318 Van Buren Street, University Park, Md.

A native of York, Pa., he moved here when 11 years old, and is a graduate of Central High School. He attended the University of Maryland for three years before enlisting in the Army Air Corps in October, 1941. He trained at Tulsa, Okla., Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala., and Mathers Field, Calif., where he won his navigator's wings.

He visited his parents in September for three days following his return from England. They have not seen him since, and newspaper accounts of his visit in Indianapolis brought them their first knowledge of his return to the States. They hope, Mrs. Miller said, that the newspaper stories are the prelude to a Christmas visit home.

Former Nazi Gunner Seized in N. J. Raids

Newark, N. J., Dec. 11 (INS).—Fourteen additional German aliens, including a former expert antitank gunner at a Nazi camp, have been rounded up in raids throughout New Jersey, the FBI announced today. The arrests were made in an FBI swoop through 52 communities. The former Nazi gunner was in possession of a medal attesting to his marksmanship, and served under Hitler in 1935 and 1936, the FBI said.

Dougherty and Ruzicka Give Impressive 2-Piano Recital

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents Celius Dougherty and Vincenz Ruzicka in a two-piano recital on Friday night. Programs: Sonata in A major (Clementi), Andante and Variations, Op. 46 (Schumann), Sonata (Hindemith), La Valse (Ravel), group of short pieces by Falla, Tailleferre, Gilbert, Casella, Bizet, Howe, Resipghi and Stravinski.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Shortly to be separated by the exigencies of war, the admirable piano team of Celius Dougherty and Vincenz Ruzicka played an impressive recital last evening in Coolidge Auditorium at the Library of Congress for an audience that gave them an enthusiastic hail and farewell. Their performance was a model of technical clarity and consentient interpretation, and their program also was a model of its kind, proving that there is no difficulty whatever in finding unhackneyed works. Moreover, all the works except two were originally composed for two pianos, and the pair of arrangements by Mr. Dougherty were quite off the beaten path.

BROWN

The artists had the advantage of offering one composition written expressly for them, a new sonata by the exponent of "useful" music, Paul Hindemith. The use in this case was that of the sonorities of the instruments, and ingenious indeed were the chime effects in the first movement. The other practical applications of theory were more apparent to students of harmony than to the average listener, but they were all interesting. Particularly so was the recitative style, borrowed from one of Beethoven's sonatas, borrowed from a fourteenth century poem, "This Worldes Joie," in a quaint and poetic manner. One movement was in canon form, and another was a sturdy fugue. On a first hearing it sounded more like a suite than a sonata.

Muzio Clementi, the predecessor and, to a certain extent, the guide of Beethoven, was the first composer on the program with a sonata in B major which proved unexpectedly charming. He was followed by Robert Schumann, represented by a complete and restored version of the Andante and Variations in B flat major.

In choosing a group of short pieces, the collaborators ranged far and wide, and must have done some research to discover the jesting "Trompette et Tambour" by Bizet. The group opened with an arrangement of a pantomime from Maunel de Falla's ballet, "El Amor Brujo," excellently contrived. Included Germaine Tailleferre's "Cache-cache Mitoula," Alfred Casella's "Marcietta," Ottorino Respighi's "Sicilian Hunting Song," and an arrangement of Stravinski's "Circus Polka Composed for a Young Elephant." What the auditors liked best in this group and applauded the most warmly were Mary Howe's lovely "Berceuse" and Henry F. Gilbert's sympathetically ironical "American Dance." The recital closed with a brilliant performance of Ravel's impressionistic "La Valse."

Inflation Gap For '43 to Be 16 Billions

The inflationary gap—the amount of money which is jingling around loose looking for something to buy that isn't there and threatening price ceilings in the process—has been placed at 16 billion dollars for 1943 by high Government officials, it was learned yesterday.

The estimate of the amount of this gap was arrived at in the following manner:

Government officials believe that our national income will reach 125 billion dollars next year. About 39 billion dollars of that amount probably will be disposed of paying for taxes, in savings, paying off debts and in other non-inflationary ways. That leaves 86 billions looking for goods.

Since only 68 to 70 billion dollars worth of consumer goods will be on the market, the difference which will find no use becomes 16 billion dollars.

Police Plan Bundle-for-Kelly Movement Here

Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department, literally has lost his shirt!

And, what's more, it's not only one shirt but seven of them together with six collars, valued, the police chief said, at $18.75.

According to a report made to police, Emanuel D. Harrell, 728 Harvard Street Northwest, said he was delivering the shirts to Major Kelly last Wednesday. He parked his truck en route, he said, at Columbia and Quarry Roads Northwest to make another delivery. But, when he arrived at Major Kelly's residence, the Kelly bundle had disappeared.

Now, Major Kelly, widely known for his sartorial impeccability, would like to have Santa Claus find his size 17 shirts if his police fall down.

Italians Cry For Peace, Say Sailors in Rio

By International News Service

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 11.—First-hand accounts of conditions in bomb-battered Genoa were given in Rio de Janeiro today by the crew of the Swiss steamship Siger.

Mass meetings demanding peace are held in the Italian city daily, as well as throughout Italy, the men said, and Italian public morale is at its lowest as a result of the Royal Air Force raids and the scarcity of food.

Lack of adequate air raid shelters in Italy's cities, the crew members said, had resulted in high casualties in every raid, and poor antiaircraft defenses allow the R. A. F. bombers to blast their targets from extremely low altitude.

The men reported wholesale devastation in the bombed cities, particularly Genoa.

(Genoa, because if its "pitiably inadequate antiaircraft defenses, has suffered heavier damage from R. A. F. raids than the German cities of Rostok and Luebeck, the British radio said tonight.

(Both the Nazi cities have been bombed more often than Genoa, the announcer explained, but were able to offer much stronger ground fire against the British bombers. Genoa's defenses were found to be "woefully weak," he declared.)

The Siger sailed from Genoa after miraculously escaping a hail of bombs that battered the harbor during a raid, the sailors revealed.

De Young's Mother Would Decorate Son's Indian Aide

"I'd certainly like to decorate that Indian," declared Mrs. Helen K. De Young last night after learning from newspaper accounts that the life of her son, Lieut. Daniel De Young, had been saved by "Chief" Alonzo Enos, who stood guard over his wounded officer in New Guinea and later crawled back to the American lines for help.

De Young, only 19, was leading a patrol against the Japs when he was wounded in the foot. After being saved by Enos, a genuine American Indian of New Mexico, the young officer was flown to Port Moresby, where he is recovering.

War Housing to Be Luncheon Topic of Sir Ernest Simon

Members of the Washington Housing Association will hear Sir Ernest Simon of the British Ministry of Works and Planning discuss war housing at their luncheon today at the Mayflower Hotel.

A symposium on "How Is War Housing Related to Postwar Washington" will include discussion by Senator Harold H. Burton of Ohio, Arthur Flemming, Civil Service Commissioner; John H. Blandford, jr., NHA Administrator, and John Ihlder of the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Neal Will Head Combined Drive Of D. C. Red Cross

Alfred G. Neal, president of Potomac Electric Power Co., has been named head of the combined Red Cross Roll Call and War Fund Campaign to be held in March, J. Clifford Folger, chairman of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross, announced yesterday.

Neal was chairman of the group solicitation unit of the Community Chest in 1941 and 1942. He is a member of the board of directors of the Community War Fund and a member of the board of trustees of Group Hospitalization.

Widener Art To Be Shown Here Dec. 20

Art lovers should mark this date on their calendar; December 20 at 3 p. m.

That's when the National Gallery of Art will open for public inspection the celebrated collection of some of the world's greatest paintings which has been given to the Nation by Joseph E. Widener of Elkins Park, Pa.

Included in the collection are Giovanni Bellini's Feast of the Gods; 3 great works of Titian; Raphael's Small Cowper Madonna, and 14 paintings by Rembrandt, including The Mill, regarded as one of the greatest landscapes in the history of art, and the pair of portraits which rank among Rembrand's noblest interpretations of character.

Other outstanding items are the Van Dyck portraits; 2 superb paintings by Vermeer; fine examples of the work of Gainsborough, Reynolds, Romney, Turner and Constable. Sculpture in the collection is by Donatello, Desiderio de Settignano and others.

In choosing the opening date, the National Gallery kept in mind Donor Widener's desire that the public be allowed to enjoy the collection at the earliest possible time. Accordingly, a day was picked which it was felt would permit many servicemen, warworkers and others—free from their tasks only on weekends—to attend the first showing.

Mr. Widener and his family will attend the opening after lunching with the National Gallery Director and Mrs. David E. Finley, Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone, ex-officio chairman of the gallery's board of trustees; Mrs. Stone, and others.

A group of servicemen, some back from overseas, will be special guests that evening at a supper in the gallery, and a symphony concert will be held at 8 p. m. in the east garden court.

Magicians Put On Annual Act At Press Club

Three servicemen took time out from the war effort to appear with other members of the Washington Assembly of the Society of American Magicians in their annual show at the National Press Club auditorium last night.

Displaying tricks of the trade before a loudly enthusiastic audience of children were: Capt. C. C. Slayton, Navy hydrographic office and Lieut. Herbert H. Francis, Army chief signal officer, and Yeoman Fred Johanson. Others who appeared were: Dr. Riley D. Moore; Hugh A. Carroll of War Production Board; Fred H. Untiedt, attorney; Dr. L. W. Dub of the National Health Institute; and Carl D. Shoemaker, secretary of the United States Committee on Wild Life Protection. President of the assembly, Ralph H. Mittendorff of the American Security & Trust Co. was master of ceremonies.

Grade School's Smoking Room Is Discontinued

Memphis, Dec. 11, (AP).—Seventh and eighth grade smokers at Frayser Grammar School had their special school-approved "smoker" discontinued today.

Miss Sue Powers, superintendent of county schools, issued an order closing the room where nine youthful smokers could gather for a noonday cigarette, and termed the matter "a closed issue."

Miss Esse Anderson, principal, said she started the "smoker" after all efforts to stop campus smoking had failed. So she told the boys: "Bring me a note from your parents that it's all right for you to smoke and you can use this room to do your smoking."

Nine notes came in — all for seventh and eighth graders with ages ranging from 12 to 14.

Nazis Reported Looting Famed Paris Library

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Dec. 11.—The Germans have been looting the Bibliotheque Nationale at Paris, one of the world's most celebrated libraries, according to reports reaching Fighting French quarters at London. The Nazis are said to have taken away Napoleon's will and collections of letters of Marie Antoinette and Louis XVI.

Missouri Muddle

Old Cannon Leads Trio To Grief

By the Associated Press

Jefferson City, Mo., Dec. 11.—A grand larceny charge was filed tonight against the editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch editorial page and two other St. Louisans as a sequel to an unsuccessful attempt to haul away an orphaned capitol cannon and sent it off to war—as scrap.

The charge, against the editor, Ralph Coughlan, and the two men who tried to carry out his editorial suggestion for scrapping the Mexican War relic, was filed at the close of a tempestuous day around the Missouri capitol.

The other St. Louisans identified themselves as Sidney W. Stearns and Ross William Riley.

Gov. Forrest C. Donnell—who prevented the cannon on the capitol grounds from being scrapped in the first place—was most indignant of all State officials.

Calls It Outrageous

"It is outrageous," he declared. "We are going to the limit on this thing."

While the cannon incident grew in intensity Stearns and Riley sat in jail. This is what they had done:

They drove to the capitol grounds in a half-ton truck at midnight, intending to tote off the cannon nobody owned and pile it on a scrap heap. They saw it was too big a job. So they called a wrecker. The wrecker called the police.

Governor Donnell recently declined to convert the gun to scrap because the State had no legal title of ownership. When the Legislature tried to declare State ownership Donnell vetoed the resolution.

Coghlin suggested in a Sunday editorial that it might be a good idea for somebody to haul the old gun off the capitol grounds and pile it on a scrap heap, since evidently no one owned the relic.

Stearns said today he had read the editorial and had discussed the role of the cannon with Coghlan.

"Up to Some Citizen"

"Mr. Coghlan was serious about wanting these cannon on the scrap pile," Stearns said, "and since neither the Governor nor the attorney general would claim title to them, I felt it was up to some citizen to do this patriotic job.

"I agreed with him, so I decided I would do it myself—as a taxpayer and at his expense."

Coghlan would not discuss Stearns' statement beyond saying: "The Post-Dispatch story speaks for itself."

Rhoads Admits Conspiring to Withhold Tools

Robert Blee Rhoads, dismissed WPB executive, pleaded guilty in District Court yesterday to an indictment accusing him and four others of conspiring to violate the War Powers Act by withholding $150,000 worth of critical machine tools from war production.

Rhoads, former chief of WPB's Available Used Tools section, had pleaded innocent at his arraignment September 9, but withdrew the plea yesterday. Justice Bolitha J. Laws released him under $10,000 bond.

The other defendants, whose pleas of not guilty still stand, are: Ralph Lamont Glaser, formerly Rhoads' assistant; Louis E. Emerman, president of a large Chicago machine tools firm bearing his name, and Clarence J. O'Brien and Frank L. O'Brien, jr., of the O'Brien Machinery Co., Philadelphia.

Returned by the grand jury August 31, the indictment charges the quintet with preventing allocation to industry of 71 machine tools by failing to report their availability. Rhoads and Glasser allegedly received $15,000 each for acting as go-between in the sale of an option on the machinery to the O'Briens. The tools were owned by Emerman.

Rhoads and Glasser also were charged with making false claims to the Government for traveling expenses. Rhoads entered a guilty plea to this charge yesterday.

The indictment was obtained by Tom C. Clark, chief of the War Frauds Unit of the Justice Department, and three assistants, J. Frank Gaffney, Pat Coon and George M. Fay.

100 Md. Men Facing Draft To Remain Home Over Yule

Santa Claus, in the person of Col. Henry C. Stanwood, State Director of Selective Service, has arranged for nearly 100 married men scheduled to be drafted next week to remain home over Christmas in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase-Potomac, Md., area.

Members of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Selective Service Board No. 3, had been perturbed by the fact that two inductions are scheduled for next week which will include the first batch of men with wives but no children ordered up for induction. Chairman Frederic P. Lee, Francis W. Hill, jr., and Judge R. Granville Curry, members of the board, have been in correspondence with Colonel Stanwood urging that some provision be made to keep these men from being called to camp before Christmas.

Two inductions have been postponed, the one set for Monday, December 14, and a second for Wednesday, December 16, until December 18 at 7 a. m.

In addition, Colonel Stanwood has agreed that the men who are accepted on the deferred date will be given a two-week furlough instead of seven days as at present. This will mean they will be able to stay home with their wives over Christmas and not have to report until New Year's Day.

The extraordinary action was taken because this is the first county board to bite deeply into married men without children for induction and it was felt it would be an additional hardship to take them just before Christmas when other boards have not done so.

Men who were ordered to report Monday, December 14, and Wednesday, December 16, at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase board, will not report until December 18 at 7 a. m. and are assured they will be given a two-week furlough before induction if they pass the tests, Chairman Lee announced.

Tax Board Rules Against Ad Man's Plea

By Charles O. Gridley

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Albert D. Lasker, former Chicago advertising executive, did not receive anything which could be valued in money for the $375,000 he gave his second wife, Doris Kenyon Sills, movie star of silent pictures, to release claims on one-half his 10-million-dollar estate prior to their divorce in 1939, the United States Board of Tax Appeals ruled yesterday.

In consequence, Lasker was required to pay $51,000 in taxes on the amount which he gave his wife in 1938. He had appealed from the ruling of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, which was upheld by the board. Lasker contended that the $375,000 had been paid to cancel an antenuptial agreement and in consideration of release by the former Doris Kenyon of all interest in his property.

The agreement, it was disclosed, provided that should she be living with him as his wife at the time of his death, a life trust equal in value to one-half his estate, less certain deductions, should be set up for her.

Lasker, who now lives in New York and has remarried, acquired great wealth during his career in Chicago. He was chairman of the United States Shipping Board during the last war, a part owner of the Chicago Cubs, and reputed author of the plan to reorganize baseball which resulted in appointment of Judge K. M. Landis as baseball czar.

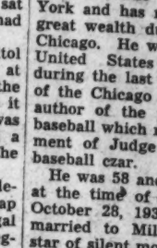
He was 58 and Mrs. Sills was 40 at the time of their marriage on October 28, 1938. She had been married to Milton Sills, another star of silent movies. Lasker's net worth on October 14, 1938, was "in excess of 10 million dollars" the tax board's opinion said, while "her net worth on that date was negligible." On December 21 of the same year they entered into the agreement by which Mrs. Lasker gave up all her rights under the prenuptial agreement and received $375,000. She was granted a Reno divorce on June 8, 1939.

The board found that the most Lasker received for the payment was the right to give away half of his estate during his lifetime which "could not be said to support a valuation in terms of money."

Lasker is now board chairman of Lord & Thomas, national advertising agency. His first wife died in 1936.

Frank Wilder, Post Reporter, To Join Army

Frank Wilder, 22, Post reporter on the "courthouse beat" since last May, will enter the Army December 19, the newspaper's 117th employe in the armed services.



WILDER

Wilder, who covered the Eklund trial and other cases that made headlines, was born in New York City. He was graduated from the College of the City of New York with the class of 41. He got his master of science degree at the Columbia School of Journalism.

Prior to coming to The Post on May 2, last, he was employed by the Brooklyn Eagle, breaking into news gathering at the start in the New York environment—towards which thousands of American newspapermen have worked their way.

Mr. Wilder will be inducted into the Army from New York. His parents now reside in Brooklyn.

Brown Blocks Senate Approval Of Farm Bill

Senator Brown (Democrat) of Michigan yesterday blocked Senate approval of a House-passed bill which would require the Administration to include farm labor costs in determination of parity prices.

Brown, who led the fight against farm-bloc demands for higher parity prices during debate on the recently enacted anti-inflation bill, objected when the measure was called on the Senate unanimous consent calendar.

Later he asserted he would continue to stand in the way of the bill for the life of the present Congress, although he realized, he said, that there can be no Senate action on the Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan extension bill, of which he is the sponsor, unless the parity bill is accepted.

Victory Loan Drive Progresses

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced yesterday that the Treasury has achieved two-thirds of its goal in the current nine-billion-dollar victory loan drive and held out the hope that another major financing campaign may not be necessary until spring.

During the first 11 days of this month, he said, $6,600,000,000 in Government securities were sold, a rate of sale surpassing that of the fourth victory loan of the last war, when $6,993,000,000 in bonds was sold in 21 days.

Capital Store Sales Up 4% During Week

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales in the week ended December 5 were 4 per cent higher than in the same week last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night.

Long a leader in the reserve district in retail sales gain, the Capital in recent weeks has experienced somewhat of a slowdown. The entire Fifth District for the latest week showed a sales gain of 10 per cent while Baltimore volume was 19 per cent heavier.

For the four weeks ended December 5, Washington sales were 9 per cent improved over the same period last year while the Fifth District displayed an average increase of 13 per cent.

Nationally, department store sales last week averaged 9 per cent higher than the corresponding week a year ago. All Federal Reserve districts reported sales increases last week as follows:

Boston, 1 per cent; New York, 3 per cent; Philadelphia, 11 per cent; Cleveland, 4 per cent; Atlanta, 13 per cent; Chicago, 10 per cent; St. Louis, 2 per cent; Kansas City, 24 per cent; Dallas, 21 per cent; San Francisco, 24 per cent.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

More Bond Sales Reported

Three more substantial sales of Government bonds were reported yesterday by Winslow B. Vandeventer, local chairman of the Victory Fund Committee.

National headquarters of the American Federation of Labor purchased $200,000 of Treasury 2½s, Potomac Insurance Co. $150,000 of Treasury 1¾s, Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union $25,000 of 2½s.

Keymen of the local drive will meet again Monday to hear a complete report of the campaign, including a summary of the amount sold to individual investors.

Bank Elevates Pair

Floyd E. Davis, president of the Lincoln National Bank, yesterday announced promotions of two veteran officers.

Richard A. Norris was elevated to the executive vice presidency, succeeding Albert S. Gatley, who retired. Mr. Norris, associated with the bank for 22 years, formerly was vice president and cashier.

Nelson M. Stokes was elevated to a vice presidency. Mr. Stokes, associated with the bank for the past 20 years, is manager of the Lincoln branch office at Seventeenth and H Streets Northwest.

Bond Club to Hear Nash

Walter Nash, New Zealand Minister to the United States, will address members of the Bond Club of Washington at a luncheon meeting Thursday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mr. Nash is Finance Minister as well as Deputy Prime Minister of the war cabinet in New Zealand. J. Clifford Folger, president of the Bond Club, will preside.

Peoples Drug Sales Up 20%

Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., and subsidiary companies yesterday reported November sales of $2,816,466, a gain of $476,041 or 20 per cent over the same month last year.

For the first 11 months this year sales aggregated $28,693,715, a gain of $4,273,509 or 17.5 per cent over the corresponding period of 1941.

Local Dividend Voted

Directors of the Mount Vernon Mortgage Corp., local real estate firm, have declared a 3 per cent dividend for the current calendar year, payable December 21 to stockholders of record December 15. The disbursement of $30,000 will go to approximately 2000 stockholders, according to Robert T. Highfield, secretary-treasurer.

Mergenthaler Elects Heads

Joseph T. Mackey has been elected president of the Mergenthaler Linotype Co., whose stock is listed on the Washington Stock Exchange. Other officers elected included:

Frederic D. McKenney, vice president; Edward A. Reynolds, secretary; George A. Schwaninger, treasurer, and the following vice presidents: Thomas J. Mercer, Conrad A. Hanson, Harry L. Gage, Chauncey H. Griffith, Reginald W. Orcutt and Eugene B. Mirovitch.

Morris Plan Votes Extra

Directors of the Morris Plan Bank of Washington have declared an extra dividend of 2 per cent in addition to the regular 3 per cent semiannual dividend, payable December 30 to stockholders of record December 21. Directors also authorized the usual Christmas bonus for employes and officers.

Ohio to Ration Liquor After Christmas

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 11.—State Liquor Director Jacob B. Taylor announced today that a card system for rationing liquor to "every qualified individual" would be put into effect in Ohio by January 1 "if it is physically possible."

Definitely, the program will not apply before Christmas, he said.

His action came 10 days after sales in State monopoly stores were restricted to 1 quart for each customer daily. That system of modified rationing came upon the heels of a wave of buying that stripped many store shelves and cut the State's stock nearly in half, Taylor said.

"It will be a card system unless some unforeseen obstacle develops meanwhile," said the director. "Cards will be issued to every person qualified under the law, as under present Federal rationing programs. To limit cards to one per family would be inequitable."

The amount of liquor to be allotted to each purchaser and over what period of time are details yet to be determined. Taylor asserted, however, that the program would allow consumers "considerably less" than the tentative quart a day per person restriction.

To enable the department to replenish its waning supplies, all stocks probably will be frozen in warehouses and stores for a brief period before the effective date of rationing.

Declining comment on a "liquor holiday" Taylor said the monopoly's operations will continue without interruption at least until Christmas.

Taylor said at least four other States—Virginia, North Carolina, Washington and Iowa—have liquor rationing.

Why a Little French Church Burns Candle for U. S. Navy

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 11.—A perpetual candle probably still burns in a little church on the coast of Brittany, honoring the United States Navy because of a gift that a young Assistant Secretary of the Navy made to the church in 1918.

The story of this candle, told for the first time, now is being distributed among the people of France. How they receive the story is a war secret, but here it is:

Early in August, 1918, the Assistant Secretary was making an inspection of United States naval air stations on the Brittany coast. He was proceeding from one station to another when his pilot car knocked down an elderly priest, injuring him slightly. When the Assistant Secretary got there a few minutes later, he apologized on the Navy's behalf and offered compensation.

The priest replied that he most certainly did not want to accept any compensation from his friends of the American Navy, which was doing so much in the cause of saving France.

Then he was asked if there was something that the Navy could do for his church—a venerable shrine dating back to the fourteenth century.

The priest's eyes filled with tears.

"Oh, if I could have a little contribution toward the fund I have been gathering all my life to have the stained glass windows releaded, it would mean more to me than anything else in the world," he said.

The panes, he explained, were among the most ancient in France and had not been releaded since about 1750.

The American asked how much it would cost.

"One thousand francs—a sum far greater than we could possibly raise," was the reply.

The assistant secretary thereupon wrote out a Navy requisition for $200 and gave it to the aged priest.

Seveay months later, an officer reported that he had visited the church and that the work of releading the windows was nearly completed. In one of the bays, he said, a perpetual candle had been lighted by the priest in honor of the United States Navy.

Six or eight years later it was still burning. No doubt it is still burning now—unless the Germans have put it out.

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy in 1918, of course, is the President of the United States in 1942.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Today and every Saturday the Federal employes voice their views and comments through this column. Mail contributions to Jerry Kluttz, editor.

There ought to be a law against it. At least our department heads should absolutely forbid it. It's hard enough to get along on our meager Government salaries. We employes are forced to give to this and that cause. But for the past week one of our supervisors has spent her entire working day getting employes to give her and other supervisors Christmas presents. The employes, because of fear of losing favor with the supervisors, have contributed toward the presents. One of the supervisors has a list of employes who refused to contribute and she's attempting to make them feel like heels. Why can't the heads of our departments protect us from this kind of racketeering? A. S. M.

Senator Byrd is doing his level best to walk a tightrope on the pay bill for Federal workers. He and his office have assured me and other Virginians that he's doing all he can to adjust Federal salaries to the higher cost of living. Yet our Senator gets behind the closed door of the Senate Civil Service Committee, where he thinks he's protected, and fiddles while precious time passes. We Virginians in the Federal service should demand a showdown from our fiddler in the Senate.

Disgusted Virginian

The Federal Diary's reports on congressional handling of the pay bill is a morale buster. I know of 23 girls who have packed and are ready to leave Washington. And they aren't newcomers either. Why is not Government entitled to the same privileges that it lays down for private industry and labor? We can go home, live under more pleasant conditions, obtain better wages and have more in the way of dollars for the effort we expend. A. B. C.

All Goverament employes in the lower salaried brackets know how difficult it is to get along on their incomes after the present deductions of 10 per cent for bonds and 5 per cent for retirement have been made, and a further 5 per cent victory tax deduction in addition to the payment of income tax for this year, the budget-balancing outlook for 1943 seems quite hopeless. It is quite obvious that employes will have to cancel their bond pledges and even cash in their bonds in order to pay their income taxes. I am in favor of the Government's policy to curtail nonessential spending, but it seems to me that an employe earning $1440 to $1800 will have difficulty meeting every day essential needs, let alone luxury spending, with the present deductions and the ones looming ahead.

To offset the burden of deductions, why not waive the 5 per cent retirement for the duration? An enormous number of Government employes have appointments only for the duration and the amount that could be accumulated for them in the retirement fund is small in comparison to the benefits they would derive when they reach the age of 65. They could use this 5 per cent to better advantage now. The purchase of bonds insures some form of security, as will the refund on victory tax. If a moratorium were declared on the 5 per cent retirement deduction, employes could pay the 5 per cent victory tax, and the temptation to cancel their bond pledges would not be so great. One would offset the other, without creating an additional burden on salaries which are being stretched to the breaking point now. P. K.

We, at the Pentagon, who work in the inner circles where there are no windows within 50 feet of our office, have learned to do without daylight, but unfortunately, we have not learned to do without air. We have been informed time and again that engineers have tested the air and judged it to be fit for human beings to breathe. In their findings, perhaps, they forgot a most important factor—that the air conditioning is not working most of the time and that when more than 100 people work in a limited space, whatever oxygen is present is very quickly used up. We didn't think it would be necessary to resort to publicity in order to obtain ways and means to breathe properly, but every other effort has failed

WAR DEPARTMENT EMPLOYE

War and Navy Sentiments

A docile heard of steno-clerks
Are heading for the rocks,
Old Stimson gave us all the works
As did his pal Frank Knox.

We dummy clerks just sat there
And Never said a word
As Working days were lengthened
And annual leave deferred.

Our Saturdays went bye-bye,
With the seven-hour day,
And nary a word was mentioned
About a raise in pay.

Our holidays went by the boards,
Compassionless was Hank,
He had to set examples
For all, including Frank.

They pay us peacetime wages
To wartime costs defray.
Because we are not organized
They think we have no say.

The Congress was to pass a bill
To equalize our pay
It looks like it will get the shelf
To die on New Year's Day
Someone isn't playing fair
As Hank and Frank well know
And if they don't do something
We'll all just up and blow.
soon,

ANON.

Salisbury, Md. (A.P.)—The telephone in the hotel room rang and the operator said, "You are in a dimout area; pull down your window curtains."

The guest complied immediately. He was Col. Henry S. Barrett of Baltimore, Maryland air-raid precautions chief, who was touring the area to inspect dimout compliance.

Federal Leave Bill Waits Signing

U. S. Employes May Accumulate 90 Days Under New Measure

A bill raising to 90 days the amount of annual leave which Federal employes may accumulate from year to year is on its way to the White House after the Senate agreed yesterday to changes made in the measure by the House.

Under existing law, leave accumulations cannot exceed 60 days, with all unused time off over that amount forfeited. Because so many Government workers are being required to forgo vacations under the pressure of war work, however, it was felt that the limit should be extended. Otherwise, war agency heads would be put in the position of forcing their workers to forfeit their leave rights altogether.

The Senate accepted without a conference the amendment added to the bill by the House, and then gave the measure final approval.

This amendment limits the amount of leave which may be accumulated in any one year to 15 days, whenever the total of unused days off has already reached 60. This would prevent employes who have already piled up the old maximum of 60 days' leave to add their entire 26 days of annual leave to this accumulation.

The legislation would apply only for the duration of the emergency.

Navy Cites 3 D. C. Men For Bravery

Three Washington men were among the three officers and 34 enlisted men of the Navy recently commended for courageous performance of duty while under enemy attack, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

They are Lieut. Comdr. Samuel E. Latimer, who formerly resided at 2038 Allen Place Northwest; Forest Leland Kelley, seaman, first class, son of Mrs. Belle Kelly Alexander who resides at 1740 Euclid Street Northwest, and John Joseph Curran, seaman, first class, whose mother, Mrs. James Curran, lives at 1820 Massachusetts Avenue Southeast.

The letters of commendation sent to each read as follows:

Letters of Commendation

To Commander Latimer—"The deparument has been informed of the distinguished service rendered by you as the flag secretary on the staff of a Task Force commander during the Battle of Midway. Your sound reasoning, excellent judgment and tireless devotion to duty contributed materially to the success of this campaign. For your courage, skill and perserverance on this occasion, you are hereby commended."

To Kelley—"The bureau takes pleasure in commending you for your action in defending your ship when that vessel, as a part of a convoy, was subjected to continuous and protracted air attacks. It has been reported that during the voyage made by the convoy of which your ship was a part, the vessel was attacked by enemy bombers on several occasions.

"One attack occurred when the ship was stranded in an open stretch of water without protection. Due to the prompt and efficient performance of duty by the armed guard crew, the vessel suffered no serious damage.

Navy Traditions Upheld

"As a member of this crew, you rendered outstanding service which contributed materially to the defense of the vessel. Your conduct on the above occasion was in keeping with the best traditions of the Naval Service."

To Curran—"The bureau takes pleasure in commending you for your action on the occasion of the rescue of a shipmate who had fallen overboard from the ship. It appears that Courtney Lauraine Whitlock, seaman, first class, U. S. N. R., accidently fell overboard. In the fall he struck his head on a wooden beam secured between the ship and the dock, which caused him to be stunned and left him more or less hopeless.

"Without regard for your personal safety, you jumped overboard in an attempt to rescue him, and although the sinking man was reached first by an officer, the valuable assistance which you rendered contributed materially in saving the life of your shipmate. Your conduct on the above occasion was in keeping with the best traditions of the Naval Service."

Servicemen's Dinner

Luther Place Memorial Church, Fourteenth and N Streets Northwest, will launch a series of Christian Youth and Service Men's Fellowship functions tonight, beginning with a free dinner for service men at 6:30 p. m. Entertainment will follow.

Brookhart Home From War To Visit Ailing Father Here

TOGETHER AGAIN—First Lieut. Joseph Brookhart, back from nine months' combat duty in the Solomons with the Army Air Forces Nineteenth Bombardment Group, is welcomed by his wife in Washington. Lieutenant Brookhart, son of former Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, arrived yesterday to spend Christmas with his father, who is ill in a hospital. Mrs. Brookhart is the daughter of Smith W. Purdum, Second Assistant Postmaster General

After nine months of flying fighting in the Australia and Solomon Islands regions, First Lieut. Joseph W. Brookhart is back in Washington for a Christmas leave to visit his ailing father, former Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa.

Brookhart returned to his Hyattsville home with the Silver Star citation for bravery, awarded for bagging two out of three enemy Zero planes over Guadalcanal about three weeks before the Marines moved in.

The flier has been recommended for the Distinguished Flying Cross, because of successful piloting of a Flying Fortress through a tropical storm after he had lost the use of his instruments.

Son of a father famed as a crack rifle shot, Brookhart has no great opinion of the Japs as gunners.

"If I'd missed some of the shots the Japs missed when they were trying to get me," Brookhart told The Post, "I'd have been downright ashamed of myself.

"The Japs are no pushovers, though, and we musn't let down and think they are. Some of those Nip boys are damned good fliers, even though their gunnery isn't too sharp.

"Their equipment is good, too, much better than we had ever dreamed it was before the war."

One of two planes the crew of his bomber bagged over the northern Solomons, Brookhart said, was a Messerschmitt, with German markings still on it.

"We assumed the plane was piloted by Japs," Brookhart said, "but we didn't get close enough to see them. All we saw was the plane going down. That suited us all right."

Brookhart is a member of an armed reconnaissance squadron and first piloted single-seated pursuit planes, and then the bombers. He was full of praise of his crew, whose work, he said, was responsible for taking a goodly toll of Jap planes over the Solomons, New Guinea, the Coral Sea and Buna. Some of his gunners were wounded, he said, but "kept right on firing."

The flier is credited with 53 missions and was attached by enemy pursuits 15 or 20 times, but escaped unhurt.

Lieutenant Brookhart is now at his home, 4109 Gallatin Street, Hyattsville, Md., with his wife, whom he married a year ago. She was Miss Laura Purdum, daughter of the Second Assistant Postmaster General, Smith W. Purdum.

The elder Brookhart is ill in Mount Alto Veteran's Hospital.

Maryland Woman Does Her Bit Repairing Typewriters

"It's o. k., Mrs. Middledorf, works much better now . . ."

Mrs. Frances Middledorf, of 37 Shady Side Avenue, Capitol Heights, Md., walked into The Post city room with a typewriter repair kit yesterday and into the paper, actually. She is one of two typewriter repair women put to work here because of the war-created shortage of typewriter repairmen.

She finds it "interesting." And proves the fact that all kinds of talent has been cast up by the war from among people who previously had only the slightest inclination toward things they're doing now.

Mrs. Middledorf certainly had no idea she would ever repair typewriters. Married and with 4-month-old daughter, Rita Ann Middledorf, she was working for the Underwood company here. Then she found herself for six weeks on a training assembly line, then out with a repair kit.

Her size serves her now, she thinks. She is 5 feet 1 and weighs 119 pounds, enabling her "to get around easier in the crowds while carrying the working kit." She thinks of it only as war work, the releasing of a man for other duty.

When the war is over she wants to settle down to her home and family. Her husband, incidentally, is also a typewriter repairer.

Group Health Suit Heard in High Court

Sherman Law Case Against Physicians' Society Reaches Supreme Judges

By the Associated Press

Validity of the American Medical Association's conviction on a charge of violating the Sherman antitrust law by alleged activities against a group-health organization in the District of Columbia was at issue yesterday in arguments before the Supreme Court.

One of the disputed points was whether practicing medicine is a trade or a profession. The Sherman Act prohibits combinations in "restraint of trade."

History of Case

The association and an affiliate, the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, were convicted in the United States District Court here. A $2500 fine was imposed against the national organization and a $1500 fine against the local society. They were accused of conspiring against Group Health Association, Inc., described as a nonprofit cooperative association of Government employes.

Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of antitrust law enforcement, contended in a brief filed with the court that "the conspiracy to prevent group health from successfully carrying on its business of furnishing medical service to members of the consuming public was a restraint of trade prohibited by the Sherman Act."

Definition of Trade

"Group Health," he added, "was engaged in a large scale undertaking to provide medical service in exchange for payment of dues. This exchange of service for money is trade in the primary and most usual meaning of the word."

Seth W. Richardson, Washington attorney for the medical associations, replied that "all of the dictionaries agree that in the broadest meaning ever ascribed to trade to date it has never been understood to include the arts or the learned professions."

Judicial definitions and the legislative history of the Sherman Act, he added, demonstrate "inescapably" that the word "concerns only commercial activities and excludes the learned professions."

5 Deny Guilt In $5,000,000 Stock Fraud

Pleas of not guilty were entered in District Court yesterday by five officers of the Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., who were indicted a month ago on charges of conspiring to defraud by selling stocks under false representations.

The alleged stock swindle is said to have meant a loss of about three million dollars to about 4000 District investors.

Defendants in the case are the Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., described as the parent firm of 11 subsidiaries, including the Southeastern Investment Co., Inc., which also was indicted; Clifton M. Eisele, 49, of Bethesda, Md., formerly vice president and treasurer of the companies; his brother, Lewis, 46; Ernest A. Hough, 36, now an Army lieutenant; Charles R. Wilson, 56, and Harry J. Donoghue, 42.

The indictment, returned November 11, charges that the men obtained about five million dollars on alleged misrepresentations to investors in regard to the earnings and financial stability of the firms. Much of this money, it is said, was put to personal use.

D. C. Boosts Scrap-Iron Contribution

City Government To Add 333,000 Pounds to 2 Million Already Unearthed

More than a third of a million pounds of scrap steel from District Government buildings will soon be added to the municipal government's record of two million pounds of scrap for conversion into arms and ammunition, Paul Chalupsky, District property survey officer, announced last night.

The major share will come from Gallinger Hospital. Bids will be opened at 2 p. m. next Wednesday for 226,600 pounds of metal from that institution.

In the offing, Chalupsky said, are bids to be asked on nine boilers from District schools, which should contain 22 tons of steel, and a derrick with a 75-foot boom weighing 16,000 pounds, from the Cherry Hill garbage conversion plant.

An iron fence around the old Naval Hospital at Sixth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast will be added to the collection if final approval for its sale is obtained, Chalupsky added.

The largest single item from Gallinger is a condemned live-steam matteress sterilizer from the old isolation ward. A crucible rack from the crematorium, a gas stove, eight condemned radiators and 2500 pounds of miscellaneous scrap iron complete the list of portable objects from the hospital.

Most of the iron, however, is to come from underground steel pipes that formerly connected the old power plant with Ward Building 4. These pipers are laid in tunnels, both ends of which have been closed. This lot, which must be dug out and dismantled by the winning bidder, includes 2000 feet of 12-inch, 2760 feet of 6-inch and 1785 feet of 4-inch wrought steel pipe. In addition, 300 feet of 12-inch pipe in the power plant are ready for immediate removal.

Chalupsky explained that most of this equipment had been condemned or was so unservicable that there was little chance of its being sold for anything but scrap.

Man Acquitted In Homicide 13 Days Ago

Court attaches weren't sure without a detailed check of the records, but they believed last night that something of a record—so far as recent years go—had been set earlier in the day when Foster Lee Jones, 24, of 418 Kentucky Avenue Southeast, was acquitted in Municipal Court of a charge of negligent homicide. The charge grew out of the traffic death of Mrs. Leila Fletcher, 333 C Street Southeast, who was killed November 28 as she crossed Pennsylvania Avenue not far from her home.

Pointing out that the acquittal came in less than two weeks after the accident—a decided rarity in this day of crowded dockets—attaches gave this record of the case:

The accident occurred November 28; the inquest was held December 1; arraignment took place the following day; the trial began on December 9, and acquittal came yesterday, before Judge Nathan R. Margold.

In a second traffic death case heard yesterday, Judge Margold imposed a $500 fine on Louis Bonnett, 44, of 1518 Whittier Place Northwest, who pleaded guilty to causing the death of Mrs. Marie Schwertner, 70, of 200 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast on December 23, 1940.

Victory Sidelights

Oil Ration Boards Open 9-4:30 Today

All local war price and rationing boards in the District will remain open all day today—9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.—in order to expedite the work of delivery of fuel oil and kerosene coupons to consumers, L. P. Steuart, OPA State rationing officer for the District, announced yesterday. He emphasized that the boards are working all day Saturday for the express purpose of delivery of coupons covering only the two commodities mentioned.

All fuel oil and kerosene applications, other than those filed this week, have been processed, Steuart said, and coupons ready for delivery.

He urged the thousands of persons who have already been notified by mail of completion of their applications, but who have failed to call for their coupons, to do so at once.

Steuart also announced that in cases where persons have filed applications for fuel oil and kerosene, but have not received their notification card, if they will call at their local board in person, coupons will be delivered immediately.

Soviet War Photos On Exhibit Here

A collection of photographs showing Soviet war and civilian defense activities and women in industry was placed on display yesterday at the new Russian War Relief headquarters at 1227 Connecticut Avenue.

The collection is one of several exhibits being sent about the country by the American Council on Soviet Relations.

British Subjects Here Urged to Return Home

A second appeal for all suitable British subjects now in the United States between the ages of 18 and 50 to return home to help the war effort in their own country was made yesterday by the British Information Service.

The appeal was directed to those men who are physically fit and not already engaged in vital war work in this country. They may apply to the nearest British consulate and if accepted will be given free passage to their home land.

South African Women Join D. C. Red Cross

A group of women from the Union of South Africa has joined the District Red Cross surgical dressing unit at the Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. Included are wives of members of the Union of South Africa Legation and Purchasing Commission, Mrs. B. T. Neal, Mrs. J. Jackson, Mrs. E. A. Bambury, Mrs. H. O. Hofmayer, Mrs. J. D. Radman, Mrs. W. D. Galpin, Mrs. E. F. Horn and Mrs. R. J. Jordan.

City News In Brief

$3200 in Gems Taken

Theft of $3200 worth of jewelry from two Washington homes was reported to police yesterday.

Mrs. Katherine W. Wolf, 2480 Sixteenth Street Northwest, told police her apartment was ransacked and a jewel box containing a $1500 diamond dinner ring, two other rings, assorted trinkets and a sable scarf, were stolen. She placed the total value at $2700.

Second victim was Miriam P. Conway, 1906 Florida Avenue Northwest. She reported the loss of a jewel box with a pearl ring in it. She said the items were worth $500.

Parking Ban

Washington's "snow removal" all-night parking ban on thoroughfares becomes effective at 2 a. m. Wednesday, William A. Van Duzer, Director of Traffic, announced yesterday.

Workmen have been erecting 15,000 warning signs during the past week on 80 miles of District streets, he said. The regulation prohibiting parking between 2 a. m. and 8 or 9:30 a. m. "to facilitate snow removal."

Harrington Promoted

Joseph Harrington, 58-year-old District hack inspector, was promoted from sergeant to lieutenant at swearing-in ceremonies at Police Chief Edward J. Kelly's office yesterday.

Voted Washington's "model traffic cop" several years ago, Harrington has been a traffic policeman for more than 20 years. His conduct has brought him the sobriquet "Courtesy Joe."

As a sergeant, Harrington was in charge of the rack inspector squad. Kelly said he would remain at the same assignment.

Plead Not Guilty

Arraigned in District Court on charges of conspiring to violate the liquor laws in the operation of two Spotlight Guild Clubs, eight employes of the night clubs pleaded not guilty before Justice James M. Proctor yesterday.

The defendants were Sam Montgomery, Vincent Richard Grillo, Mildred Sonken, Salvitore Bucolo, Louis T. Gregory, Bennett Love, Orpha H. Shaner and Edward Everson.

4 D. C. Bills Are Passed In Senate

Capital Fire Escape Measure Approved; Also Tax Exemption, Nursery Proposals

The Senate yesterday passed the District fire escape bill, which will empower the Commissioners to promulgate new and far-reaching safety regulations to safeguard the city from fire dangers, in a session which saw the legislators run through a total of seven local measures pending on their calendar and give approval to four.

Though all of the bills approved have been previously passed by the House, only one—the tax exemption bill—will go immediately to the White House. The other three were amended and must go back to the House for that chamber's acceptance.

Passage of the fire protection bill, which has been pending before the Senate for a year, was spurred recently by the Cocoanut Grove disaster in Boston. Determined to give Washington protection against such a blaze, the Senate District Committee struck out non-essential sections which had held up enactment of the bill and rushed it to the floor. It passed unanimously. The stricken provisions would have required apartment houses to install fire alarm systems connecting with the Metropolitan alarm system, a requirement which it was feared would lead to a monopoly.

Others Approved

The other bills which passed were:

(1) The tax-exemption bill, redefining the charitable, educational, religious and scientific institutions which shall be exempt from the payment of District property taxes.

(2) A bill empowering the Board of Barber Examiners to regulate opening and closing hours of barber shops in the District, selecting standard opening and closing times through a poll of all local barbers.

(3) The nursery school bill, opening District public-school buildings for use in housing Federally financed day nurseries to care for the children of war-working mothers.

Another measure, which would allow the Minimum Wage Board to suspend the eight-hour day law for women in cases where the needs of the war effort demand that they stay on the job longer, was first passed but the action later rescinded. The bill was put back on the calendar at the request of Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado.

Two Others Tabled

Two other bills were passed over for the time being—the tax sales bill, streamlining procedure for redeeming tax-sale certificates outstanding against property, and the police and firemen's pay raise bill.

The latter measure was put off until Monday at the request of Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky. This would give a $300 annual raise to all District policemen and firemen below the rank of captain, and Barkley asked that District Committee Chairman McCarran discuss the bill with him over the weekend in view of the confused situation with regard to pay raises for all Government workers.

Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York, sponsor of the Federal pay raise bill, also suggested that he might add an amendment to the bill giving pay increases to all District Government workers, including school teachers, as well as the police and firemen.

Senator White's Move

Passage of the tax exemption bill was imperiled momentarily by an effort to amend it.

Senate White (Republican) of Maine sought to add the American Tree Association to the list of exempt groups, but McCarran pointed out that if the bill were amended it would have to go back to the quorumless House, where a single member's objection could defeat it. The bill as it came up in the Senate had already been approved by the House. White's amendment was turned down by a vote of the Senators present, and the Maine legislator did not press his fight to the point of suggesting no quorum when McCarran agreed to study the organization involved and bring in a special bill in its behalf if circumstances warranted.

War Reporter On Carroll Forum

Henry C. Wolfe, newspaper correspondent who has served on European war fronts during this and the last war, will discuss "The Outlook for Victory" at the Willard Hotel tomorrow at 3:30 p. m., under the auspices of the Charles Carroll Forum.

Wolfe has received decorations from the governments of France, Greece, Rumania, Yugislavia, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. After World War I, during which he served on the French and Italian fronts, he was a member of the Hoover Commission in Russia and did reconstruction work in the Balkans and Turkey.

Sugar and Spice

If you're a gal who has difficulty making peace between her dance invitations and her clothes budget, here's your dish.

We've found a waltz gown that combines sweet flattery with a wicked rustle, all for less than the cost of three pairs of theater tickets. It's made of rayon taffeta, and has a voluminous looking skirt that swishes pleasantly as you turn. While the law allows only so much yardage in even the best of them, a nice fat ruching holds the skirt out, giving an impression of a deal of fullness. The neckline is officially off the shoulders, but it's comfortably supported by a pair of practically invisible straps.

The white is angelic, but the scarlet is wonderful, particularly if worn with short black velvet gloves . . . perfect for Christmas Eve. It also comes in party pink or blue, size 9 to 15 . . . about $13.

For further information please call National 4200, Extension 324, between 9 a. m. and 5:30 p. m.

A DECORATOR'S DIARY

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

MONDAY—Ventured into the big town the other night to see Times Square without the bright lights . . . . found that it was dark all right but as crowded as a traditional New Year's eve in the hey-hey years. And we couldn't get into a show or a night club in the whole district . . . finally trailed over to the east side and found the night spots doing just a so-so business. Apparently the crowds were out-of-towners who make for Times Square . . . just as we do because it's gay and fabulous even in the dimout.

Wonder if the shoe-box prescription for the soldier's gifts will change the tradition of the "stockings hung by the chimney with care." Maybe in this war Christmas, the children will take to a suggestion of only as much loot as will fit into a soldier-size box.

TUESDAY—Here's a bee for my Christmas bonnet . . . . must remember to make a pine pillow out of the needles from this year's Christmas tree. Here's how . . . when the tree is ready to come down, chop off main branches and shatter the needles onto a huge array of newspapers spread over the floor . . . . using garden gloves for the job. Then cut a piece of ticking, cretonne or some other stout weave fabric and make a case the right size for the needle pile, fill ticking with needles and and sew it up. If the tree was a nice fresh one, such a pillow will stay fresh the best part of the year.

WEDNESDAY—Turkey as king of the Christmas feast is a modern notion and wholly American. The boar's head is the poetic traditional feast dish of the old English Christmas, though the "ancient sirloin" later became standard custom. Another stately English idea for Christmas dinner was peacock pie, made with the bird's head and gilded beak sticking out at one end of the pie and with the fan tail in all its glory presiding at the other end. For that matter, what's the matter with a fat swan for your holiday dinner . . . that's another old English feast dish.

THURSDAY—The symbolism of gifts for Christmas is often forgotten in this day of material things. It mightn't be a bad idea to pause and think of that as we plan our gifts this year. Traditional gifts of "honeyed things" were made to indicate a year of sweetness. Lamps or candles were given as symbols of light. Copper and silver and gold wished the recipient a prosperous year. Gifts of grain meant a year of bounty. Today we should give little china doves to symbolize the thing we all hope for most—peace.

Overheard a remark by a handsome woman at a war stamp booth. Said she, "Oh, the maid shortage doesn't bother me any . . . . I come from a long line of peasants.

A tiered Christmas tree of plywood

FRIDAY—In planning for this year's lean Christmas, we might take courage from the remembrance that Christmas hasn't always been a festival of tinsel and festivity. In pilgrim days in England, Governor Bradford made law against celebrating "by feasting or not working" and fined each offender five shillings. In Cromwellian days in England, Christmas was taboo too and Britishers were forbidden to close their shops or stop work or decorate with Christmas ornaments.

SATURDAY—With real evergreen Christmas trees scarce this year, what about a tier tree made of plyboard and painted gaily? It could even be decorated with traditional tree ornaments, and the shelves could be used for holding the family gifts.

Save Gas By Pooling Cooking

The 18 million homemakers cooking with gas have been urged by the WPB to conserve it as much as possible for the duration because this fuel is one of the resources vital to America's war production.

How, then, can such a hearty and slow-cooking food as dried beans be baked most economically? For beans, after having been soaked overnight and simmered for one hour prior to baking, require from four to six and even eight hours in the oven at a temperature anywhere from 250 degrees F. to 325 degrees, according to the product desired.

The answer is for the homemaker to make a deal with her most co-operative neighbor to take turns at baking beans for both families in one oven. The two-family baking idea also may be extended to oven meals planned so the various foods will bake at one specific temperature, although the baking periods need not be the same.

Military Secrets

"I hear Jane Shusher's leaving town."

"Sh-h! She doesn't want anything said about it—on account of Stanley."

"But he's not in service."

"I know, but—well, I'm not supposed to tell this—please don't say anything about it—but I think this birdseed firm he represents may get some Government contracts . . . for the park pigeons, or something. Anyway, she doesn't want anyone to know Stanley's being transferred."

"Where are they going?"

"Oh, I don't think anyone knows."

"His firm has a factory in Kankakee, doesn't it?"

"I don't know. Jane won't even say what direction she's going or when she's leaving . . . or anything. You see one of those birdseed factories would make a perfect target for a Jap or Nazi bomber."

II

"What's Marcia Gumfoote whispering around to people about?"

"She's going to give a cocktail party."

"No! When?"

"Sh-h! She doesn't want anybody to know about it . . . especially the newspapers."

"Why not?"

"Well, for one thing, on account of Clarence . . . you know he works in Agriculture."

"What's that got to do with it?"

"We-ll, of course food's going to be awfully important in the war from now on. And then of course Marcia feels she should soft-pedal it on account of Buzz."

"Buzz?"

"Yes, Buzz Dodger, her cousin. He visited her here once, you remember. Anyway he's now in North Africa . . . as some kind of an aide to a general, I think. Anyway, that puts the whole family in the enemy spotlight."

"I suppose she's having just a few people."

"About 100. But she's telling everyone she asks not to say a word about it to anybody."

III

"Hello! What's this I hear about your grand new job?"

"Sh-h! What did you hear?"

"Oh, just that you had a much nicer job. Tell me all about it."

"Oh, really I can't . . . I'm sorry, but I can't say a thing. I suppose you understand . . ."

"Military necessity, I suppose?"

"Well, not exactly . . . but you know how it is . . . at a time like this . . ."

"I understand. I suppose you'll be leaving town?"

"Well er—no, not exactly. I'm going to stay here—but don't say anything about that."

"I won't, of course . . . I suppose your hours will be very irregular now—subject to call and secret missions and all that sort of thing."

"Oh no—well, I mean, as far as I know. I think it would be all right to tell you this—if you won't repeat it . . . I'll still have the same hours."

"But of course your work will be very different?"

"Oh no . . . I . . . I . . . well——"

"Oh, that's all right. I really shouldn't have asked."

"Well since it's you . . . and I know it won't go any further . . . but I don't mind saying that my work will be largely stenographic."

"But of course it'll be lots more important. Really, I'm so thrilled for you."

"Thank you. I'm dying to tell you all about it. . . . In fact I'm almost tempted to tell you what it is."

"Well of course I wouldn't breathe it to a soul——".

"I know you wouldn't. I'm only telling a few people. . . . You see . . . I . . . I'm going to work in the stenographic division of . . . of Economic Cooperation Wildlife Personnel."

IV

"How do you do! Where are you going?"

"Oh nowhere particularly. Where are you?"

"Oh—nowhere."

"How have you been feeling?"

"Oh . . . all right . . . in a way. How have you?"

"In the same way."

"What are you doing these days?"

"I'm—well nothing particularly. What are you?"

"Nothing particularly."

"I suppose you've been terribly busy?".

"Well er—yes and again no."

"That's the way with me. Are you doing much Christmas shopping?"

"Well—er I can't say exactly that I am. You know how it is—with Mr. X in the War Department."

"I know all about it—with Mr. Y at Navy Headquarters."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman's Mixed Symptoms of Neurotic Anxiety Reached Climax Recently, When Panic Seized Her in Theater; Can Such Jitters Be Cured?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please help me. At times I feel as if I must be going out of my mind. My thoughts are so pointless and there seems to be nothing to cling to. I also suffer from nervous tremors that shake my whole body, for which the doctor prescribed a sedative. I don't dare enter an elevator; and the pay-off was last week when I became so upset while at the theater, seeing Tchekov's play, "Three Sisters," that I stood in the rear of the house during the last act. Naturally, this disturbed my husband and he is beginning to get impatient with me.

I have a nice home, two lovely little sons and a fine husband. I am 33 years of age, have been ill during much of my life and have a slight limp. I had always been very close to my own family, but during the past two years have been living quite a distance from them. I am the youngest of six children and I am nice looking, although small. I had a poor education and feel inadequate to all situations except home making and child care. But this doesn't worry me much. I haven't many friends; in fact, only one. I have no desires or ambitions. I can't even tire myself out with housework, as I am not allowed to be on my feet very much. However, I do quite a bit,—such as cooking shopping, tending the children, putting the house to rights, etc. Although I can't understand why, my husband loves me dearly. And I am as nice to him as I can be, but I have no personality and rarely talk, except to him or the few people who really interest me. I am an introvert and disgusted with the way I am going.

I was told once that I have real talent as a writer, but that I would have to go to college first to acquire command of English. I can't see myself studying that long, as I never could study. And since I have absolutely nothing to say, how could I become a writer? Please don't advise me to consult a psychiatrist, or I will be sure that I am a mental case. Of course, I understand that one doesn't have to be mentally ill to need the help of a psychiatrist, but I just don't want to go to one. In writing this letter, I have minimized my symptoms. They really are making me terribly miserable. H. C.

Who Gives Treatment In Case of Toothache?

DEAR H. C.: Your aversion to seeing a psychiatrist is precisely comparable to the aversion which a person with a toothache might feel toward the dentist. The analogy may be carried further by saying, with absolute accuracy, that what the good dentist can do for the person with torturing toothache,—i. e., clears up the symptoms by healing the source of pain, at the expense of briefly heightening the patient's discomfort,—so also can a competent psychiatrist do for you. And he alone is the person who can do it. Thus, for you to tell me NOT to recommend a psychiatrist,—when your distress is obviously of neurotic character,—is exactly as if you were to say: "For years I have been suffering with toothache and now I can hardly bear the pain. It's driving me nearly crazy. But please don't advise me to consult a dentist. I want to go on fooling myself that my teeth are in fine shape." Pretty silly, what? Talk about the ostrich sticking his head in the sand!

Now, if you are loathe to face facts and come victoriously to grip with them for your own sake, perhaps you can muster the courage to get yourself made well, with psychiatric assistance, for your husband's sake and the sake of your sons. It is cruelly unfair to let them pay continuous dreary penalty for your craven, procrastinating, do-nothing policy about your rather easily remediable affliction. When I suggest that the condition could in all probability be quickly cleared up, if properly treated, I am expressing the opinion of a psychiatrist with whom I have discussed your recital of symptoms. Although remarking their vague, disconnected and superficially non-committal nature, he said your problem is readily recognizable as "a case of anxiety neurosis, showing recurring panic states;" that such distress ordinarily stems from unhappy experiences leading to acutely disturbing emotional repercussions in early life; and that the subsequent hangover of inexplicable anxiety always centers on a feeling of guilt, having many implications. The sense of guilt may stem from involuntary, though repressed and unrealized, hatred of someone the sufferer thinks that he should,—or that he does,—love. Or it may have reference to childhood transgressions. Or even to the hidden urge to transgress.

Symptoms Will Vanish When Cause Is Known

In any event, the psychiatrist says of such symptoms: "Once the patient understands their basis, the symptoms disappear. And often this can be accomplished in a very few conferences." He cited one instance in which the patient permanently recovered from similar, though more aggravated, symptoms after three conferences, of one hour each, with a psychiatric counselor. And mentioned another case in which a man,—so hag-ridden by nameless fears that he was failing in a routine job and reaching the point where he hardly dared leave the house,—made a complete comeback after slightly longer treatment and is today running up a fine record as an Army officer. Incidentally, the "anxiety neurosis," based on guilt feelings, doesn't always express itself in symptoms of mental or nervous demoralization. It may assert itself in terms of chronic headache, stomach pains, dizzy spells, etc., for which the medical practitioner can find no cause or cure. These so-called "conversion" symptoms, I am told, always indicate a history of psychic disturbance in the rather early years of life.

The psychiatrist was sympathetic toward your manifest reluctance to air your symptoms freely in discussion. He said, in effect: "Most of us are hemmed in by conventional restraints, concerning the impropriety or undesirability of confessing ourselves and our difficulties to another. Thus the layman tends to be afraid of the implications of psychiatry. He is unaccustomed to speaking frankly about his most acute concerns. But in a case of this kind, the capacity to talk freely to a dependable counselor proves enormously helpful, not only in relieving the complainant of a tremendous burden of unhappy feeling, but in letting him get the essential facts of his life clearly in mind, so that he knows exactly what he is dealing with."

Outlook for Recovery Is Good, Says Expert

In conclusion, he remarked that "the outlook is good" for immediate and lasting relief from your distress, provided you avail yourself of the type of treatment your symptoms call for. According to his view, "it is not a pernicious difficulty," and thus, at the expense of a little heightened emotional discomfort, voluntarily contracted,—such as the reserved person might be expected to suffer in making an open book of his life to the analyst,—you may claim permanent relief from the nervous anguish you have endured for so long. SHOP AND RUN

By Marianne

With just the magical influence of a streetcar pass, your shophound reports on foreign affairs. Russia, France, Britain, China, Greece and the Netherlands were included in our global itinerary.

We confess—we have been visiting the war relief organizations set up by groups of people from these countries.

Knitting, crocheting, sewing, painting, weaving, and baking are just some of the things they are doing in order to help the fighting people of their countries. Dainty, perfect stitches on the finest materials, simplicity of line, and daring combinations of exciting colors make these really exquisite pieces.

For shopping in unbelievable comfort with the most pleasant people to help you, and for gifts that are not "run of the mill" we suggest that you have a look at these.

Russian War Relief

Meet Katinka and Gregor—two wooden lapel pins which will make the corners of your mouth turn up. Each doll returns 60 per cent of every sale for bandages for a wounded Russian soldier. Each only 25 cents.

We couldn't resist showing every one of the six wooden bowls in this hand-made set. They're in bright colors over which is a shiny coating of shellac and they fit inside the large bowl to take up a minimum of space. All for $1.50.

Christmas cards with design contributed by Rockwell Kent and Vladimir Bobri are for sale at 10 cents each. Other wonderful gifts include Russian dolls, antique trays and a number of good lithographs.

French War Relief

Baby sister, a doll collector perhaps your French teacher would love these dolls dressed in typical French costume. Each detail of the costumes is carefully made, and we'd say they were a find. Bother for $1.

At first glance it's a small purse, but open up a magic side and you also find an endless number of billfold sections. It would make a fine present for a friend who must carry her personal file with her. There's a small French insignia on the cover, too. $3.50.

"France Will Live Again" is a beautiful book by Samuel Chamberlain. It's written in English and contains a number of lovely French photographs and etchings. Published by the Fighting French and France Forever, it would make a splendid contribution to any friend's library. $3.

Three styles of Christmas cards for 10 and 15 cents. Two are designed by Carlu and a very lovely one has a poem by Walt Whitman.

British War Relief

You can make someone's life easier by contributing this mammy string holder. Besides being a lovely addition to kitchen or sewing room, it makes a great deal of sense. 50 cents.

Hand crocheted baby booties of unbelievable small proportions will give some lucky baby reason to put his best foot forward. They'll fit into that overtaxed Christmas budget, too, for only 50 cents.

When we get excited about a potholder, that's news! This one is hand crocheted with a heavy close stitch and any cook would appreciate this square of preventive first aid. 25 cents.

A small gift that's worth twice it's cost is a Mexican handmade cigarette case of multicolored straw. It'll keep a package of cigarettes from being crushed and handbags free from tobacco. For 25 cents.

Here's the kind of apron he'll want to slip on to show she's the new family maid! It's made of the finest organdy with a panel of flowered print in the front. All seams are bound with bias tape to guarantee survival on washday. $1.25.

These are pink and oilcloth—which makes it unnecessary to explain why they'd make such a cute gift for a small baby. 35 and 50 cents.

Delicious tins of cookies, cakes, marmalades, and Scotch shortbread are for sale.

Queen Wilhelmina Fund

Here we found the daintiest crystal ash trays we've ever seen, with a typical Dutch scene. You'll ask the price twice just to be sure, for they're only 15 cents.

Other things of interest were hand carved wooden heads made in Bali, pictures for children's rooms, Dutch tile, and all kinds of cookies and cakes.

United China Relief

The Chinese collection will include tea, porcelain, Christmas cards, hand embroideries, and lovely Chinese jewelry, all bearing the stamp of the fine art of this country.

Greek War Relief

A display will also be set up by the Greek War Relief.

Electric Ironer Requires Care To Do Good Job

If you store your electric ironer in an unheated location and find that the shoe maintains steady contact with the roll, regardless of control action, congealed oil is probably causing the clutch mechanism to stick. Try putting the ironer in a warm place for an hour before using. That will give the oil a chance to warm up.

Cover the roll of your electric ironer with several thicknesses of outing flannel or table padding when ironing embroidered linens. Iron the linens face down. The results will be splendid.

Be careful to iron buttons, snaps, hooks and eyes facing toward the inner roll. Otherwise you may scratch the shoe as well as break the fasteners.

If starch sticks to the "shoe" of your ironer, add a pinch of salt to the starch and everything will go smoothly.

Have a New Bedroom At Little Cost

By Alice Brooks

Make your bedroom charming. Here are instructions for a variety of easily-made bedspreads with matching dressing-table skirts—directions for making dressing-table from a packing box. Instructions 7448 contains directions for varied bedspreads, dressing table skirts; accessories; materials needed.

To obtain instructions send 11 cents in coins to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 W. Fourteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly name, address and pattern number.

Extra Lamp

Deanna Durbin loves old English china and has, since her marriage, collected quite a few nice pieces of it. Not long ago she took a bouillon cup in an ivy pattern and had it made into a lamp base for an extra bedroom lamp. The shade was a plain cream parchment, edged in a tiny row of ivy leaves to carry out the pattern on the base.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

Common Colds Due to Many Causes and Few Are Immune

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

WE ARE in the season when the common cold may be expected to strike at any minute. As far as preventing the common cold is concerned, I am unable to make any dogmatic statements. In a great many health treatises I see the statement, "Avoid Colds." I am perfectly willing to do this if somebody will just be kind enough to tell exactly what I must do to avoid them.

Dr. Clendening

A number of factors enter into the production of the common cold. One, of course, is the presence of germs. In a common cold it is probable that the first infection is by one germ which is in the form of a virus and later on a number of other germs get implanted in the nose, throat and bronchial tubes, causing a secondary infection with some of the disagreeable symptoms of the later stages of the cold.

Undoubtedly crowding and congregations of people spread colds. It is an ordinary observation that in a given schoolroom, office or industrial plant one cold will start and within a week 50 to 75 per cent of the pupils in the schoolroom, the workers in the office or the industrial plant will come down with a cold. Contamination is undoubtedly the principal factor in producing colds.

Some Immunity

At the same time immunity plays a part, for in all schoolrooms, offices and industrial plants about 25 per cent of the people exposed do not catch a cold. A barrel of seeds that are kept in a store will not sprout, because they are not in the right soil: the same thing happens with germs: they will not grow unless they are in the right soil.

Another factor undoubtedly is temperature and weather. In North America colds become almost nonexistent in August. The season for colds gets a good start about the middle of December and reaches its peak in February. It is difficult to suppose that weather conditions and exposure do not have something to do with the prevalence of colds. This suggests also common-sense methods as to prevention of colds in not allowing the body to remain either wet or cold after coming in after a storm.

The question of vaccinations has been brought up a good many times and I hear a great many opposing opinions as to the efficacy of vaccinations. Just recently there are available cold toxoid vaccines which can be taken by mouth. I see no objection to anybody's trying this method of prevention with or without a doctor's supervision and I hope that we may have some statistics and reports on the value of this treatment during the present winter.

Experiments With Vaccines

Vaccinations have previously been given hypodermically and, of course, hypodermic vaccines are still available and it is generally recognized that vaccines, in order to be efficacious, should enter directly into the blood stream and not go through the digestive system. The best advice we have about vaccines up to the present time is that they have done no good whatever, according to carefully controlled experiments. But if anyone still wants to take a chance on them and has the price, there is no law to prevent him from taking hypodermic vaccines for the common cold, starting right now.

Not Using Your Share of Meat? That May Mean Poor Nutrition

By Ida Jean Kain

Now that we're sharing the meat with our allies, you may get the idea that the less of it you eat, the more patriotic you are. That is not the way it works. Our Government wants us all to keep fit and the rationing has been planned with our needs in mind.

IDA JEAN KAIN

If the two and one-half pounds per person per week is more than you are accustomed to serving, it may be that your menus are too low in protein. Meat is one of the best sources of this highly important nutrient and your family should have meat, fish or fowl every day.

Many of you home makers think of meat in terms of steak, chops and prime ribs. But in general you do not use nearly enough of the glandular organs such as liver, kidneys, sweetbreads, heart, and brains, which are excellent protein and vitamin sources. Then, too, there are fish and fowl. When one of these protein suppliers strains the budget, price the others. Besides a meat dish of some kind every day, there should be a pint of milk for adults and a quart for each child, or an ounce of cheese in place of one glass of milk, and an egg.

It is not wise or patriotic to cut the protein in your menus below the safety level. Don't forget the reasons we need protein. It is esesntial to growth and for the repair and replacement of tissues used up in the process of living. We're not sending our armies and allies meat just because they like it! We are sending it because without sufficient protein their fightig and producing efficiency is impaired. That same thing holds true for your family.

To make the best possible use of the meat you buy, follow these rules:

Store meat at a temperature of 45 degrees or lower and do not cut or chop it until just before cooking.

Save all left-over meat in a cold place for use in a different recipe another day.

Serve at least one of the glandular organs every week.

Spread meat when necessary by mixing it with such extenders as bread, cereal or vegetables.

We now have a "share the meat program." This means a little more for some, and a little less than others are used to, but it means enough for all.

New Fringe

Actress Michele Morgan has just been decorating her home and an idea of hers in the kitchen seems well worth passing on. The color scheme is plain red and white. Her window curtains are solid white cotton damask and, along the hems, she has sewn a single row of those tiny strawberry shaped emery bags that are so ideal for pin cushions to keep needles from rusting.

No Dust

To insure lustrous hair, wash your comb and brush as often as you shampoo your hair, so that every bit of dust will be removed when you give your locks that hundred strokes a night.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

All mothers enjoy that long period of preparation for the new baby, when, little by little, they acquire a store of the garments that precious one will need.

But we should all be awake to the economies necessary at present and now, of all times, it is more than usually foolish to buy more clothes than the baby can ever wear out.

There is a long gap between the most extravagant and the most utilitarian wardrobe, but for one which is neither, let me suggest the following list of articles.

Three shirts, long-sleeved cotton, or part wool and cotton. From four to six dozen diapers, fewer of the gauze than the other, because they dry more easily. three nightgowns, long, with draw-strings at hem and sleeve and made of either cotton flannel or bought ready-made of the commercially knitted materials. Four kimonos, made of cotton flannel, in which the baby will live the first six weeks. Several shawls to wrap around the baby will complete the necessities for the wardrobe.

For the toilet basket there will be needed a nice box or basket in which to keep the supplies; a can of baby powder, a bottle of baby oil, some mild soap, several soft wash cloths and towels, safety pins, boric acid or salt water, a rectal thermometer, a small hot water bag, a bath thermometer (to take the guess-work out of the bath water temperature); toothpicks and absorbent cotton.

For the bassinet six small sheets will be convenient, a rubber pad or oilcloth, plus a heavy washable pad, two all-wool baby blankets, perhaps a comforter, if the mother wants to make one.

One can think of all manner of extras which it would be nice to have, but they are not necessities. The baby will have to have some sort of outdoor coat and hood; bootees, small flannel, crocheted or knitted sacks; bath scales (to be bought or rented or borrowed), bottle warmers, dresses or creepers for wear after graduation from the kimonos. But how nice to leave these for the friends and relatives to purchase. If everything, down to the last safety pin is furnished by the parents, this can only mean unnecessary duplication by friends eager to exhibit their interest in the new arrival.

One reader presents an idea for economy which is worth publication. She suggests, for the mother who does not need to tramp the street with a carriage, that she purchase a hooded bassinet and use this on its convenient wheeled stand, as a vehicle for getting baby out of doors for an airing. Obviously, she means an airing on porch or walk, but not on the public street.

Our leaflet, "Layettes and Confinement Necessities," may be had for the usual self-addressed and 3-cent stamped envelope.

TAXI TALK

By Anne Hagner

News item: Washington cab drivers have been instructed to help make the general public more traffic conscious.

Probable scene: Government girl, politically confused in her thinking as a result of reading too many interpretive magazine articles, decides to take cab to office in order to learn Average Man's views on the war.

G. G.—What do you think about no more enlistments in the Army, Navy and Marines?

Driver—Sorry, lady, my analysis of this war has to be a military secret. Now about crossing against the "don't walk" lights—that's something you really shouldn't do, miss, even if you are in a hurry to get to work.

G. G.—Look, I'm very conscientious about lights. What I want to know is, do you agree that men over 38 should not serve in the Army?

Driver—Lady, I used to be quite a philosopher in a small, homespun way. Once or twice I even rated being quoted in the newspapers when I gave out with a snappy epigram. But too many people are getting hurt on Washington streets, see, and I gotta tell my passengers to watch their step.

G. G.—Even if I promise you on my word of honor that I'll obey all the traffic laws, won't you make a few comments on the international situation?

Driver—Well—you tempt me to talk, Miss, but rules are rules. But I will say that in my opinion Gen. Mark Clark—say, are you sure you aren't a spy?

G. C.—You mean an espionage agent? Certainly not!

Driver—No, I mean one sent by the P. U. C., which sent out those safety talk orders.

G. G.—Don't be silly. I just want to hear what you think about the world in general.

Driver—Oh, taking a survey, eh?

G. G.—No, you've got me all wrong. I've just read so many articles telling me what I should think that I thought I'd talk to somebody who doesn't know anything about the war.

Driver—Now you've hurt my feelings, Miss. I hear almost as much sitting right here in this cab as Elmer Davis does in the Office of War Information, and you might call me somewhat of an authority. But you've made me feel so badly that I'm going to disobey one ruling by not asking you if you've forgotten anything when you leave the cab—so there!

Brush for Beauty

By Martha Ellyn

Frivolous Christmas gifts don't seem to be the order of the day. But practical items and the necessities of life can't come under the heading of extras.

If milady's hair is to glow with health, a brush is a necessity. Not just any old brush but one that is durable and can take the hundred strokes daily. But there are other brushes that help to create that spic-and-span look that is so much the order of the day. There's an individual brush to meet every grooming need.

We are especially turning our thoughts this Christmastime to gifts for the Man-in-Service, the WAVE and the WAAC. For the sisters in service, one of the six-piece ensembles of hair brush, complexion and hand brushes, cloth brush, comb and nail file, will be an offering to her slickness. Or the brush and comb alone will be appreciated.

College and high school girls too vie with each other for attractive hair-dos. So why not start them off in 1942 with aids to make them look even fresher and prettier than ever.

For the service man, a military brush set or a stubby club brush with matching comb is a gift that will be just right. The regular size in these sets come with square-cut fluted backs. The travel size, have thick backs and chunky handles.

The PRINCESS of GRATZEN

By LOUIS ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM

Synopsis

Madame Fabre-Lusignan, once a famous actress, lives at the Chateau Philibert in Canada. Rudolph, her butler, learns from the newspaper that the Princess Meridel of Gratzen and her young cousins, Rosine and Pol Martin have arrived in Quebec to seek their rich uncle, Baron de Morpin. Rudolph confesses to Madame that he is the baron and that he has led his relatives to believe him the owner of Philibert. She insists on continuing the deception by inviting the refugees to the Chateau, while she plays the role of housekeeper. Her favorite nephew, Michel, ran away to France three years before. His brother Roger, in the Canadian Air Force, comes to the Chateau and accompanies the princess and his aunt on a shopping trip to Montreal.

Chapter V

MADAME, after the pleasant ride to the city, during which, maliciously, she made Roger sit up front with the chauffeur of the ancient car, shepherded them all to a fashionable restaurant and saw that the children ate a huge luncheon. Rudolph, instructed by her, announced that they would stay in the city until the next day. Roger was dismissed with instructions to report back for dinner at 6 o'clock. "After which"—the bright black eyes glittered impishly—"the princess may wish to ride up the mount in a barouche and perhaps you'd like to go with her. They tell me it is lovely up there—a marvelous vista and the stars very close to one."

"Would you like that, Meridel?" Roger felt low at the thought of leaving her for even a little while. "It is really very beautiful."

"But yes. I should love that, monsieur. I have not been on a real mountain since I left Gratzen. I shall look forward to it."

Madame more than made up for her long abstinence from shopping. Meridel sighed when she sank back against the worn leather cushions of the rickety carriage and looked up at the early stars. She closed her eyes and Roger could gaze his fill at the lovely curve of her mouth, the long dark lashes against the golden skin of her cheek, the thick braids of her hair that his fingers longed to touch.

On the Mountain

Clip-clop-cloppety-clop—in the warm, languorous evening they drove up the mountain and Roger told her of Maisonneuve, of the golden history of the great city whose voice came up to them in a low, steady murmur, whose countless light glittered in the dusk. "You will be happy, Meridel—here among us. It is a friendly land, a friendly people. It is not an easy country, no place for the lotus eaters, but if you love it, you will find that it is kind to you."

"That I have found already, Roger. It has been more than kind to me. I have found here more of comfort and luxury than I ever had in Gratzen." She smilled, her teeth glimmered whitely. "There we were poor, though we lived in a castle; we often ate bread pudding from gold plate and the royal car was one of the earliest models made in France."

A mercy madame didn't see it, mused Roger! she'd have wanted it for herself. He grinned, recalling the face of the new chauffeur as he steered along St. Catharine Street amid the applause of the multitude.

"Uncle Rudi must be a very wealthy man," said Meridel.

"Eh? Oh—why, of course. You'll never need to worry about money any more. It is a pity you ever had to."

"I'm not so sure. I thought that, when I came to Canada, I should find some work to do, get a job for myself and be useful in the world."

"I—" Roger's lips were dry. "I'd like—"

But they were at the top of the Mount now and the barouche had stopped and the obsequious coachman was waiting to help mademoiselle alight. For a long while they stood looking down in silence at the city, at the blue distance, the star-spangled sky over the Adirondacks.

"It is so lovely," she said, "so lovely, so serene. Nothing will ever come to shatter the peace of those skies?"

"Not in our time, my dear. None of us have yet learned to thank God sufficiently for that. I am so glad—so glad that you are here, Meridel, safe and cared for and happy. You are happy now, aren't you?"

"Happier than I ever dared hope in those days—"

"I— I should like to make you happier still. If I may hope—"

She smiled at him, looked up at the broad shoulders that bulked above her, at his face, dark and lean-jawed and so wise for one so young. Strange, swift world. They had met only last night and now he spoke to her of love. It was of love. She could see it in his earnest eyes, read it in the rough tones of his voice. But her heart was not yet receptive to love and she wondered if it would ever be again—and then she thought of the night in Gratzen, so much like this, when she and that other youth, so young and gay and glad of heart, had climed the mountain road to the castle.

But it was not in her to hurt him or discourage him. After all, he had ridden long with death and he would ride again. She had her hand on his arm and felt a tremor there and his strong fingers covered hers, small and cool and slender. Her eyes shone up at him in the starlight and he knew that the beauty of this moment was eternal.

"You make my heart glad, Roger. But you do! What you would say is always sweet to hear, but I—it is too soon for me. It seems of small importance—our own loves and hates, when hatred has become a tide of the sea and love a vanished army."

"It is one of the things we can cling to—so it seems to me. Cling to hungrily. But it is perhaps too soon, Meridel. After a little while—"

"Do you think that way. There will be years and years. Your lifetime and mine."

"And so many to talk to you of love—so many others."

"There could be only one to whom I'd listen. I know that. I feel that my heart can be unlocked by only one key."

"I hope I have it. I have never before met anyone like you, any girl who made me feel as you have done. And the princess part has little to do with it."

"I am glad of that. You would have found me the same if I'd been a scullery maid?

"Yes, the same."

Peasant to Princess

She thought of Michel, who had been sad because she had changed from a peasant girl to a princess. As if it mattered, as if that should discourage him and drive him away on his lonely road! But it had been different then, even though the old castle was already tottering on its rocky buttresses and the winds of change were rustling around its keep.

They drove down the mountain and somehow he was not unhappy, though he had been unable to say the things that were clamoring to be uttered. It didn't seem fair somehow to speak of his desires while she was still fresh from the misery, the fear, the awful suffering of that sad debacle. Give her time, he told himself—time to know the fine life she has come to, time to get her bearings, to breathe again, to let friendship ripen into something deeper. Speak to her then, and perhaps she will listen.

The outing had rested and refreshed Meridel. She was in no hurry to go back to the hotel, so they wandered about the city, into places where Roger had never been before. Doors and windows were open; the night was sultry, the air charged with the threat of thunder. From a little basement restaurant the music of a violin and a piano came liltingly up to them and Meridel's fingers closed hard on his wrist as she stopped, chin lifted, eyes bright, like one lost in a dark wood who hears the winding of a golden horn.

The Song

"It is a song of Gratzen!" she said. "It is a song of my people! Come—come quickly, please!"

Roger, sharing her eagerness, followed her down the steps into the little taproom. It seemed to be three-quarters filled by the huge man in a white apron who came forward to meet them, a wide smile on his ruddy face. He stopped suddenly and his little shoe-button eyes all but popped from their cushions of fat. "Gracious lady; Highness! It is you I see here—here!" And, by some miracle, he bowed low until they saw only the shiny bald pate fringed by long, white locks.

The boy and girl left piano and fiddle and came to stand behind him and bend low in an Old-World curtsy.

"My friends!" Meridel's voice was gentle, her eyes shone. She stretched out her hands to them and they kissed the white fingers reverently. "Jules Goujon—Jules of the Coq d'or, and little Emil and little Magda." She looked fondly on the old man and his grandchildren. Their mother was dead, their father would be fighting if life was in him yet. "It is so good—so good to find you here, my friends, my own people."

"It is like seeing heaven, Highness. You will sit, yes, please, and this gallant airman—here in my inn."

Roger, too, received a royal welcome. The little blond Magda, the pale dark young Emil played softly at Meridel's pleading. Jules brought them his best Chambertin and hovered around them, muttering in his native tongue, speaking in English when Meridel addressed him.

"Good—it is good, this Canada," he said. "Here we can hope to build our happiness once again. You, Princess, are well here?"

"Well, indeed, Jules—and Pol Martin and little Rosine. We live at a grand chateau, Philibert, which belongs to Uncle Rudi, who is a very great man here and very rich. You will remember the Baron Rudi, my friend?"

"Well I remember him, Highness," said Jules, thinking only briefly of the long, unsettled score chalked behind the bar of his inn in that far-off land. "He was a gay young man, the baron. I am happy that the world has used him well. Tell him he is always welcome at my inn, which I call too the Coq d'or in memory of old times."

"Old times—do you recall, my good friend, the time I came to your tavern—one fair day—with the tall, red-headed one, and we had dinner together—roast goose it was—"

"Yes, yes—that one." Roger, watching the great moon face, saw the little eyes go blank. "You were very gay, Highness. You have not seen that red-headed one since?"

"Neither before nor since, Jules, but I'll always remember that night. He walked up the hill to the castle with me afterward. There was a moon—"

"Sometimes it is well to forget, Highness," said the old man softly. "One has to forget so many things now. You will let me make for you, perhaps, some of the good dishes of home—"

"Ah, you are kind, Jules. But not now, thank you. We have already dined. We shall hear one more tune and then we must go."

"And you will come again, please? It is yours, my little place—all I have. It has been so wonderful to see your face again. It has been like—like home to us—"

Marines Dance Guests

Marines from the base at Quantico will be special guests at a dance sponsored by the District of Columbia Alumnae Chapter of Alpha Iota Sorority from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. tonight in the Georgian Room of the Lee-Sheraton Hotel.

Senorita Gatell To Discuss Cuban Feminist Activity

The feminist movement in Cuba will be discussed by Senorita Mercedes Gatell at a speakers meeting and tea given by Phi Pi Epsilon, foreign service sorority, tomorrow in Columbian House on the George Washington University campus from 4 to 7 p. m.

Senorita Gatell, who has already won recognition as one of Cuba's leading feminists, holds a degree of doctor of laws from the University of Cuba, and is now studying American law at George Washington University.

Another "Good Neighbor" feature will be the presentation of a group of native Brazilian songs by Rosabella Ohanian, who formerly lived in Rio de Janeiro.

Guests of the sorority will include Dr. and Mrs. John Donaldson, and members of Delta Phi Epsilon, foreign service fraternity.

Mary D. Keating is in charge of all arrangements, assisted by Kay Woodward, Betty Numson and Dorothy Steers.

Mooseheart Committee Buys Christmas Gifts

Graduate Regent Marie A. Clark, chairman of Mooseheart Committee of Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, and her committee are busy these days buying Christmas gifts and articles of clothing for teen-age girls at Jones Hall in Mooseheart, the Child City of the order. Mrs. Clark's committee is also collecting old silk, rayon, and nylon hose for the War Salvage Committee.

Soroptimists Make Large Bond Purchase

War bonds totaling $90,000 have been purchased by members of the Soroptimist Club, it was announced at a recent meeting of the group. The club has also contributed $1000 to the American Red Cross for the purchase of a mobile canteen, and $400 for a night of entertainment at the Stage Door Canteen.

Activities of the group during the past year have included contributions in money, equipment and membership service to the Children's Emergency Home, the Police Boys Fund, Children's Hospital, Junior Red Cross, the Mile-o'-Dimes, the Society for Crippled Children, the Readers' Digest in Braille, Army and Navy Relief, Community War Fund, Soldiers' Recreation Center No. 1, and Central Union Mission.

Members elected Miss Mildred Clum president for the coming year at the meeting. Others elected included Mrs. Clarence Mera, first vice president; Miss Gertrude Sullivan, second vice president; Mrs. Margaret Miller, recording secretary; Mrs. Peggy Stonham, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Estelle Whiting, treasurer. Elected to the board of governors were Miss Edna Connolly and Mrs. Emily Shah.

Comte De Noue To Address French Alliance

Comte Jehan De Noue of France will be the guest speaker of the Alliance Francaise at its meeting scheduled for 4:30 p. m. Monday at the Sulgrave Club.

A world traveler and lecturer, Comte De Noue will discuss "Une Idylle Romantique a la Cour du Roll Soleil." As vice president of the "Sauvegarde de l'Art Francais," he originally came to the United States to express appreciation of the French people for the cooperation of the American committees founded by the Duc de Trevise in restoring masterpieces of architectural and scenic splendor.

The comte served with a British battalion in Flanders and later was evacuated from Dunkirk.

Pilot Club Dinner

Dinner and a Christmas program will be features of the Pilot Club's meeting to be held at 6:15 p. m. Tuesday at the Bellevue Hotel. Chairman of the program will be Miss Helen Hoffman, assisted by Mrs. Gladys Poore and Miss Ella Sue Minor.

Kappa Phis Plan Annual Yule Program

Kappa Phi Intercollegiate Alumnae Chapter members of the District of Columbia will meet at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the Letts Building, Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest, for their annual Christmas party and program.

"The Stars Are Still Shining," a play directed by the devotional chairman, Mrs. Carl E. Paulsen, will be given. Assisting will be Mrs. Robert Winters, Miss Irene Reynolds, Miss Lu Gibbons, Miss Iona Raguet, Mrs. Louis Herrman, and Miss Genevieve Clark, who will sing.

Sewing on the Korean project will be done. Christmas candles will be given to each member for the traditional Kappa Phi lighting.

Each member is to bring a small gift for exchange at the party. The singing of Christmas songs will be followed by an informal social time.

Greek Youth To Offer Pan-Hellenic Follies

The League of American Youth of Hellenic Descent, an organization numbering 150 boys and girls of Greek descent, will present the "Pan-Hellenic Follies of 1942," a musical extravaganza, tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. in the Immaculate Conception Auditorium. The proceeds of this benefit performance will go to some organization that gives help to the suffering people of Greece.

A cast of 75 young women and men will take part in the performance. The Follies will be like an evening spent in the beautiful City of Athens before the terrors of war came to change its gayety into terror and hardship. Most of the popular love songs and folk tunes will be included in the show. There will be several comedy skits, light numbers and many types of dancing.

Now It's Bubble-Bath For Fido!

Surely when Christmastime comes the dog of the household should find something hanging on the Christmas tree marked, "With love to Fido, from the family."

This year, consider a bubble bath shampoo for your doggie This shampoo frees the dog of fleas, ticks, mites, deodorizes and cleanses all in one feel swoop.

And your pet will appreciate Magitex because it is as easy on him as it is on you when you give him a bath. Two tablespoons whipped to frothy bubbles in a cup of warm water, the froth worked into his coat with hands or sponge, wiped off with a towel, and your dog is very, very clean. No mess, no fuss, no rinsing and no shivering doggies. With cold weather here, this is a point to be considered, the dog's comfort.

Running Time Needs Checking

At normal setting, electric refrigerators made within the last five years rarely run more than one-third of the time under average kitchen conditions. If the motor runs more than the usual time first check the gasket and hinges to be sure that warm air is not leaking into the cabinet. This would cause the motor to run overtime.

Then if the motor is still running more than it should, or if your gas or kerosene refrigerator is using more fuel than you think it should, call in the serviceman to check.

Test Tightness Of the Gasket

Sometimes the door gasket on your refrigerator gets brittle and hard and no longer seals the door tightly. To test how tight the gasket is, close the door on a piece of ordinary wrapping paper about the size and thickness of a dollar bill.

If the paper pulls out easily, the gasket it not tight enough to keep warm air from passing into the refrigerator. This might be the fault of the door. Try tightening the hinges to make it fit more snugly.

Make test test again with paper. If it shows that air still passes between the refrigerator frame and the door, get a new gasket if possible.

Keep Condenser Free of Dirt

Don't overlook the condenser of your refrigerator. The condenser releases the heat taken from the food compartment into the outside air. In some refrigerators, it is located in the machinery compartment; in others it's at the back of the refrigerator.

The condenser needs to be kept free from dust and lint—in some refrigerators, it may need cleaning every month; in others not oftener than every six months. A stiff brush or the dusting tool of the vacuum cleaner is best for this job. Always disconnect an electric refrigerator before cleaning the condenser.

Women's Safety Committee Hears Two Speakers at Meeting

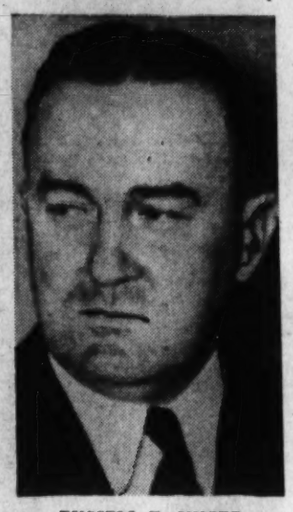
By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor

The length of time we will have mileage rationing—the limiting of car use through the rationing of gasoline—the 35-mile speed limit and the program for periodic inspection of tires will depend largely on how quickly synthetic rubber can be produced. So declared Russell E. Singer, general manager of the American Automobile Association.

Genevieve Reynolds

Guest speaker at the Women's Safety Committee's luncheon yesterday held at the Sulgrave Club, Singer pointed out that 1944 should find synthetic rubber on a large production schedule. But that the fabrication of materials for war purposes such as the repair of damaged battleships and the building of planes may cause some delay. Nevertheless, he said that the situation was not hopeless.

On the gloomy side the speaker predicted many headaches for motorists for 1943. However, he assured his listeners that every effort will be made to keep cars in operation through tire replenishments. "On the East Coast we must expect a very critical situation involving petroleum supplies, including gasoline," averred Singer. "Service garages are finding it difficult to maintain manpower as employes go into war production and into the armed forces."



RUSSELL E. SINGER

The Brighter Side

But on the brighter side of the picture is the outstanding fact that all forces of Government realize that everything possible must be done to maintain automobiles in use, and the resources of Government are behind this program, according to Singer.

Singer told how the A. A. A. had transformed its peacetime organization dedicated to travel development into a wartime footing. Here's the setup today as he outlined it: Major activities are devoted to bringing about public understanding and public cooperation for wartime restrictions; to providing services to keep cars in operation; to lending staff experience to Federal agencies, including the War Department, in connection with programs involving use of the automobile in wartime. The clubs have become virtually community centers for information pertaining to the rationing of automobiles, gasoline, tires, parts and accessories necessary to keep cars going.

"It is interesting to note that our facilities for map making, utilized in past years for routing millions of motorists shuttling back and forth on the Nation's highways, are today serving the Government," averred Mr. Singer. "We have been gratified on many occasions when officers of the United States Army reviewed our maps and found them the most complete available for use of the armed forces in the United States."

Mrs. Thorpe Presides

Mrs. George C. (Cora Wells) Thorpe, chairman of the Women's Safety Committee of the District of Columbia Motor Club of the A. A. A., presided and introduced the two guest speakers, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, who spoke on the British front, and Singer.

Among the honored guests were Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, wife of the former United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands; Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. George Garrett and Mrs. Sidney Scott of Wilmington, Del.

Still others were Mrs. Randolph Minor, who is French and Spanish translator at the American Red Cross; Mrs. Thomas MacDonald, Mrs. E. W. Coult, Mrs. Russell E. Singer, Mrs. A. J. A. Montgomery and Mrs. Burton W. March.

Members of the Women's Safety Committee attending the luncheon included Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, Mrs. Frank Conger Baldwin, Mrs. Blair Bannister, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, Mrs. Harold H. Burton, Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Mrs. Clifford L. Corbin, Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, Mrs. Jon Ecker and Mrs. Joshua Evans.

Also Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. David McCoach, Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Miss Janet Richards, Mrs. Seth Richardson, Mrs. Tom Connally, Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley.

CAR Plans to Install Plaque To Honor Mrs. Daniel Lathrop

Plans to place a plaque at Wayside Inn, Concord, Mass., the home of Mrs. Daniel Lathrop, founder of the National Society of the C. A. R., were made at a recent national board meeting here.

The plaque upon which the emblem of the group will appear with the inscription "Mrs. Daniel Lathrop, C. A. R. Founder, 1895," will be hung at the gate of the famous house by Miss Margaret Lathrop, daughter of the founder.

An ambulance was presented by the group, it was reported, to the Richmond County Red Cross at the Staten Island, N. Y., chapter house. Members are also collecting and selling coat hangers to raise money for the Indian Fund.

Present at the meeting, over which Mrs. Louise Moseley Heaton of Clarksdale, Miss., presided, were Mrs. Catherine B. Strong, national registrar; Mrs. Carl H. Giroux, national organizing secretary; Mrs. B. Harrison Lingo, national corresponding secretary; Mrs. Frank Heller, State president; all of Washington; Mrs. Ray E. Brown, national treasurer, of Bethesda; Mrs. Donald Bennett Adams, national vice president, of New York, and Mrs. William Morrill Parker, State president, of West Virginia.

Senator-Elect Shott To Be Party Guest

Hugh Ike Shott, newly elected United States Senator from West Virginia, will be the guest of honor at the forthcoming Christmas dance of the West Virginia Society of the District of Columbia. The dance is to be held in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel, Saturday, December 19, at 10 p. m.

The new Senator is the editor and publisher of the Bluefield Daily Telegram. He also has served as postmaster of Bluefield and as a member of the Republican State Committee from West Virginia. Senator Shott has many friends in Washington, having become well known in Capital circles while serving as Representative from the Fifth Congressional District, West Virginia, in the Seventy-first and Seventy-second Congresses.

Red Cross Chairman Predicts A 'Return to Neighborliness'

With the acute shortage of doctors and nurses brought on by the war, city folk will have to adopt the rural custom of helping their neighbors. This is the opinion of Mrs. Edward A. St. John, member of the home nursing committee and chairman of the speakers' bureau of the Red Cross.

Speaking before members of the Congressional Club yesterday at an afternoon meeting, Mrs. St. John said, "It behooves at least one member of the family to be trained in home nursing. Then, in case of minor illness, the average citizen can carry on."

Pointing out that home nursing is by no means a new idea, she recalled that it was suggested by Miss Mabel Boardman, secretary of the National Red Cross, back in 1918. In fact, Miss Boardman asked the D. C. chapter to sponsor home nursing for women.

"No special aptitude is needed for home nursing," explained Mrs. St. John. "It's mostly a matter of common sense."

Now that mothers will be sent home from the hospitals in two or three days after the birth of their babies, Mrs. St. John emphasized the fact that home nursing would help in such cases. For one thing, the home nurse would be able to improvise equipment, take temperatures, bathe the mother and child and recognize danger symptoms.

The speaker urged the members of the Congressional Club to start a course in home nursing and surgical dressings and stressed the need for blood donors.

Nutrition was another subject upon which Mrs. St. John dwelt at great length. She emphasized the importance of good nutrition, declaring that it has become the patriotic responsibility of every American woman to know and to practice all the rules of nutrition.

Mrs. John Taber, president of the Congressional Club, presided and introduced the speaker. Following the program an informal tea was held. Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. William H. Wheat, Mrs. Robert Tich, Mrs. Jed Johnson and Mrs. Cleveland Newton.

Cuban President, Gen. Batista, Guest at Embassy Reception

Ambassador and Senora de Concheso Entertain Distinguished Company for Visiting Chief

By Hope Ridings Miller

Climaxing a round of gala Washington fetes in honor of the Cuban President, Gen. Fulgencio Batista, the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso entertained at a dinner, followed by a large reception, at the embassy last evening.

Capital officialdom, envoys from the United Nations, gold-braided military and naval attaches, and a number of residential Washingtonians made up the gala company that turned out to pay tribute to the visiting President.

Guests arriving at 10 o'clock for the reception met, in the drawing rooms, a distinguished company that had just finished after-dinner coffee . . . and was lingering on to enjoy the fete that followed.

Those who attended the dinner, in addition to General Batista, were the President of the Philippines and Mme. Manuel Quezon; the Vice President and Mrs. Henry Wallace; the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Peru's Ambassador Manuel Freye y Santander; the British Ambassador and Viscountess Halifax, and the Soviet Ambassador, Maxim Litvinoff.

Donald Nelson Among Guests

The Chief Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone were in the company as were the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jesse Jones; the Minister of the State of Cuba, Dr. Jose Augustin Martinez; Representative Sol Bloom, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles; the United States Ambassador to Cuba, Spruille Brade, and Ing. Amadeo Lopez Castro, Secretary to the Presidency of Cuba.

WPB Chief Donald M. Nelson was there; also, the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs Nelson Rockefeller and Mrs. Rockefeller; the President of the Export-Import Bank and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson; Gen. and Mrs. H. H. Arnold, the Lend-Lease Administrator and Mrs. Edward Stettinius, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Henderson.

The State Department's Chief of Protocol, George T. Summerlin, was in the dinner company; as were Laurence Duggan, political adviser of the State Department, and Mrs. Duggan; Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union; Dr. Oscar Garcia Montes, Gen. Francisco Tabernilla, Brig. Gen. John B. Coulter, Capt. A. H. Addoms, Comdr. Rolando Pelaez, Maj. Jorge Hernandez Volta, Dr. Oscar Figarola Infante and Senator Jose M. Casanova, president of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Cuban Senate.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson In Dinner Company

Still others at the dinner were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. J. Butler Wright, whose late husband served as United States Ambassador to Cuba; Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, the Cuban Minister-Counselor and Senora de Baron, Senorita Dulce Acevedo Godinez, niece of President Batista, and Senorita Consuelo Batista.

Palms lined the red-carpeted stairway, and full-blown roses and chrysanthemums stemmed from tall vases throughout the embassy. Reception guests met the Ambassador and Senora de Concheso and their guest of honor in the small drawing room, which had been transformed for the occasion into a veritable bower of roses.

Wearing a smart black frock, accented with black sequins and set off with touches of turquoise to match the bow in her black hair, Senora de Concheso was the only woman in the receiving line. Since the fete was designated as a "black tie" event, President Batista wore a dinner jacket, as did the host of the evening. Only full-dress service uniform in the receiving line was worn—with decorations—by Gen. Tabernailla, aide to the President. Also standing in the receiving line to greet the company of more than 1000 guests was the Cuban Minister of State, Dr. Jose Augustin Martinez.

In contrast to the lavish party given for General Batista when, as Cuban Army Chief of Staff he visited Washington a few years ago, last evening's fete in his honor was in keeping with standards of restraint already established in Capital entertainments. Decorations were lovely, but not too elaborate. There was music at the dinner, but none at the reception . . . but, as one guest remarked, "It would be too crowded for dancing, anyway."

Celebrated Washingtonians and equally noted out-of-towners were a dime a dozen at the event. The Marine Corps Commandant and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb were among those seen climbing that handsome stairway to shake hands with President Batista. Supreme Court Justice Robert H. Jackson was there; as were Mr. and Mrs. William L. Batt, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Lewis Hershey, Field Marshal Sir John Dill, Chinese General Hsiung, accompanied by his aide, Captain Lee, and the Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wei.

Warren Pierson Puts Out a Fire

What might have turned out to be a sensational "story" at the fete was literally smothered in the making when Export-Import Bank President Warren Lee Pierson turned into a fireman an hour after the reception began. He was chatting with Senora de De Bayle, wife of the Nicaraguan Minister, when somebody standing nearby struck a match that set flame to that lovely lady's exquisite white net frock. Mr. Pierson came to the rescue, put out the fire with his bare hands and saved the party . . . if not the net border on Senora de De Bayle's skirt.

The Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne came on from Mrs. Martin Vogel's buffet supper for officers. Senator Theodore Green was there; also Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, and a number of others from Capitol Hill.

The Attorney General and Mrs. Francis Biddle were accompanied by the latter's sister, Miss Cornelia Van A. Chapin, noted sculptor of New York. The Biddles entertained at dinner earlier, having among their guests Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who also came on to the Cuban reception.

Assisting the host and hostess were members of the embassy staff, including Col. and Senora de Munilla, who seemed to know everybody present; the Cuban Minister Counselor and Senora de Baron, the Cuban Counselor and Senora de Valdes Rodriquez, and Senora Patria Mencia de Krizman, whose husband, Serge Krizman, came in from Hollywood shortly before the party.

To mention just a few others seen in the throng—there were the British Ambassador, Lord Halifax, who arrived and left early; Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador; Lieut. George Abell, squiring pretty Senorita Cristina Michels; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castilla Najera, the Yugoslav Counselor and Mme. Rybar, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clifford Corbin, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris and the latter's mother, Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard; Col. and Mrs. W. S. Culbertson and their daughter, Miss Jane Culbertson, and hundreds of others.

YugoslavEnvoy GivesLuncheon For Sikorski

Poland's Prime Minister, Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, was the guest in whose honor the Ambassador of Yugoslavia, Constantin Fotitch, entertained at luncheon yesterday.

The Ambassador of Poland, Jan Ciechanowski, was the ranking guest in the company of 16. Others there were the Soviet Ambassador, Maxim Litvinoff; the Minister of Czechoslovakia, Vladimir Hurban; Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles; John C. Wiley, Elmer Davis, the Hon. David Bowes-Lyons, Walter Lippman, Arthur Krock, Ernest K. Lindley, Isidore Akivisson, Col. Janusz Ilinski, Edward Weintal and Dr. Ivan Franges, Counselor of the Polish Embassy.

Miss Campbell To Be Married On December 19

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Janet Campbell to James William Colson on December 19 at St. Alban's Church.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Brig. Gen. Boniface Campbell, U. S. A., and Mrs. Campbell of this city. Mr. Colson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Colson of St. Louis. General Campbell will return from his post at Camp Breckenridge, Ky., to give his daughter in marriage and her brother, James Boniface Campbell, will come down from West Point to act as best man for the bridegroom.

Miss Dorothy Campbell will be her sister's maid of honor and Miss Justine Sampson and Miss Betty Wilkinson will be the bridesmaids. Among the parties planned for this weekend for Miss Campbell is a luncheon today at the Army-Navy Country Club to be given by Miss Sampson, and a Sunday luncheon given by Miss Mercedes Smith at the Army War College Club.

Bruce Emersons Visiting Here

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Noble McGee have as houseguests their son-in-law and daughter, Corpl. and Mrs. Bruce Emerson, whose wedding took place in Mount Olive, N. C., December 5.

The bride is the former Miss Sara Kornegay McGee of Mount Olive and Washington, and her husband is the son of Mrs. M. D. LeFever and the late Bruce Emerson of Fort Wayne, Ind. Their wedding took place in the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Robert Kornegay, with the Rev. L. B. Jones officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her cousin, Frank Herring, jr., wore the wedding gown of her aunt, Mrs. John Brandon. The dress was fashioned of ivory duchesse satin with a fitted basque and court train and trimmed with Spanish lace and appliqued roses of the satin. Her tulle and lace veil fell from a lace cap and she carried a bouquet of white carnations, bouvardia and orchids.

Mrs. Frank Morris of Mount Olive and Miss Kelsey McGee of Wilmington, who served as flower girl, were the bride's only attendants. William Rinker of Pittsburgh was the best man.

The bride attended Peace College and the Washington School for Secretaries. She is now employed at the Seymour Johnson Air Field in Goldsboro, N. C. Corporal Emerson was graduated from DePauw University and is now teaching in the Army Air Forces Technical Training School at Seymour Johnson Field.

Bombless Year to Be Celebrated At the Carlyn Monday Evening

Invitations to a "command performance" have gone out to residents of the Carlyn Apartment, 2500 Q Street, for Monday evening at 8:30 in the air raid headquarters room of the building.

The meeting is called to celebrate "one bombless year" and the program will feature a preview of "Command Performance" a short-wave program to troops abroad to be heard by the general public on Christmas Eve.

Heroes of the war and wives of heroes are among the Carlyn residents, several of them volunteering to give short talks on Monday evening. Lieut Col. Edward Kirby, chief of the radio branch, Bureau of Public Relations, of the War Department is chairman of the committee and Mrs. Jimmy Doolittle, wife of General Doolittle will speak. Squadron Officer K. C. Hunt, WAAF and Lieut Jean Palmer, WAVES, United States Naval Reserves, have arranged to appear together on the speakers' platform, making a duo of the women in uniform on both sides of the water.

Dean James Landis, head of the Civilian Defense, has promised to put in an appearance and will make a brief speech.

The Carlyn has the unique distinction of being in itself a one-zone area in the Civilian Defense map. W. Ernest Offutt is zone warden and assistant wardens are Sherman Ackerman, Daniel Baker, James P. Hayes, and Jacob Leven. Mrs. John Stanford Sayre is billet post warden and P Street warden is John Mullen; Q Street warden, Cleveland Blackburn; auxiliary policeman, Leonard Bloack. Floor wardens are Charles Moore, Stanley Friedman, Willard Gatchall, S. F. Rose, Gibbs Baker, John Lynch and James Trosch.

Day building warden is Mrs. Cleveland Blackburn and her assistants are Mrs. W. Ernest Offutt, Mrs. Stanley Mackay and Mrs. James P. Hayes.

Marc Peter, former Swiss Minister, now head of the International Red Cross, who makes his home at the Carlyn, is a patron along with Mme. Peter. Others on the patron committee are Vice Admiral Roland Brainard, U. S. N., and Mrs. Brainard; Vice Admiral and Mrs. Arthur Carpender, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Carl Spaatz, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Ira Eaker, Col. Augustin Alban, military attache of the Embassy of Ecuador, and Senora de Alban, and Group Capt. and Mrs. G. E. Lywood.

Junior Officers Honored at Buffet Supper

Several of those young, but often neglected officers of the armed forces in Washington, were guests of honor at the buffet supper given last night by Mrs. Martin Vogel and Baroness Stackelberg of the home hospitality committee.

The fete, which took place at the home of Mrs. Vogel, was the first to be devoted exclusively to the entertainment of junior officers, other such affairs sponsored by the committee having been for servicemen only.

Guests assembled at 8 o'clock and later in the evening went on to the Cuban Embassy for the reception honoring Gen. Fulgencio Batista, President of Cuba.

Members of the junior committee who assisted Mrs. Vogel and Baroness Stackelberg were Miss Betty Stewart-Richardson, Miss Lorna Chapman, Mrs. Martin Vogel, jr., Miss Barbara Iselin, Mrs. John Cowperthwaite, Miss Dolly Corbin and Mrs. Westwood Byrd. Others present, in addition to these, were members of the home hospitality committee and a few friends of the hostesses.

Mrs. Harry Black To Visit Here Soon

Miss Plitt Is Bride of Chester Moye

Miss Marjorie Elizabeth Plitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Plitt of Chevy Chase, Md., became the bride last evening of Chester Lewis Moye, the ceremony at 8 o'clock taking place in the Chevy Chase Methodist Church. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Moye of Washington.

White chrysanthemums, carnations and gladioli decorated the church and candles burned on the altar. Miss Georgia Olmstead, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Dawson Olmstead, sang a group of songs preceding the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an ivory satin gown fashioned with a fitted hip-length bodice made with a square neck and deep lace collar and leg-o'-mutton sleeves. The full skirt fell from the low waist line to a round train. Her veil of illusion was held with a lace Juliet cap and seed pearls with sprays of tiny white orchids at the sides. The bride's bouquet was of orchids edged with gardenias and had a cascade shower of bouvardia.

Mrs. Conrad M. Jones, the matron of honor, wore a burgundy faille gown made with a long, fitted hip-length bodice, a full skirt and a sweetheart neckline. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of Johanna Hill roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Dorothy Moye, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Barbara McEachran, both wearing powder blue faille frocks and carrying American Beauty roses; Miss Elizabeth Brooks and Miss Averill Wirgman, in gold faille gowns with Talisman roses, and Miss Jean Orem and Miss Mary King in pink faille and carrying pink Perfection roses. Their gowns were made like that of the matron of honor, and the attendants all wore tiaras of roses matching their bouquets.

Curtis Axel Grundberg of New York, was best man, and the ushers were William Colton Palmer of Chevy Chase; Donald Smithy of Royal Oak, Mich.; Arnold Olena of Garden City, Long Island, and James Carroll of Philadelphia.

The reception was held in the Chevy Chase Woman's Club, with Mrs. Plitt, mother of the bride, and Mrs. E. Waldhorst, aunt of the bridegroom from Mamaroneck, N. Y., receiving the guests.

The bride was graduated from the Chevy Chase-Bethesda High School, receiving a scholarship to the American University, where she is a senior, majoring in psychology.

Lukin-Jay Wedding Here

The marriage of Miss Mary Lillian Jay to Frank Harwood Lukin took place last Saturday at St. Matthew's Cathedral, with the Rev. John Argant officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Bernice Jay of this city and Mr. Lukin is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Frank H. Lukin of Pamplin, Va.

Miss Sarah Summers was the maid of honor and Patrick Ryan served as best man. The bride is a graduate of St. Mary's Academy and Nazareth Junior College in Louisville, Ky., and attended the Washington College of Law. Mr. Lukin, a graduate of William and Mary College, is a pilot for the T. W. A.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a large reception at the Hamilton Hotel.

George Kent Takes Apartment Here

Mr. and Mrs. George I. Kent have closed their estate, Buckstone Farm in Bucks County, Pa., for the winter and Mr. Kent who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mullally in Washington has taken an appartment at 2540 Massachusetts Avenue while on duty at the Navy Department.

Mrs. Kent will come to Washington for frequent visits and whenever duties permit Mr. Kent will spend weekends in New York with Mrs. Kent at their apartment on Eighty-second Street.

Colleges Should Train for Work Not Leisure, Says College Dean

'Chance of Century' for Women Now Seen By Mrs. Leonard of Catholic University

By Peggy Preston

"Colleges, during wartime, should take the opportunity to train women for work, not for leisure, as they have in the past."

In the opinion of Mrs. Eugenie A. Leonard, dean of women at Catholic University, women currently have the chance of a century to attain practical, instructive education.

MRS. LEONARD

"With universities and colleges depleted of men for the duration, there is every reason to hope that more thought and time will be given to formulating a truly realistic course of higher education for women," remarked Mrs. Leonard yesterday in her office at McCain Hall, where in addition to her work as dean, she holds the post of associate professor of education.

Long a leader in the field of education, Mrs. Leonard holds out high hopes for the future of her chosen field. Already, she notes a change in the curriculum preferences of women students.

There is, she points out, a decidedly increased enrollment in science and foreign language classes, and a great drop in literature and ancient languages.

All of which proves, according to Mrs. Leonard, that women themselves realize the need for practical education; for a definite knowledge of something that they can put to use in their everyday lives.

Believes in More 'Practical Training'

"In the past, the great majority of women have taken an arts degree," she said, "and upon graduation were qualified for nothing in particular. They have been trained for no definite end. Excepting, of course, those comparatively few women who entered the graduate fields of medicine, law and engineering."

Mrs. Leonard, however, makes haste to emphasize the fact, that she does not necessarily mean that all women should prepare to take up career jobs.

"I mean by practical education, that all women should receive training that they can actually use, as a worthwhile member of a community. Every woman should make a contribution beyond her children, and in a modern society she has so much leisure time that she should at least be prepared to use it well."

A youthful looking grandmother, Eugenie Leonard has made her home in Washington since 1939. Born in Dallas, Tex., she studied in Europe and was attending the University of California when she met and married her late husband, then dean of the school of education there.

Says She's Not 'Career Woman

When her husband was appointed director of the Teachers College at Columbia University, Mrs. Leonard continued her studies and received her doctorate in educational psychology and religious education at Columbia. She held a fellowship in the Laura Spellman Foundation and upon the death of her husband went to Syracuse University to act as dean of women.

For a time she served as vice president and dean of women at San Francisco Junior College and in Portland, Oreg., she initiated a city-wide program of guidance in high schools. Prior to taking over her present duties she was special research coordinator for the guidance and occupational information service of the United States Office of Education. Among her honor societies are Phi Beta Kappa.

"I didn't enter the professional field until after the death of my husband," she said, "so you see I am not a full-fledged career woman, nor one who believes that women should take the stand that they can replace men in the business world. I simply believe that if women are to be educated at all, they should have definite trade-like courses which will enable them to fill practical positions.

Protestants Assail Bishops' Views

Federal Church Council Charges Attempt By Catholic Hierarchy to Limit Actions

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Dec. 11.—The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America adopted today a statement declaring: "We deplore the pretension of the Roman Catholic hierarchy to circumscribe the religious freedom of Protestant Christians in the proclamation of their faith, while by implication reserving for themselves the right to the universal proclamation of their own."

A council spokesman described the statement as the reply of the organization's 27 Protestant denominations to references in last month's "statement on victory and peace" by the Catholic acrhbishops and bishops of the United States. He interpreted part of the Catholic statement as a "declaration of policy with respect to the missionary activities of the non-Roman churches of Mexico, Central and South America."

The Federal Council's statement, adopted by a voice vote at the biennial session after executive committee approval, continued:

"Baneful Intolerance"

"We can imagine no policy more certain to project into the new world the baneful intolerance which is now producing such tragic consequences in the contemporary life of Spain."

The Catholic statement—signed by members of the National Catholic Welfare Conference Administrative Board in the name of the bishops of the United States—bore the names of 10 archbishops and bishops. It declared in part:

"Citizens of these countries (Mexico, Central and South America) are bound to us by the closest bonds of religion. They are not merely our neighbors; they are our brothers professing the same faith. Every effort made to rob them of their Catholic religion or to ridicule it or to offer them a substitute for it is deeply resented by the peoples of these countries and by American Catholics. These efforts prove to be a disturbing factor in our international relations. The traditions, the spirit, the background, the culture of these countries are Catholic."

Denies Amity Is Imperiled

The Federal Council asserted "with full and first-hand knowledge of the facts, that, so far from protestant institutions and the representatives of protestant Christianity being a peril to good relations between the Americas, they are today, with some easily explained exceptions, and have been for decades regarded with great favor by governments and peoples in the countries where they are located."

State Sen. Wickham, 93, Recovering From Fall

Richmond, Va., Dec. 11 (AP).—Senator Henry T. Wickham, member of the State Senate from Hanover County, who was injured in a fall at his home, Hickory Hill, Monday, assured his friends today that he was "all right."

"Few die and none resign; I'm all right," was the message he sent from his bed in St. Luke's Hospital, where he is confined with a broken bone "near the hip joint."

Hospital attaches said the veteran State legislator, who will observe his ninety-third birthday December 17, rested well last night and is "getting on very satisfactorily."

Statement by Federal Council of Churches

The text of a statement on "Our Heritage of Religious Freedom," adopted yesterday at the biennial meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, follows:

The struggle for freedom, now raging throughout the world, turns our thoughts to our American heritage. The men who founded the United States sought freedom under God in the Western World and bequeathed freedom to their heirs as their most precious possession. At a very early time in the country's history liberty was granted to all religious groups to enter the national territory and to practice and propagate their faith within and outside the Nation.

In keeping with this doctrine of religious freedom, which is inherent in Christianity and associated historically with the Protestant expression of the Christian religion, the rights of religious minorities, both Christian and non-Christian, have been sedulously respected.

Our national experience has been that the free interaction of religious faiths, and the endeavor of each to express the truth and goodness for which it stands, have been an important factor in the cultural development of the United States. For in the things of the spirit, as in things material, the principle of monopoly has had, and will continue to have, most unhappy results.

Reason to Rejoice

We rejoice, therefore, that a country, predominantly Protestant, in which the great majority of those who make religious profession are members of denominations born of the Protestant Reformation, is committed by tradition and experience, to favoring complete religious liberty in all parts of the world.

In the exercise of this freedom, and under the sole impulse of their religious faith, Protestant Christians from the United States have been emissaries of goodwill in every region of the globe. Through the circulation of the Bible in 1000 languages and the proclamation of the truths contained therein, by the establishment of schools and hospitals, by industrial and agricultural effort in rural areas, representatives of American Protestantism have given practical expression to the implications of the Christian gospel.

They have also cooperated with national groups in many lands to promote human welfare in all its phases. By such activities they created, as an undesigned but happy consequence, a reservoir of goodwill towards this country.

Work of Missionaries

This may be equally affirmed of the work of Protestant Christians in the lands of Asia and Africa and in the Hispanic American lands which are our neighbors. Among the citizens of the United States who have contributed to spiritual and cultural advancement in the sister republics of Hispanic America are names of men and women of Christlike spirit who, unashamed of the name of missionary, devoted their lives and talents to those lands.

The memory of many of these is today revered in the countries which they served, while institutions which they founded continued to be popular centers of cultural influence and patterns of humanitarian endeavor. Through the work of these men and women and their successors, elements of supreme worth in the religious and cultural heritage of our country have been shared with Hispanic America, while innumerable links of understanding and mutual confidence have been forged between the Americas.

It is with deep concern, therefore, that we have witnessed an effort now publicly indorsed in the United States by the archbishops and bishops of a sister Christian communion which constitutes a religious minority in this country, to set the relation of Protestant Christianity to Hispanic America in a perspective which does violence both to historical truth and contemporary fact.

Pretension Deplored

We deplore the pretension of the Roman Catholic hierarchy to circumscribe the religious freedom of Protestant Christians in the proclamation of their faith, while by implication reserving for themselves the right to the universal proclamation of their own.

We can imagine no policy more certain to project into the New World the baneful intolerance which is now producing such tragic consequences in the contemporary life of Spain.

We, accordingly, feel it incumbent upon us to make the following simple and plain affirmations:

Points Enumerated

First: The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America stands, and will continue to stand, for the principles of religious liberty and for the rights of religious minorities in the United States and throughout the world.

Second: The churches represented in this council will continue to express solidarity with the national and autonomous Protestant churches in Hispanic America, whose numerous members are loyal and patriotic citizens of the countries where they dwell.

They will also continue to avail themselves of the constitutional freedom which the republics of Hispanic America grant to the representatives of every faith. Their controlling aim in the discharge of their ministry will be, as it has always been, to have a part, however humble, in interpreting the significance of our Lord Jesus Christ for life and thought in those great and growing nations.

Third: We affirm, with full and first-hand knowledge of the facts, that, so far from Protestant institutions and the representatives of Protestant Christianity being a peril to good relations between the Americas, they are today, with some easily explained exceptions, and have been for decades, regarded with great favor by governments and people in the countries where they are located.

Fourth: While obliged by circumstances not of our seeking to make this statement in order to clarify the American Protestant position upon a crucial issue, it is nevertheless the judgment and desire of this council that Protestant and Roman Catholic Christians should combine their influence, in these days of supreme crisis, to work for religious freedom and the other great freedoms, both now and in the postwar world.

Jewry Sets Up New Council Aimed at Unity

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Dec. 11.—Establishment of an American Council for Judaism was announced today by Rabbi Louis Wolsey, provisional chairman, who said the organization "will seek to identify and define the Jew as a member of a religious community and nothing else."

"We plan to make it the largest institution in American Judaism," he said. "We believe the goals of the council represent the views of the vast majority of Jews in the United States."

Rabbi Elmer Berger of Congregation Bethel, Flint, Mich., has accepted appointment as executive director, Rabbi Wolsey said, and is the only permanent officer as yet designated.

Plans for the organization were initiated at a meeting of rabbis in Atlantic City last June, Wolsey said, with "the purpose of combating nationalistic and secularistic trends in Jewish life.

"We are definitely opposed to a Jewish state, a Jewish flag or a Jewish army. We are interested in development of Palestine as a refuge for persecuted Jews but are opposed to the idea of a political state under Jewish domination in Palestine or anywhere else."

Among sponsors of the organization, the provisional chairman said, are Dr. William H. Fineshriber, Philadelphia; Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson, Temple Emanu-El, New York; Dr. David Philipson, Cincinnati; Rabbi Irving Reichert, San Franciso; Dr. Julius Morgenstern, president of the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati; Dr. Leo M. Franklin, Detroit; Dr. Julian B. Feibelman, New Orleans; Dr. Morris Lazaron and Dr. William Roseman, Baltimore; Dr. Edward N. Calisch, Richmond, V.; Dr. David Marx, Atlanta, and Rabbi William Rosenblum and Rabbi Hyman Schlachtel, New York.

Astaire, Hayworth, Barrett Add Up Nicely at the Earle

'You Were Never Lovelier' and Stage Bill Provide Entertainment of High Polish; 'Harebrained Hypnotist' Leads the Shorts

"YOU WERE NEVER LOVELIER." Columbia picturization of a story by Carlos Olivari and Sixto Pondal Rios, adapted to the screen by Michael Fessier, Ernest Pagano and Delmar Daves, costarring Fred Astaire and Rita Hayworth, with Adolph Menjou, Leslie Brooks, Adele Mara, Isobel Elsom, Gus Schilling, Barbara Brown, Douglas Leavitt, Catherine Craig, Kethleen Howard, Mary Field, Larry Parks, Stanley Brown and Xavier Cugat and His Orchestra. Music and lyrics by Jerome Kern and Johnny Mercer; directed by William A. Seiter. At the Earle Theater.

THE TITLE may have no point, aside from its occasional occurrence in lines and lyrics, and the story may be founded on a familiar device—last employed, incidentally, in "Seven Sweethearts"—but Columbia's production of "You Were Never Lovelier," currently on view at the Earle, nevertheless, is executed with such finesse as to take rank among the most engaging musical comedy-dancicals of the season. Especially with Fred Astaire and Rita Hayworth to do the dancing and Xavier Cugat and His Orchestra on hand to do ample justice to the lilting beauty of Jerome Kern's melodious score.

"You Were Never Lovelier," so far as anyone is aware, lays no claim to greatness in content or purpose. It is purely for entertainment of a breezy and featherweight sort, with abundant opportunities for the display of two of the foremost dancing talents now engaging public attention, scenes of Argentinian opulence and a general "escape" from everything but an hour or two of smooth and glossy enjoyment.

Mr. Astaire is cast as a famous American dancer, whose traveler's checks have been exhausted picking the wrong horses at Buenos Aires' swankiest track. Adolphe Menjou, a versatile South American tycoon, among other things, is running a luxury hotel, with a roof resort he cannot personally patronize "because my cover charge is too high," where Xavier Cugat and His Orchestra provide the chief attraction. Mr. Menjou also is engaged in supervising the romantic impulses of his four daughters, who must be married off in order of seniority. Mr. Cugat and Mr. Astaire are old friends from gay days in New York. Miss Hayworth is the daughter who must be married next, before her two younger sisters may consummate their marital aspirations which, at the moment, are very pressing. Mr. Astaire is sorely in need of a job and, as he suddenly discovers, of Miss Hayworth. Miss Hayworth, however, can do nicely without him—she thinks.

Write it yourself from there on.

If the "plot" seems a little threadbare now and again, it is immediately redeemed by an interpolated song, or dance, or both, by Mr. Astaire, or Miss Hayworth, or both—or perhaps by a comedy chore discharged with rare expertness by Mr. Menjou, Mr. Cugat, Mr. Gus Schilling, or all three. By and large, the business gets over pretty handsomely. The score is not by any means Mr. Kern's flashiest, but it is one of his most appropriately and tunefully turned, to match the mood and the quality of exquisiteness that characterizes the entire picture in its every department. There are times, when the costars are not on the scene, when Mr. Menjou comes dangerously near stealing the picture for his own individual and undisputed glory.

Stars at Top of Dancing Form

Astaire may have had more expert partners in his tap routines—although this is open to argument—but never have his ballroom creations been more beautifully aided than by Miss Hayworth, in a series of diaphanous and revelatory gowns that may, after all, have had something to do with the choice of title. In "Shorty George" and the "demonstration" number in which Fred attempts to sell his North American fame to Mr. Menjou by uncorking an office sample of his footwork, the Astaire dancing reaches its peak, if it can be said ever to descend from that exalted point. "Dearly Beloved," "I'm Old Fashioned" and "You Were Never Lovelier" are songs that fit well into the Astaire-Hayworth abilities. This Gus Schilling also is something a little special in the way of a comedian. Leslie Brooks and Adele Mara are splendid as the impatient, younger Acuna girls and Isobel Elsom is both decorative and effective as the friend of the family who innocently precipitates most of the complications. Barbara Brown, Douglas Leavitt, Catherine Craig and Xavier Cugat, both as conductor and actor, contribute well balanced support.

Harry Anger's cleverly devised, new stage revue is notable for far more than the manner of its presentation. It opens with a "circus" episode in which the Roxyettes are an especially engaging group of ringmasters; presents Sheila Barrett as star of a smart night spot; features the Six Willys in an interval of superlative juggling and again offers the Roxyettes in something characteristic of El Morocco. Brief, but uniformly superior, the bill is tightly woven together into a continuous period of delightful diversion that finds Miss Barrett at the high point of her variegated capabilities as a comic satirist who suffers no close rivalry.

The screen supplementaries consist of an especially interesting newsreel and another of those ridiculous Merrie Melodie color cartoons starring that carrot-munching rabbit, under the title of "The Harebrained Hypnotist." Mr. Lombardi's orchestral interlude completes a program of high luster.

RKO-Keith's

The music and comedy which features "Seven Days Leave" has proved so effective that the film is being held over for an additional five days, through Tuesday. Almost every type of entertainment can be found in this story of the soldier on furlough who has one week to marry a specified girl in order to claim his inheritance. Lucille Ball and Victor Mature are the stars, ably assisted by Mapy Cortes, Marcy McGuire, Arnold Stang and Wallace Ford. Peter Lind Hayes contributes some excellent impressions of well known cinema folk and Les Brown and Freddy Martin are on hand to supply the music of their popular orchestras.

Columbia

"For Me and My Gal" augments its already high renown by taking over the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater for a further exercise of its popularity and the abundant talents of Judy Garland, George Murphy and Gene Kelly. Here is the musical that belongs at the top of the season's list. In story, song revivals, dances and all-around performance, it is the pick of the crop. Apart from the superlative work of the stars—and they all three are at their best—it is worth the price of admission just to hear Marta Eggerth sing. And over and above all this, the bill includes the usual grist of diversified short subjects.

Ex-German Sailor Advises Nazi Foes

Hollywood.—Peter Pohlenz has become the sixth technical advisor signed by Warner Brothers for the filming of "Action in the North Atlantic," in which Humphrey Bogart, Raymond Massey, Julie Bishop and Alan Hale have the top roles. An American citizen, Pohlenz fled to this country from his native Germany after serving in the German Navy and will act as consultant on sequences in the picture involving Nazi submarines. Pohlenz also has been technical advisor on "Edge of Darkness."

And They Dance Well Together, Too!

RITA HAYWORTH AND FRED ASTAIRE costarred in Columbia's production of "You Were Never Lovelier," new musical comedy-romance, now on the screen at the Earle Theater. Adolph Menjou is the third stellar member of the cast, which includes Xavier Cugat and His Orchestra to do full justice to Jerome Kern's melodious score. The whole thing comes off very elegantly, indeed

HEDDA HOPPER

Lady Korda May Get It

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 11.—I hear Merle Oberon is up for Smitty in "Cry Havoc." That makes the fifth girl mentioned for the role. Greer Garson can't do it. Understand she didn't want to be in it anyway. Kay Medford is still set for Steve. To me (of course, nobody asked), the perfect casting would be the girls who are playing it on the stage right now. They've not only got the spirit but the teamwork, which is so often lacking in an all-star cast.

NORMA SHEARER

We lost our most popular bachelor when Reggie Gardiner married Nadia Petrovia. Wedding reception was given in Arthur Hornblow's garden. You Easterners will probably hate me, but there we were, under canvas, beside roses in full bloom.

Jack Benny came rushing in to the bridegroom and said, "What a dirty trick! Picking the half hour I'm on the air to get yourself tied up, and robbing me of my best audience!"—as he looked around at the stars.

Norma Shearer looked prettier than she did at her own wedding. She's radiant, and wore her new set of jewelry, which is something—whole floral piecces of yellow sapphires and diamonds.

Cobina Wright, jr., has a star sapphire she couldn't wear in a blackout. Rex St. Cyr accompanied Cobina and her mother to the church. Rex said when he felt something against his back during the ceremony he thought it was Cobina, sr., with a gun, and that she was going to make it a shotgun wedding with him!

Mrs. Jules Stein's has was so outstanding, Mitch Leisen wanted to borrow it for "Lady in the Dark." I just wanted to borrow it.

Ida Lupino shivered and shook as matron of honor. Phyllis Brooks caught the bride's bouquet and said, "There must be a patsy on me. This is the eleventh I've caught. Nothing's happened yet."

Michael Arlen tells me his wife will join him after Christmas. Bubbles Schianasi happy just being back in town.

Collier Young, Goldwyn's story editor, proud that his wife was recalled to her homeland, Canada, to join and help recruit a women's army up there.

When Ronald Colman heard our "10 per centers" (meaning agents) would be without jobs, he said, "Good! Now I can sign up with Mervyn Leroy."

Quentin Reynolds returned to New York to see his dentist. On that commando raid to Dieppe a shell exploded near him on the boat which knocked out his back teeth. However, his famous smile remained intact. And when he saw the little home his wife fixed up for him in River house Quentin remarked, "Roll in my typewriter! I've really got to go to work now to support this."

Janet Blair sure has come up in a hurry. She'll replace Mary Martin on Bing Crosby's show next year.

Those huddles between Buddy De Sylva and Jimmy McHugh are about a producing deal for Jimmy, which would add still another top song writer to the ranks of picture workers.

Guess Johnny Farrow didn't know about our egg shortage when he gave a hard-boiled egg dyed red to every member of the cast on the "China" set. Seems it's an old Chinese custom when a baby's born.

Proving Joseph C. Grew also has a sense of humor, he told me the following story when he was in Hollywood: A tough marine on Guadalcanal, while cleaning out a fox hole, also did in a Jap. So he bundled the Jap over his back, holding him by the feet, and started for the first-aid station. Just as he arrived there he let out a yell of rage, dropped his prisoner, then picked him up, swung him over his head, and threw him as far as he could. His pals said, "What in ——!" "Why, the dirty, yellow son of heaven took a bite out of me and poisoned me!" screamed the marine.

Richard Dix didn't move to town on account of gasoline rationing but because his Topanga canyon home burned during that recent forest fire.

Broadway Glossary

New York, Dec. 11.

CRIME: At the Walton Roof in Philadelphia, a ringsider invited the chorus line and Henny Youngman, the Broadway comic, to his table. There he distributed money to all the girls, and to soldiers within his reach . . . Youngman saw Jerry Foley, a detective, enter the room, and told him: "This guy must've made a killing at the race track. He's giving away dough." Foley followed the man, investigated, and arrested him. Result: The front page New York story of Clifford M. Shoemaker, the Manhattan bank guard, who had absconded with $11,500 and spent most of it in this spree.

KATHRYN GRAYSON

MAPS: In Michael Straight's forthcoming book, "Making This the Last War," the author will tell this story of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. The story came from Tommy Corcoran, who once was Holmes' secretary . . . Justice Holmes collected old maps of the United States. They were uncharted, beyond the known frontiers, except for the inscription: "Terra incognita; hic sunt leones" . . . "But the brave adventurer will find there far more asses than lions," Holmes wrote on one map. "There are few lions in this world."

ENTERPRISE: Francis Albertanti is back in the sports field again publicizing the important sporting events. Albertanti retired, a few years ago, for the security and respectability of a movie job. He became a press agent for Warner Bros. . . . A short time after he began he was summoned to the head office. "Bob Pastor just went 13 rounds with Joe Louis," he was told. "We want a story put out that our star, Wayne Morris, is being matched to fight Pastor" . . . Albertanti got his hat and coat, said "Goodby," and returned to the sports field.

CHATTER: Ganna Walska has written her memoirs and they soon will be published . . . Zimbalist's accompanist, Teddy Saidenberg, and Feuermann's accompanist, John Revner, will become a piano team and will work at Cafe Society Uptown . . . Ernest Hemingway's "The Fifth Column" will be produced in England next month . . . The London News-Chronicle reprinted the December 7 column by Ivy Low Litvinoff which appeared in this space . . . M.-G.-M. bought the screen rights to the United Nations Song—music by Shostakhovitch and lyric by Harold J. Rome—to be used in the next Katherine Grayson film.

WORRY: During a bus ride between the cities he was touring, Benny Goodman heard a rumor that the Nazis had landed 700 parachutists behind the Russian lines in Stalingrad. Goodman, who somehow had missed reading the papers that morning, walked to the front of the bus, where sat a musician who is a reefer smoker. "Did you," Goodman anxiously asked him, "read anything about 700 Nazi parachutists landing behind Stalingrad?" . . . The reefer smoker rolled his eyes, clicked his tongue and replied: "Solid, Jackson."

SHIPMENT: Last month Amon Carter, the Texas publisher who now is in London, cabled his friends, asking them to send 38 smoked turkeys to him, at the Savoy in London. Carter wanted them sent air-express, no matter the cost, for one of the turkeys was to be sent to Buckingham Palace, for Thanksgiving Day. Carter was told that unless there was a priority, the turkeys couldn't be sent via plane. He cabled Sam Rayburn, the Texas Congressman. A priority was given. But then more urgent material replaced the turkeys. "One of these turkeys is for King George," the transport official was warned. "King George," he answered, "needs these guns more."

FAME: Grover Whalen, who went North for the opening of the Alcan Highway, startled the Army cook by getting from him half a cup of cocoa, filling the rest with rum, and describing the concoction as "Breakfast" . . . Whalen was given sleeping quarters in a large room filled with sleeping soldiers. An orderly was sweeping the room. "I'm Whalen," he said, when he realized the cot was intended for him . . . "Yes, sir," said the orderly, a Texan . . . "Whalen. GROVER Whalen," Whalen repeated. The orderly replied: "Yes, sir. That's fine."

These are the tunes to which Congress and official Washington dances—for Barnee of the Shoreham has kept a record of the tunes they requested and which are played whenever they appear within Barnee's range: Donald Nelson, "Jingle, Jangle;" Leon Henderson, "Brazil," the song which the Price Administrator introduced to this country by bringing the arrangements back from Rio; Ed Stettinius, "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody;" Senator Vandenburg of Michigan, "Yankee Rose;" Senator Connally of Texas, "Beer Barrel Polka;" Senator Gillette of Iowa, "Begin the Beguine;" Ambassador Martins of Brazil, "Blue Danube Waltz;" Senator Radcliffe of Maryland, "Only a Rose;" Henry J. Kaiser, "Only Make Believe."

Man-Sized Job

Bob Hope, whose latest screen comedy antics will soon delight his public in "Road to Morocco," visited a hundred Army camps in one month on his recent Northern trip. He covered the Aleutians, Alaska and the State of Washington.

Hollywood—Gray-thatched extra playing role of a priest assisting H. B. Warner in his role of bishop in "Hitler's Children" almost got tonsured. Technical adviser pointed out Catholic priests must be tonsured in Germany, though not in United States. But Producer Edward A. Golden saved extra, said: "It's all right. Hitler won't let them see this picture in Germany."

Full Schedule Of Fun Waits Servicemen

Servicemen on leave in wartime Washington like to have their pants neatly pressed before they attend that USO dance or meet the girl from back home who's just become one of Uncle Sam's warworkers.

Which is why a room on the fourth floor of the Pepsi-Cola Center for Servicemen is one of the most popular haunts of the boys in uniform. There they have three irons and three ironing boards at their disposal, and they're willing to wait in line for this unique service. About 100 to 150 servicemen press their trousers each day, Joe Judge, director of the center, estimates.

Showers also are available at the center, and as many as 1800 men use the service on a weekend day, 300 to 500 on a weekday. Approximately 700 servicemen are shaved daily, another facility the center offers in addition to its canteen.

Civilians Invited

Mere civilians will be able to see what goes on at a USO party if they drop in at the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q Streets Northwest, today, any time between 6 p. m. and midnight.

Hostesses will conduct guests at the "USO In Action" party through the center to look in on typical USO programs, including sports, musicale, fireside weenie roast, art class and dance contest.

Opening of the new USO lounge at the center will also be celebrated tonight, when the newly-appointed staff for the club headed by Philip Scuiff will be introduced. Among the artists to appear on the dedication program will be Margaret Speaks, Metropolitan soprano; Sheila Barrett, famed monologuist; Dancer Tamara, and the Ramblers, folk singers led by Alan Lomax. Two service men will also entertain: Pvt. Maurice Blondi, now at Fort Belvoir, who will give a few "cartoon chalk talks," and Corpl. Virgil Fox, pianist and organist at Bolling Field.

Officials to Be Present

The program, which will begin at 9 p. m., will be preceded by a reception, when guests will be greeted by Army, Navy, USO and Jewish Welfare Board officials, including Brig. Gen. John T. Lewis, commanding general of the Washington Military District; Comdr. W. F. Lowenthal, aide to the commandant of the Washington Navy Yard, Sidney F. Taliaferro, chairman of the USO Council of Washington; John Schoolcraft, USO area representative; Frank T. Weil, USO vice president and president of the Jewish Welfare Board; Burnett Siman, acting president of the Jewish Community Center, and Morris Cafritz and William Bush, cochairman of the Army and Navy committee of the J. W. B., and Moritz Gottlieb and E. J. Landow, J. W. B. officials.

As the first step in experimentation with school gymnasiums for housing of servicemen on weekends, 60 beds will be available to soldiers at Stuart Junior High School, 400 E Street Northeast, tonight. Representatives of the servicemen's lodging committee, Board of Education and Welfare and Recreation Association, will be on hand to greet the first soldiers who register for the service. Registration begins at 6 p. m.

The Covenant Presbyterian Church, Seventeenth Street and Connecticut Avenue Northwest, will also offer housing facilities for uniformed men tonight. Fifteen cots have been donated by the Plaza Hotel, and 20 more will be added next weekend. Eventually facilities for bedding 75 men are anticipated.

Approximately 2139 beds will be available to service men this weekend, 100 of which are in the Memorial Bridge area. Hope of at least 200 more cots within the next month is expressed by Grover Hartman, acting chairman of the Service Men's Lodging Committee.

Activities for servicemen in the District today include:

Dinner, N. C. C. S., USO Club, 918 Tenth Street Northwest, 4 p. m.

Dinner, Fellowship House, 3563 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, near Wisconsin Avenue, 6:30 p. m., with dancing following. Games, refreshments and dancing, 9 p. m. to midnight, USO Club, Salvation Army, 606 E Street Northwest. Tour of city, meets in rotunda of the National Gallery of Art at 2 p. m. Tour will close with supper and dancing, games, 3 p. m. to midnight, National Catholic Community Service Club, 918 Tenth Street Northwest. Two orchestras. Dinner party, 5:30 p. m., Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 North Carolina Avenue. Dancing, 6:30 p. m. and 9 p. m., Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q Streets Northwest. Dinner-dance, Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest, 6:30 p. m. Dinner, 6:30 p. m., Fellowship Recreation Services, Almas Temple, K Street near Thirteenth Street Northwest. Dancing, 7:30 p. m., Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest. Party, 8 p. m., St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, Connecticut Avenue above Florida Avenue Northwest. Woman Held For Assault On Teacher

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 11.—A woman teacher was beaten in her Brooklyn classroom today, less than 24 hours after the New York Teachers' Guild revealed it had appealed to the police against terrorism in the schools.

Police said a Negro woman entered the 5A classroom of Mrs. Zelda Meisels at Public School 93 shortly after school opened and pummeled the teacher with her fists and handbag. A few hours later Mrs. Alice Thompson, 28, stepmother of 10-year-old Rudolph Thompson, one of Mrs. Meisels' pupils, was arrested on a felonious assault charge.

Mrs. Meisels, too severely beaten to remain in school, was taken to her home by the assistant principal and, upon the advice of a board of education physician, police refrained from questioning her.

Police reported that Mrs. Thompson admitted "losing her head" and beating the teacher. They quoted her as saying the teacher kicked her stepson yesterday and when she went to school to protest, Mrs. Meisels laughed at her.

Authorities said Mrs. Thompson wanted to make a countercharge against the teacher and was told she would have the opportunity at her arraignment in felony court tomorrow.

Teachers, individually and through their organizations, have complained for months of violence in the schools, particularly in underprivileged sections of the city. Only two months ago Irwin Goodman was shot and killed in another Brooklyn school by two former students he had reprimanded.

Mayor Puts Discipline Up to School Principals

New York, Dec. 11 (INS).—New York City teacher groups, demanding police protection after what they termed "a series of incidents which vary in gravity from outright murder to mere threat," tonight were told by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia that principals alone are responsible for public school discipline.

The mayor branded the campaign for police aid as "a drive by pressure groups" whose statements he described as "exaggerations and even willful misstatements."

"I want to make it clear," said the Mayor, "that the policy of my administration is not to permit the use of policemen's night-sticks for the disciplining of children in our schools."

LaGuardia declared charges contained in a plea by the New York Teachers' Guild to Police Commissioner Lewis Valentine for police aid do not "represent the viewpoint of the overwhelming number of principals and teachers of our school system nor existing conditions in our schools."

Estate Willed to Family

The will of Herbert G. McMaster of Silver Spring, which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville, bequeaths personal effects and chattels to his son, John L. McMaster, and the residue in equal shares to his sons, Herbert and John, and daughter, Emmogene, and sister-in-law, Katie McCall. John L. McMaster is named executor. The will was executed January 6, 1940. It does not indicate the value of the estate.

Store Broke Price Rulings, OPA Charges

The Office of Price Administration yesterday obtained a temporary order from the District Court restraining the Woodward & Lothrop department store from selling goods for more that the prescribed ceiling prices.

Justice Matthew F. McGuire granted the order upon the affidavits and complaint filed by the OPA which charged price violations in six lines of goods. The order will be effect until Monday, when the store's side of the case will be heard during argument on the OPA petition for a temporary injunction.

"We are not making a statement on the case," W. W. Everett, Woodward & Lothrop president, told The Post after the suit was filed. He added that the store's officials were in conference with their counsel, Ben W. Parker, who is a member of the board of directors.

Lester Kaplan, OPA investigator, said in a sworn statement filed with the complaint, that he found goods sold for more than ceiling prices in the infants wear, luggage, women's underthings, hosiery, blanket and sheet and furniture departments.

Kaplan and John A. Fath, OPA senior business specialist, said that in many departments the posted ceiling prices were not clearly visible. Fath said in some cases no ceiling prices were posted.

Among specific violations charged were sale of hose for $1.35 when 98 cents was the ceiling price, rayon slips for $2.25 instead of $1.95 and blankets for $8.95 instead of $7.95.

The store was the second here arraigned by the OPA, a restraining order having been directed to the Hecht Co. earlier in the week. The Hecht hearing was set for yesterday, but the store asked and was given a postponement until December 22.

U. S. Releases Regulations on Yule Bonuses

By the Associated Press

Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy Helvering announced today four conditions under which white-collar workers may receive Christmas or yearend bonuses.

Bonuses may be paid without the commission's approval provided:

1. The amount to be paid in 1942 is not greater than the amount paid to the same employe or an employe occupying the same position in 1941.

2. The employer had entered into an enforceable contract with the employe before October 3, 1942 to pay him in 1942 (a) a bonus of a specified amount or (b) a bonus calculated in a specified manner the amount of which was determinable on or before October 3, 1942.

3. It has been the settled policy of the employer for at least two years to pay bonuses calculated on a fixed percentage of the salary of each of the employers of any group provided the fixed percentage is not increased in 1942. An increase in the amount of any employe's bonus due to an increase in his salary during 1942 without any change in the percentage will not be in violation of this rule.

4. The bonus or other additional compensation is based on a fixed percentage of an employe's individual sales provided the rate of such payment was fixed before October 3, 1942.

Furnished Homes to Sell For $1500 Envisioned by Kaiser

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 11.—A brand-new three-room home, completely furnished, and the price—just $1500.

That's part of Henry J. Kaiser's far-seeing program of planning for the future so that the postwar years will not find America in economic collapse with millions of unemployed.

Wartime prosperity has brought a higher standard of living to millions of Americans, and these people cannot be allowed to drift back into their old way of life, the master shipbuilder said in an interview.

"We've got millions of new homes to build after the war. What kind of homes? What will they look like? How will they be built?

"We've got to sit down and figure that out, and start doing it now."

Kaiser said he was working on plans for constructing for Mr. and Mrs. Postwar America a prefabricated steel home of three rooms, insulated with glass wool, fully furnished, and equipped with all sanitary and disposal facilities, the house would be priced at just $1500.

Such a house, he pointed out could be erected by eight men in one day, and could readily be taken apart and moved to a new location.

Kaiser figures to utilize his pet system of prefabrication with which his huge West Coast shipyards turn out merchantmen at a sizzling pace.

Giant sections of the ship manufactured elsewhere in the yard, are hoisted to the way and welded into place. A few finishing touches, and the ship goes down the ways. Prefabrication means a terrific speed-up in production.

"If people can be told facts like these and if they can start depositing now for things they'll want some day," Kaiser said, "there will be less inflation, more war bonds sold and an incentive to industry to keep their employes, hire more and increase their production instead of running into a world-wide disaster."

Cheddar Cheese Subsidy Plan Starts Job of Boosting Output

The Department of Agriculture said yesterday its subsidy program designed to encourage a greater production of American chedar cheese to meet war needs went into effect Wednesday.

Under the program, processors are paid 3¾ cents a pound on all grades of American cheddar cheese. They must pass this on to farmers supplying milk for cheese production.

The subsidy makes it possible, the department said, to retain a price ceiling of 23¼ cents a pound set on such cheese by the Office of Price Administration.

The subsidy program was announced November 30 in connection with the department's 1943 farm production goals.

Under the program, the Government will purchase all the American cheese delivered by processors on the basis of 27 cents per pound (at Plymouth, Wis.) and sell it back to the processors immediately at a price 3¾ cents per pound below the purchase price, or 23¼ cents a pound, Plymouth basis. The transaction will be made without physical transfer of the cheese.

An extra ¼-cent per pound will be paid on cheese having a moisture content of 35¼ per cent or less so that factories will be encouraged to produce low moisture cheese that keeps best under difficult storage and shipping conditions.

"The main purpose of the program," the department said, "is to allow cheese factories to pay farmers a price that will attract milk to the factories, and at the same time, avoid an increase in cheese prices to consumers."

World Union Discussed at G.W.U. Parley

Dr. Esther C. Brunauer of the American Association of University Women, told delegates to the Tenth Annual High School Debate Conference yesterday that a federal world government should be established after the war.

Efforts are already under way among different groups within the United Nations to have the idea adopted, declared Dr. Brunauer at the conference held in George Washington University Hall of Government. One plan, she stated, is to set up inside the United Nations an executive council to promote a world union.

For such a world government, she asserted, "all nations will sacrifice a degree of their sovereignty for a higher standard of living and permanent peace."

Opposing the proposal for the world government plan was Dr. Philip M. Brown, president of the American Peace Society, who suggested that instead nations work through regional groups, holding conferences and appointing commissions to iron out difficulties.

"The success of peace lies not in a government that tells everybody what to do but in education—especially among the Europeans," declared Dr. Brown.

Breaking up into small groups led by educators, the delegates discussed the affirmative and negative sides of the question and will present their arguments at 9:45 a. m. today.

Discussion leaders were Dr. Edward C. Acheson, Dr. William C. Johnstone, Dr. John A. Tillema, and Dr. Warren Reed West, all of George Washington University; Dr. Brunauer; and Dr. Brown and Howard S. LeRoy, director of the American Peace Society. More than 200 students attended the conference.

Plan to Unshackle Prisoners of War Weighed in Berlin

London, Dec. 11 (AP).—The Berlin radio broadcast a D. N. B. announcement today that a Swiss government proposal for unshackling German and British war prisoners was receiving "friendly attention" in Berlin.

The broadcast added that until the final German attitude was available, the Wilhelmstrasse would be unable to make any official comment.

The Nazi statement followed upon British and Canadian announcements that German prisoners, fettered in reprisal for like action taken by the enemy, would be unshackled Saturday, two days earlier than the date mentioned by the Swiss.

Germany initiated the manacelings after charging that the British bound the hands of prisoners taken at Dieppe and in raids on Sark Island.

President Kept Navy on Volunteer Basis, He Reveals

President Roosevelt revealed yesterday for the first time that because of pure sentiment on his part the Navy had tried to get along on voluntary enlistments instead of relying on Selective Service for its men.

The President, replying to press conference questions, had said he did not think an order banning voluntary enlistments of men 18 to 37, inclusive, would hurt the drive for new Navy personnel. He said he thought those who expressed a desire for Navy assignment would generally get their wish fulfilled.

Back in the First World War, when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, the Navy relied on volunteers at his suggestion, Mr. Roosevelt said, and got 515,000 men.

At his suggestion the same plan was followed until Navy strength reached one million men, he commented, but then the time came when he had to discard sentiment.

Zionist Gap Seen In Kirstein Passing

The death in Boston Thursday of Louis E. Kirstein, prominent American Jewish leader, yesterday was described as "a grievous loss to the entire Jewish people and to the cause of the Jewish Homeland in Palestine in which he was vitally interested.

"His passing," said Judge Louis E. Levinthal, president of the Zionist Organization of America, "leaves a gap in the ranks of American Jewish leadership which it is becoming increasingly difficult to fill. He was one of the school of Felix Warburg and Louis Marshall, champions of their people and friends of Zionism, though perhaps closer to the Zionist movement than either of the two."

RIGHT AROUND HOME — BY DUDLEY FISHER

HIYA, SAMPSON! D'YOU WANT TO SEE OUR NEW TRICK?
SHUT YOUR EYES!
WAIT UP, GRANDPA! YOU DROPPED A NICKEL!
AFTER THIS NO TRICKS, UNLESS I TELL YOU!

JOE PALOOKA — Perfect Salutes — BY HAM FISHER

WELL, WARDEN— THESE NAZIS SEEM TO HAVE BEEN WELL TRAINED IN AMERICAN AND BRITISH SALUTES.
H'INDEED THEY DO, CAPTAIN. NEVER SAW SUCH BRAZEN H'IMITATIONS!!
YOU! DO YOU SPEAK ENGLISH?
YESSIR—IF THE CAPTAIN WILL ALLOW ME, SIR— I'D LIKE T'SHOW MY IDENTIFICATION TAG, SIR— I'M P.F.C. JOE PALOOKA, COMPANY— ETC., ETC.

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

JANE ARDEN — Signal — BY MONTE BARRETT and RUSSELL ROSS

OUR GERMAN PAPERS GOT US PAST THE OTHER BORDER GUARDS— BUT HOW ABOUT THESE? THIS IS DIFFERENT!
TURN YOUR CAR LIGHTS BRIGHT— THEN DIM— THEN BRIGHT AGAIN!
WHAT? NO PASSPORTS?
THESE ARE BRITISH REFUGEES, CAPTAIN— OUR GOVERNMENT WILL VOUCH FOR THEM—
MOST IRREGULAR!
POLITICAL REFUGEES— THE BRITISH CONSUL WILL POST BOND UNTIL THEIR PASSPORTS ARE IN ORDER!
WHO IS HE?
THOSE LIGHTS WERE THE SIGNAL—WE'RE IN FRIENDLY HANDS!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:30 P.M. Today—WOL — BY JERRY SIEGEL and JOE SHUSTER

MAKE HIM STOP TALKING!
YOU HEARD ME! YOU'RE HEADED FOR DESTRUCTION AND THE SOONER YOUR FOLLOWERS GIVE YOU THE GATE, THE BETTER IT WILL BE FOR THEM!
GUARDS! DRAG THIS BABBLING OLD FOOL BACK TO THE CONCENTRATION CAMP!
GET GOING!
LET ME GO!
AND MY PERSONAL ORDERS ARE THAT HE BE TAUGHT A LESSON! ROUGH HIM UP!
IF THERE'S ANY ROUGHING-UP TO BE DONE, I'LL DO IT NOW!
OH ME! MOST UNHAPPY DAY FOR AXIS GENTLEMENS!
YOULP!
GULP! OF COURSE I WAS ONLY KIDDING!

Funeral Today For Dr. Howe, Noted Chemist

Funeral services for Dr. Harrison E. Howe, 61, one of the best-known members of the American chemical profession, who died Thursday night at his home, 2702 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest, will be held at 2 p. m. today in Gawler's funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. Burial will be private.

Editor for the last 21 years of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, the publication of the American Chemical Society, and recipient on November 6 of the Chemical Industry Medal of 1942, Dr. Howe long had been prominent in the chemical field, about which he wrote widely.

In addition to articles and books about his profession, he also was coauthor of six nature and science readers for school children and a trustee of Science Service, a news agency.

Outside of his profession, he was known chiefly to Washingtonians for his activities in Rotary. He was a former president of the local club, a former governor of the Thirty-fourth District, which embraces Washington, and in 1936-37 was named a director of Rotary International. In 1937 he and Mrs. Howe attended the convention of Rotary International in Nice, France.

A native of Georgetown, Ky., Dr. Howe studied at Earlham College and the University of Michigan, and held honorary degrees from the University of Rochester, Southern College, Rose Polytechnic Institute and the South Dakota State School of Mines.

He served two terms as director of the American Institute of Chemical Engineering; represented that body for 10 years on the American Engineering Council, and was a member of the advisory board of the Lalor Foundation.

Dr. Howe is survived by his wife, Mrs. May M. Howe; two daughters, Mrs. Oscar A. Provost of Washington and Mrs. Frank B. Clinton, Chevy Chase, Md., and a sister, Mrs. Jeannette Wilson of Richmond, Ind.

Mrs. McNamee, Lifelong Resident Of D. C., Dies at 84

Mrs. Joanna Cecilia McNamee of 1208 North Capitol Street, who lived in Washington all of her 84 years, died yesterday morning at her home after an illness of about two and a half years. She had never recovered her health fully after an injury to a hip that had confined her to her home.

One of her two sons, the Rev. Stephen F. McNamee, S. J., dean of the College of Arts and Sciences of Georgetown University, will officiate at the requiem mass that will be celebrated for her in St. Aloysius Catholic Church on Monday at 10 a. m. The other son is Francis Aloysius McNamee, an inspector in the District Highway Department.

Mrs. McNamee, whose family name was Lenihan, was born here August 26, 1859, her parents having come to this country from Ireland. Although a young child during the Civil War, she had keen recollection of the years after that war and also of the Spanish-American and first World War.

She was the widow of Thomas Bernard McNamee, a detective sergeant on the Washington Police Force for many years, who died in 1934. A brother, John J. Lenihan, with whom she lived, also survives her.

Mrs. McNamee was active in St. Aloysius parish work until the late years of her life. Following the funeral services at the church on Monday burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

H. M. Packard Funeral Rites Set Monday

Harry M. Packard, a well-known figure in District land title, building, insurance and financial circles since 1894, died at his home, 1718 Varnum Street, yesterday morning.

Mr. Packard was born in Washington and moved to Warren, Ohio, shortly afterward. He returned to the city when he was 18 to study law at Georgetown University, and became active in the title business in 1894, when he participated in the organization of the Lawyer's Title Co. The company has grown into the Lawyer's and District Title Companies, of which he was secretary and treasurer.

In addition to his position in the title company, Mr. Packard was vice president of the National Permanent Building Association, treasurer of the American Fire Insurance Co. and a director of the Northern Liberty Building Association. He was member of the Society of Natives and of the District Elks Lodge.

Surviving is his widow, Mrs. Mae Packard.

An Elk memorial service will be held at the S. H. Hines funeral home at 7 p. m. tomorrow and funeral services will be held at the funeral home at 11 a. m. Monday.

Mrs. J. T. Kennedy Funeral Services Set for Monday

Mrs. Barbara L. (Belle) Kennedy, widow of J. Thomas Kennedy, died yesterday in Providence Hospital at the age of 70.

Mrs. Kennedy, who was a daughter of the late Frank J. Wagner, former chief of the District Fire Department, and Mrs. Wagner, lived at 930 Emerson Street Northwest.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Harry L. McQueen and Mrs. Robert Berberich; one brother, William J. Wagner; two sons, J. Thomas Kennedy, jr., superintendent of the department of weights, measures and markets of the District, and Frank A. Kennedy of the sewagee treatment division of the District government.

Funeral services will be held from the Saffell funeral home, 475 H Street Northwest, at 8:30 a. m. Monday followed by requiem mass at 9 a. m. in the Immaculate Conception Church.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborne

A question on bidding is asked by Pvt. J. S. T. of Fort Dix, N. J. He writes: "At a friend's home the other night during a friendly rubber-bridge game, I held a hand which I found difficult to bid. This wa my holding, sitting South:

♠ K 9 8
◇ Q 10 6 5
♣ Q 8 6 5

North	East	South	West
2 ♡	2 ♠	?	—

"I really had quite a time picking a response. I was afraid to bid a weak minor suit; I hated to say two no trump, as this was the minimum response, and I hesitated to pass, as I held some strength. I finally chose the last as the least of three evils.

"Partner jumped to four hearts, which was set one trick, although, sad to relate, three no trump could be made all the time with our hands. What should I have said over the two-spade call?"

With a weaker hand, our friend would pass, for the intervening bid by East assures North another chance to bid. With almost one and a half high-card tricks and a stopper in the adversary's suit, however, South's proper response is two no trump. He need not fear that his partner will read this as a weak minimum response, as it is a free bid.

The declarer on today's deal made 11 tricks at five hearts by an unusual play, giving up 1 trick in a side suit, which he might have won, to avoid losing 2 in another. When West opened the diamond queen, South, of course, could ruff in dummy, as he had a wealth of trumps. There was nothing to fear from the trumps adversely held, as two rounds would draw them even if one hand was void. However, a ruff would do no good. South still would be left with at least one club loser and possibly two. He could not afford to give up more than one club, as one spade trick also must be lost.

Instead of ruffing the diamond queen, therefore, declarer discarded a small club from dummy. East won with the ace and returned a club. This trick was won with dummy's ace, East's two trumps were drawn and the remaining club in dummy was discarded on the established diamond king.

Declarer then played a spade, but this was the last trick the defenders could take. South won the remaining tricks by a cross-ruff. He ruffed two clubs and two diamonds in dummy and three spades in the closed hand for 11 tricks, losing only a spade and a diamond.
